This research discussed about evaluating the quality of top techniques in the teaching of writing book as the references in writing course. It aimed to analize the quality of the book whether the book has strength or weakness as the references in writing course for students.

The research method was descriptive, types of data being obtained was qualitative. The instrument of this research was assessment of rubrics to facilitate researcher in evaluating the book of "Top Techniques in the Teaching of Writing ". This assessment rubric was created by the researcher. The book evaluated by using common criteria, whether the textbook was motivating and meaningfull, autentic and appropriate ,graphic and graded , literatur and intergrated, and contextualized and creative. The objective of this research are to find out the quality of English book to describe the weaknesses English book used at the students, to describe the strengths English book used at the students.

The result of the research showed about weaknesses and strengths the use of book, there are many factors influence the weaknesses and strength of the book, the factors influence weakness of the book are about layout, not included with CD, etc. The factors influence the strengths of the book are about grammar, vocabulary, exercise, the tasks move from simple to complex, etc. The researcher suggested to the authors should design the book more interesting, to minimized reading text in the book suitable with the students need.

Based on the result of this research, the researcher conclude that the book of "Top Techniques in the Teaching Writing" has many strenghnesses in teaching writing because the book was attractive, motivating and meaningfull, autentic and appropriate ,graphic and graded , literatur and intergrated, and contextualized and creative. And the researcher recommendate the book as reference in teaching writing.

By knowing the quality of the books that serve as a reference or guide in the learning process of the students can be easier for students to choose or look for a book that is suitable for use. Thus it is very important person knows only too well the quality of the book that will serve as a guide or as a first step if someone wants to buy a book that the book is too well to suit our needs

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

A.   Background

In education today, many books that are used by different teachers in this case a lot of books or references a ire less attracted attention that causes students to learn them less. The first is a lot of vocabulary that is poorly understood by students. The second is not compatible with students. The third choice of words that is less precise and less attractive, which creates a feeling lazy to read it, and the thickness of the books that readers have become lazy.

As we know that the students need a perfect book, but many teachers still used an inappropriate book. There are many factors why the teachers still use it. First, the teacher just took learning material from the internet. Second, we often encounter teachers who are lazy looking for a book and only use the book provided from school. Third, many teachers do not consider the conditions of their students. As a teacher it is important for them to evaluate, select, and adapt teaching materials to meet their teaching and student learning needs in order to maximize learning potentials.

As we have seen the significance of evaluating textbooks, we are now concerned with the ways we evaluate term and the criteria we follow in the process of evaluation. Sheldon (1988) maintains that since no one set of criteria is applicable to all different situations, we can only commit ourselves to checklist or scoring system. The evaluation textbook consists of a list of factors such as rationale, availability, layout etc. And rating (poor, fair, good, excellent), then, comments will be given in the corresponding space by the evaluator. The whole process of textbook assessment is inevitably a subjective activity.

To avoid the danger of allowing subjective factors influence judgment in the early, stage of analysis, Hutchinson and Waters (1987: 97) emphasize the importance of objectivity in evaluation. In this case, evaluation is basically a matching process: matching needs to available solutions. If this matching is to be done as objectively as possible, it is best to look at the needs and solutions separately, thus they divide the evaluation, process into four major steps; 1) defining criteria; 2) subjective analysis; 3) objective analysis; and 4) matching.

The necessity to analyze and evaluate the textbook is imposed by the fact that it is used on a large national scale, it is recently developed and its strengths or weaknesses have a high impact on the textbook at the third grade "learning of English. The analysis of the textbook would yield insights as to its suitability; whether it actually does what it claim to be doing and whether it accomplishes its set goals. It is therefore important to examine whether it corresponded to the learners" needs of the particular situation, whether it promotes communicative language, learner autonomy, made use of problem solving approaches and whether it allows for differentiate instructions. It is beyond doubt that the English language has become the center of communication all over the world. In fact, it is one of the reasons why English is taught as a foreign language in many countries. As a matter of the fact, it has already become a medium of communication in many educational settings such as public schools as well. It has been taught so as to help learners to keep up with the recent advances and developments of the time in science and technology.

