This research entitled The Implementation of Reputable School Management in Indonesia (A Case Study at Secondary High School of Al-Azhar Palu). This research aims at understanding the implementation of reputable school management in Indonesia by taking research site at one of islamic education institution, that is, Al-Azhar Junior High School in Palu, related to education national standard.

This research using qualitative method by paedagogical and sociological approach. The techniques used in collecting data are interview, observation and documentation. Data source is taken by purposive and snowball method, they are: headmasters, teachers, students, student parents, and members of parents board.

The research shows that management implementation at reputable school referring to education national standard at Al-Azhar Junior High School can make its outcome compete with state school's as well as others' private school. The headmaster and teachers expect to maintain discipline in instructional process. The teachers and administrative staffs available are used maximally. The support from parents with middle-class economy and above is the main strength in facilitating media and infrastructure of the school. On the other hand, it is a serious threat for the students with lower class economy, although they are academically prestigious, because of incapability in paying high school fee. The fulfilment of curriculum need suitable for local condition, the seriousness in instructional process with professional teachers, the availability of media and infrastructure, and the maximum financial management will bring about high-competence graduates who can compete with other school's, both in national and international level. The social circumstance shows that the headmaster, teachers, and administrative staffs work with high discipline. This is indicated by the high grade got by average students and their high discipline. One hundred percent of Al-Azhar Junior High School Palu graduates can enter senior high school and have prestige at national level.