Through the process of evaluating some revelations have emerged, first, by evaluating the teaching material teachers can understand more about language learning and give rise to new concepts and ideas, which in turn contribute to the adjustment, modification and eventual improvement of their own teaching. Second, materials evaluation appears to be a rather complicated matter it that so many criteria need to be taken into account, and subjectivity will more or less Influence our judgment. Third, we need to have the right attitudes towards textbooks. It has observed the textbook are not masters but servants, we should not regard a textbook as an absolute authority and depend on it too much, but rather, take whatever is beneficial to teaching, learning and adapt, complement or modify what's not satisfactory. In this way we are making use of the textbooks to achieve our own purpose. As we have seen from this paper, the textbooks have problems of various kinds.

A lot of problems need to be done on the part of the teacher to exert their creativity and imagination in bringing out the most effective results of teaching and learning. The textbooks will be totally suited to a particular teaching situation. The teacher will have to find his own way of using it and adapting it if necessary. So we should not be looking for the perfect book which meets all our requirements, but rater for the best possible fit between what the book offers and what we as teachers and students need. So that's why the researcher take up the problem, through her paper entitled. "Evaluating the Quality of 'Top Techniques in the Teaching of Writing' Book as the Reference in Writing Course".

B. Problem Statements

Based on the issue discussed previously, the problem statement of this research is formulated as follows:

CHAPTER II

REVIEW OF RELATED LITERATURE

A. Review of Previous Research Studies

Research conducted by Indah (2013) about Analysis of Indonesian Course Book Quality for High Level Class Used in SDN 2 Centre, Curup District 2012/2013. This research aimed to investigate the quality of Indonesian course book in high level class at SDN 2, Curup 2012/2013. Method applied in this research was evaluative descriptive mixed method. The result indicated from appropriateness and reading level, from the content of view, there were only two books which belong to good category books so called 'Inilah Indonesiaku (Class IV and VI), three other books had sufficient category. To compare with my research while Indah issued about the quality of Indonesian course book and it was a general evaluating, my own research discussed about the quality of top techniques in the teaching writing book as the references in writing course, and it was specific evaluating.

The research conducted by Mulyaningsih (2010) about quality of Book "Understanding Indonesian Language for SMK in Technique Electro, and technique Machine". This study aims to describe and to explain: 1) the level of legibility of the book, 2) the balance of the learning aspects, such as the four language skills in the book, 3) the linkage of language skills contained in the book, 4) the suitability of the contents with the applicable curriculum, and 5) Indonesian language teacher perceptions of the book. From these studies we can conclude that 1) the level of legibility of the MBI SMK book in SMKN 1 Miri grade X is 30.43%, grade XI is 31.10%, and 42.43% for grade XII. It means, the level of legibility for grade X and XI is low, while it is legible for grade XII. 2) The aspects of language learning in the book is not balance for there is a lack of linguistic learning, conversation skills, listening skills, and appreciation of literature. 3) The aspects of learning in MBI SMK book do not have strong links. The only binding aspects of learning are the theme. 4) MBI SMK book has not yet fulfilled the standard of KTSP. KTSP uses multi strategy approach, multimedia learning resources, appropriate technology, and also utilizes the environment as a learning resource, while this book does not. 5) According to the perceptions of the teachers, MBI SMK book is categorized less. It can be seen from the pattern of the preparation of which does not meet the defined criteria; the order and the structure are not systematic, the content does not comply with the required curriculum, the development of the subject matter and the themes are narrow and shallow, the language used is inappropriate, and also there is a lack of pictures as supporting media of reading. To compare with my research while Mulyaningsih issued about quality of Book "Understanding Indonesian Language for SMK in Technique Electro" it was special for machine book while my own research discussed about the quality of top techniques in the teaching writing book as the references in writing course, and it was not a machine book but it was a teaching book, but both of these reesearcher has the same aim, evaluate the quality of the book.

B.   Some Pertinent Ideas

1.   The Concept of Evaluating

An English textbook has an essential role in English as a Foreign Language (EFL) classrooms. The use of English textbooks has a prominent merit for both teachers and students. Harmer (207) states that the most important aspect of textbook use is for teachers to try to engage students with the content they are going to be dealing with. According to Yulianti (2011) a textbook is an instructional material which consists of content and material of the subject that is well organized in written form and has a great contribution in the teaching and learning process. A textbook is the complete package of English skills and components that helps teachers and learners as their source of materials and exercises in EFL learning.

According to Hutchinson and Waters (1987) cited in Sheldon (1988) text book evaluation is basically a straightforward, analytical matching process: matching needs to available solution'. Textbook evaluation is a process of choosing what textbook to use in particular course considering the need and value of teaching. The purpose of text book evaluation is to support the teacher development and help teachers in order to gain good and useful insights into the nature of material (Cunningsworth: 1995). In short, the goal of textbook analysis is to decide on 'best of the best' material functioning as framework and resource of EFL teaching.

Evaluation is a systematic determination of a subject's merit, worth and significance, using governed criteria by a set of standards. It can assist an organization, program, project or any other intervention or initiative to assess any aim, realizable concept/proposal, or any alternative, to help in making decision; or to ascertain the degree of achievement or value in regard to the aim and objectives and results of any such action that has been completed. The primary purpose of evaluation, in addition to gaining insight into prior or existing initiatives, is to enable reflection and assist in the identification of future change.

a. Types of Evaluating

Evaluation is the process of examining a program or process to determine what's working, what's not and why. It determines the value of learning and training programs and acts as blueprints for judgment and improvement. (Rossett, Sheldn: 2001). Evaluation are normally divided into two categories, they are:

1) Formative Evaluation

Formative evaluation is also useful in analyzing learning materials, student learning and achievements, and teacher effectiveness. Formative evaluation is primarily a building press which accumulates a series of components of new materials, skills, and problems into an ultimate meaningful whole Whali Guyot (1978).

Thus, formative evaluations are basically done on the fly. They permit the designer, learners, instructors, and managers to monitor how well the instructional goals and objectives are being met. Its main purpose is to catch deficiencies so that the proper learning interventions can take place that allows the learners to master the required skills and knowledge.

2) Summative Evaluation

Summative evaluation (sometimes referred to as external) is a method of judging the worth of a program at the end of the program activities (summation). The focus is on the outcome.

All assessments can be summative (i.e., have the potential to serve a summative function), but only some have the additional capability of serving formative functions (Scriven: 1967).

This type of evaluation is given at the end of the course or unit of instructions to find out which student, what extent has mastered the intended learning outcomes.

3) Diagnostic Evaluation

This type of evaluation is concerned with finding out the reasons for student's persistent or recurring learning difficulties that cannot be resolved by standard corrective measures or formative evaluation.

b. Evaluating of The Book

An evaluating of the book, tells not only what is in a book, but also what a book attempts to achieve and how it can be used. To discuss the uses of a book, you must explore your own reactions, for these reactions reveal how you have responded to the book. Thus, in writing an evaluating of the book, the researcher combines the skills of describing what is on the page, analyzing how the book tries to achieve its purpose, and expressing your own reactions. The nature and length of the analyzing depend on the book, the purpose of the review, and the anticipated audience (Berkley).

2. The Concept of Quality

The standard of something as measured against other things of a similar kind; the degree of excellence of something (Berkley).

a. Quality of Book

Excellent - a book that is new. Yes, old books can be rated new if they were packaged and stored well. The dust jacket (the paper cover of hardback books) will be crisp and colors bright without tears or marks; the edges and spine will be clean, straight with no bends and pages will be clean and crisp. If it is a soft cover, the cover will have no bends or tears, nor there signs of shelf wear.

Very Good - a book that is close to being new-like but has a few blemishes. Perhaps the corners of the hardback are bent, or the price sticker was clipped inside. Normal shelf wear will reduce a book from truly new-like appearance, but will still be a fine book to read and retain. It is common to grade a book as very well when only the dust jacket has minor blemishes such as small tears.

Good - a book shows wear (and maybe tears). There may be library markings, damage to a few pages, or very soiled cover. A book that comes from a smoker's house is sometimes rated as good due to residual smells. I know collectors that purchase "good" books to lend to friends so they don't have to lend their prized quality ones.

Fair - the book is all there, but perhaps there are crayon marks on the cover or inside pages, the pages have been underlined in ink, or the soft cover has been significantly torn. "Fair" books frequently have been heavily used. A book with water damage on numerous pages is generally classified as fair. Fair quality books can be a great bargain.

Poor - generally means the book is not really in readable condition - pages may be loose or missing, cover severally damaged. These books often are purchased for repurposing such as covers for new paper journals, pictures and illustrations for art projects.

b. The Concept Of Book

A book is a set of written, printed, illustrated, or blank sheets, made of ink, paper, parchment, or other materials, fastened together to hinge at one side. A single sheet within a book is a leaf, and each side of a leaf is a page. A set of text-filled or illustrated pages produced in electronic format is known as an electronic book, or e-book. Books may also refer to work of literature, or a main division of s such a work. In library and information science, a book is called a monograph,   to   distinguish   it   from   serial periodicals such as magazines, journals or newspapers. The body of all written works including book is literature. In novels and sometimes other types of books (for example, biographies), a book may be divided into several large sections, also called books (Book 1, Book 2, Book 3, and so on). An avid reader of book is a bibliophile or coll oquial, bookworm. Assessment criteria textbook covers several aspects, 1. Textbooks are to be attracted to children, the students who use it. 2. Textbooks are to be able to motivate the students who use it 3. Textbooks shall contain illustrations that captivate the students who use it. 4. Textbooks it being understood considering the aspects of linguistics, so in accordance with the ability of the students who use it 5. The contents of the textbook should be closely related to other subjects; better still if it can support it with a plan, so everything is a determination is intact and unified. 6. Textbooks are to be able to stimulate, stimulate private activities of the students who use it. 7. Textbooks are to be conscious and decided to avoid concepts vague and unusual, so as not to confuse the students could use 8. Textbooks it must have a point of view or "point of view" a clear and unequivocal so that also eventually became the point of view of its users loyal. 9. Textbooks are to be able to provide stabilization, emphasis on the values of children and adults. 10. Textbooks are to be able can appreciate the personal differences of the students who use it (Greene 1971).

c. The Important of Role of Textbooks in the EFL Classroom

A textbook can be referred to as a published book specially designed to help language learners to improve their abilities (Sheldon: 1987). In addition to being a learning instrument, textbooks are also used as a supporting teaching instrument. The student's book usually comes with other materials such a workbook, a teacher's book, or even additional multimodal text for a reference as a textbook package (Masuohara & Tomlinson: 2008). They are "designed to give cohesion to the language teaching and learning process by providing direction, support, and specific language-based activities aimed at offering classroom activities for students" (Mares: 2003) and foster effective and quick learning of the language (Cunningsworth: 1995).

The widespread use of textbooks in different ELT context requires little further explanation. It continues to play an essential role to play in ELT classroom is so extensive that is almost a universal element in ELT teaching (Hutchinson & Torres: 1994) and it is crucial to any ELT program (Sheldon: 1988).Research has suggested that it is extremely common to see ELT professional incorporating the use of textbook for daily teaching purposes and very view of them would not use published ELT materials at some stage of their career (Byrd: 2001, Shaw: 2003).

Even though the importance of use of textbook in ELT has been justified by many different researches, opinions on whether textbooks can actually help or hinder the teaching and learning process seem to polarize. In view of this the researcher would also like to provide a literature review on pro and cons of using textbooks in EFL teaching.

d. The Need for Textbook Evaluation

The ever increasing number of textbooks on the market makes formulating the right choice in textbooks difficult (Cunningsworth: 1995). Textbook selection can have a massive impact on the teaching and learning process as teachers would make references to the textbooks or even design the entire EFL syllabus around it. In that sense, the qualities of textbooks are often purchased without careful analyses. Frequently, a textbook selection is not based on its intrinsic pedagogical value, but of the perceived prestige of the author and or the publisher, or skillful marketing by the publishers. Preference is given to books printed in attractive covers or that teachers would blindly use the best – selling textbooks which are used in many other places.

A number of studies have suggested that most current global, local ELT textbooks are developed for commercial purposes bur are not based on principles of language acquisitions and development recommended by scholars and educators. Financial success has become the primary goal of textbook publishing. Instead of contributing positively to students' development in the acquisition of the English language, many textbooks are in fact leading to learners' failure in acquiring the language and in the worst case, contain serious pedagogical flaws and practical shortcomings.

The cause of learning failure is two fold. The first cause of failure is that possibly motivated by the need of commercial success, publishers would have to produce according to the public demand (Tomlinson 2008),. Textbook writing as a result is molded according to the liking of teachers, parents, and administrators with heavy focus on teaching of linguistic items instead of creating opportunities for students to acquire the language. Also, teachers tend to choose textbooks that are designed to allow for minimal preparation for their classes. The second cause of failure is that instead of focusing on how learners could actually benefit from using the textbook, textbook writers relied on their intuition and produce materials what they think would work best for their intended users. Tomlinson (2008) biased towards perceived rather than actual needs of learners. Though the textbook written by professional writers is usually of good quality in items of organization, packaging and design, they tend to be lacking in qualities of being creative and imaginative.

In view of the above, it is therefore very important for us to conduct an EFL textbook evaluation so as to ensure ELT textbooks can effectively facilitate the attainment of our teaching objectives, and at the same time, be economically viable to teachers and students. Wrong choice of textbooks would be likely to negatively affect both teaching and learning. Financial resources would also be wasted.

e. A review of Textbook Evaluation as a Pedagogical Process

ELT materials evaluation or more precisely textbook evaluation, "involves measuring the value or (potential value) of a set of learning materials (textbooks) by making judgments about the effect of the effect of the materials (textbook) on the people using them" (Tomlinson 2004) . The area of ELT textbook evaluation seems to be under-researched, with a limited supply of relevant literature. As summarized by McGrath (2002) have suggested that it would be best for textbook evaluation schemes to adopt a "leveled" approach in evaluation in which a first level overview "impressionistic" evaluation should be first conducted followed by an in-depth evaluation.

Has helped to provide a good brief summary of how a leveled evaluation can be conducted. When applying the impressionistic method, we take the literal meaning of the method by quickly looking through the textbook cover to cover, to try and get an overview of the strengths and weaknesses of the book. The overview can provide formation of a quick opinion as the design and structure of the textbook, such as how attractive the cover is, what ancillary materials come with the textbook, and how the textbook is sequenced. Textbooks found unsuitable for use would have been screened out after this process. An in-depth evaluation will be undertaken subsequently to provide a detailed evaluation of specific items in each textbook on areas such as how the exercises can cater for the syllabus and learners' need. An example of an in-depth evaluation would be to select one or two chapters and look at the balance of skills and activities contained in each unit (Cunningsworth: 1995)

f. Textbook Design

According to Greene and Petty (1971: 545-8) in Tarigan (1986: 20-21) explains the criteria of good textbook. There are:

The textbook must be interested and attractive toward the learners. So, they will be interested in using textbook for study. The textbook must be able to motivate the learners to use. The textbook should consider the linguistic aspect. So, it will be suitable with the learner's ability. The content of textbook must be clear in written to avoid the learners will be confused in using textbook. The book must have clear point of view because it will be a point of view for the learners in using textbooks.

g. The other textbook design proposed by Rajans' (2003)

Good material is very important for the learner, because a good material can motivate the learner. The criteria of good materials design based on Rajan (2003: iv) like the MAGIC. The meaning of MAGIC is as follows;

1) M = Motivating and Meaningful

   a) Motivating means that a good material can motivate learner to learn themselves. It means the contents of these materials must be able to motivate the learners to learn.

b) Meaningful means that good materials are useful for the learner. It means the contents of these materials must be able to increase the learning ability of the learners in language.

2) A = Authentic and Appropriate

a) Authentic means that a good material contain by original language by native speaker. It means the contents of these materials must be able to facilitate students in understanding native speakers and students can learn the language skills of native speakers.

b) Appropriate means that a good material suitable for what the learner needed. It means the contents of these materials must be compatible with the learners needed and suitable with the level of each learner.

3) G = Graphic and Graded

a) Graphic means that a good material displayed with graphic or table will be more interesting.

b) Graded means that the material should be systematic range. It means that the material must be arranged from easier to the most difficult.

4) I = Interesting, Interactive, and Integrated

a) Interesting means that a good material can attack the attention of learner. It means the material must be able to create the attention of the learner.

b) Interactive means that a good material should be able to give chance to the learner for giving response.

c) Integrated means that good materials consist of Language skill and Language aspects.

5) C = Contextualized and Creative

a) Contextualized means that a good material should be suitable with time and place (up to date). It means that the material must suitable with the learner's activity.

b) Creative means that a good material should make the learners more creative.

CHAPTER III

RESEARCH METHOD

A. RESEARCH METHOD

This research is Descriptive. Descriptive research is intended for exploration and clarification concerning a phenomenon, by describing a number of variables regarding the problem and the unit under study.

Now is mostly found several books that are not relevant and not in accordance with the needs of students and some are also many shortcomings so researchers wanted to know what are the weakness and strength of the book to become a reference to students.

B. RESEARCH SUBJECT

The subject of this research is book with the tittle "Top Techniques in the Teaching of Writing"

C. TYPES OF DATA

The types of data being obtained is qualitative. Creswell (1998) states that qualitative research is an inquiry process of understanding based on distinct mythological traditions of inquiry that explore the social or human problem. The research builds a complex, holistic picture, analyzes words, reports, detailed views of informants, and conducts the study in a natural setting. The types of data that will be obtained such us, the correlation book with syllabus, layout, content, suitability to learners, and other criteria. Qualitative data will be taken from evaluating book entitled "Top Techniques in the Teaching of Writing "by Sukirman, S. Pd., M. Pd

I chose this book as research for seeing this book is so much in demand by a student who makes the book as a reference. but not all of the students liked the book so that the researchers chose this book to look for and know the weaknesses and strengths in the book.

D.   RUBRIC OF ANALISYS

The research instrument research is the research by using rubrics analysis adapted from Sundara Rajan (Material Design: 2003) is used to evaluate or validate of the product. It consist of five (5) criteria called MAGIC stand for motivating and meaningfull, autentic and appropriate ,graphic and graded , literatur and intergrated, and contextualized and creative, as explained in page 18-20.

E.   DATA ANALISYS

Data analysis technique used in this research is using the measures as proposed by Sugiyono (2005) as follows:

1.   Data Reduction

Data reduction means summarizing, choose things that are fundamental, focusing on things that are important, as well as look for themes and patterns. Thus the reduced data will provide a clearer picture, and facilitate researcher to conduct further data collection, and look for it if necessary, so as to reduce the data that is a value of finding and developing significant theory.

1. Display data

After the data is reduced, then the next step is to present the data, in qualitative research, data presentation is done in the form of a short description, chart, relations between categories, and the like. The most often used to present data in qualitative research is the narrative text. With the presentation of the data, it will be easier to understand what happened. Furthermore, in performing the data display, in addition to the narrative text, it can also be a graph, matrix, network (network), and charts.

2. Conclusion and Verification

Last step in data analysis, draw the conclusions to get the validity of the data. This is the last step of qualitative analysis. The conclusion involves stepping back to consider what the analyzed data mean and to assess their implications for the questions in problem statements. Then, verification, integrally linked to conclusion, entails revisiting the data as many times as necessary to cross-check or verify these emergent conclusions. "The meanings emerging from the data have to be tested for their plausibility, their sturdiness, their 'confirmability' - that is, their validity" (Miles and Huberman, 1994, p. 11). Validity means something different in this context than in quantitative evaluation, where it is a technical term that refers quite specifically to whether a given construct measures what it purports to measure. Here validity encompasses a much broader concern for whether the conclusions being drawn from the data are credible, defensible, warranted, and able to withstand alternative explanations.

CHAPTER IV

Book entitled "Top Technique in the Teaching" fit for use and published as a reference point that can be used as a reference for students to improve skills in writing based on research. In studies research institute, using the eight criteria in evaluating the book as The textbook is attractive, Motivate the learner, Consider Linguistic Aspect, Clear in written, Clear point of view, Authentic and Appropriate, Graphic and Graded, and Contextualized and Creative. And in the book as well, there are some weaknesses in lack of color in the image using black and white but it does not affect the quality of the books in the book, which makes investigators believe that this book deserves to as a handle by a student as a reference book.

In learning process book is one of the factors that are important in the learning process so that a student should pay attention only too well that the book will serve as a reference. Therefore, before choosing books that will be used as a reference point we have to consider several things in between weakness and strength of a book.
