

ISLAM AND THE DYNAMICS OF LOCAL CULTURE:
AN ANTHROPOLOGICAL ANALYSIS OF “MAPPACCING” RITUAL
IN SINJAI, SOUTH SULAWESI

ABSTRACT

This article seeks to explore the cultural negotiation between Islam and local religious practices among Muslim communities in Sinjai, South Sulawesi. The practice is called “mappacing”; a cultural occasion practiced by Muslim communities to express their thanks giving to God. This article examines the way how Islamic orthodoxy has undergone a cultural assimilation of mappacing tradition with Sinjai locality and wisdom. By using qualitative approach to study Muslim local community, this article examines the way how the universal dimension of Islam has been in ongoing process to adapt and adopt with cultural richness and wisdom of locality among Muslim community. The collection of data in this study obtained through interview, in depth observation and documentation. This article argues that that mappacing ritual—proceeded with flower bath in marriage occasion—is conducted to clean up everything before the marriage ceremony performed for the bride a night before the religious ceremony is prformed. Mappacing or flower bath in this occasion is practiced in a shack specially made for the bath (siraman) which has been decorated as it is supposed to. After the flowers bath, the next activity will be mappanretemme or menhdi night. The assimilation of Islamic teaching within local culture can be seen from the process of invoking blessing of the bride from their parents in the room or in front of the altar.

Key words: Local culture, mappacing, Makassar-South Sulawesi, local knowledge, Islamic orthodoxy

Introduction

The Kingdoms of Sinjai, including Bulo-bulo Kingdom, Tondong Kingdom, Lamatti Kingdom in southern part of Sulawesi, were established by the child of Ujung Lohe, Manimpahoi Kingdom established by Turunan Manurung in Matajang Bone,¹ has stood since the 16th century. Beginning in the early 17th century, those kingdoms became Islamic kingdoms and developed along with the development of local culture in Sinjai.²

Before Islam has evolved in Sinjai, people or community in Sinjai has held the local culture in the form of customs, old habits or other traditions such as mappattoang ingarajang – a ceremony to aerate the tools of the kingdom, mattuppa anak/mappalejjatana – a ceremony for the wife after giving birth and the kids is on their second year, mapparape' tau malasa – a ceremony for someone suffering from an illness and is difficult to heal, Mapparape tau pole – a tradition that is held to welcome a guest, ma'jamatana – a ceremony held while planting rice. The last but not the least is mangoloebotting. This last culture is the ceremony held when the marriage will be performed,³ and one of them is mappacing as one of the important parts of pangngaderreng in Buginese custom system.⁴ Pangngaderreng in the procession of mappacing on the marriage of the Bugis Sinjai is in line with the teachings of Islam. In other words, the local culture of mappacing is assimilated into the religious institution called sarak.

Dimension of religious and spiritual sarak that combined with pangngaderreng system in the procession of mappacing in Bugis, Sinjai, has been interesting to study, particularly to examine the suspicion spreading among the Muslim community that there has been assimilation between Islam and local culture in Sinjai. Based on the assertion, this article tries to interrogate the principal issue on how the existence of the local culture, mappacing, in connection with Islamic orthodoxy in Sinjai. My focus in this research will be to formulate the true practices of mappacing in order to understand the meaning and purposes of it understood by the Muslim community of Sinjai. What is the wisdom behind the practice of mappacing? And how the assimilation of the local culture with the Islamic teachings understood by the locals that has been nurtured through local history in South Sulawesi.

By exploring the practices and the meaning of mappacing this article seeks to present the conceptual understanding of local culture, mappacing in Sinjai. It is hoped that my description of mappacing will clarify the existence of local culture practiced by the locals. This article asli tries to discover the implementation of the mappacing in as an integral part of religious activities of marriage that still exists today and has significant prospective in the future. My purpose is to describe the assimilation of Islam and the local cultural within mappacing to provide some important references for the pattern of the relationship between Islam and local community for Sinjainese.

Islam, Orthodoxy and Local Culture: A Conceptual Elaboration

The term 'culture' is derived from the Sanskrit language, namely budhayah which is the plural form of budhi meaning the mind or intellect. Therefore, culture can be interpreted as matters concerned with the mind and intellect.⁵ By this definition it is understood that culture is a whole system of ideas, actions and results of human creation in the context of social life that belongs to people by learning. A British anthropologist, Sir Edward B. Taylor, as stated by Hans J. Daeng, defines culture as the whole complex of ideas and things produced by men in their historical experience. Furthermore, Ruth Benedict, a cultural anthropologist who studied human culture, states that culture is pattern of thinking and doing that runs through the activities of people and distinguished them from all other people.⁶

This definition of culture depicts a tangle and the scope of culture, which is very broad and complex, as mentioned as customs, the original character, or the habits of a society.⁷ Culture can also mean the manifestation of the habit of thinking,⁸ a system of ideas, actions and people work in the context of social life.⁹ Based on these assertions, this article formulates culture as a customs or something that has become the character or habit of the community which can be seen from their way of thinking system, ideas and actions. In line with this, Andi Rasdiyanah then formulates that culture in Buginese, the local language, is adek, which is the habit that has become norms in various aspects of life. Adek itself is a key element of pangaderreng system.¹⁰ As part of our argument to explore the relationship between Islam and local culture, this article argues that by creating such a special articulation of religious practice that produces distinctive expression of religious behavior is mappacing becomes an integral part of the local culture (pangngaderreng).

Based on the limitations mentioned above, the term culture in this study will focus on the local culture, which is the distinctive customs of Sinjainese. It applies specifically in Sinjai community that distinguishes them from other communities, which one of those is the mappacing tradition for Buginese in Sinjai. Local cultural is known as the heritage of social tradition and as a way of life consisting a rule of life locally restricted by geographical zoning map.¹¹ Therefore, while strong local culture portrays locality of advanced community, weak culture portrays the community underdeveloped locality. Local culture here refers to what we reviewed from various aspects that consists of three key elements namely ideas, activities, and works.¹² From these three elements, the local culture has become the customs or typical culture of a certain group that is always tied to the clear physical and geographical boundary.¹³ For example, the culture of Sinjai that refers to the tradition that has evolved is mappaccing. This is one of series of marriage activity of people in Sinjai.

Cultural Assimilation of Islam in Sinjay

Assimilation as the result of linkage between the local culture and the Islamic teachings has run persuasively and has maintained the original lesson of the Islamic teachings with the local culture. The teachings of Islam are coming into a particular area was not initially accepted by the local community for granted. This is due to differences in viewpoint, which is also different to everything that happens in the local community itself. However, with acculturation of local culture to religion has resulted in assimilation.

The possibility of reciprocal acculturation between Islam and local culture resulting in assimilation recognized in basic provisions of Usul Fiqh that, al-Adah muhakkamat (custom is used for regulations) or is more clearly stated that custom is a used as sharia, meaning customs and habits in a society is a source of legislation or regulation in Islam.¹⁴ In line with this, it is no longer need to be emphasized that the elements of the local culture that can be or should be a source of the law is the one that at least does not contradict the principles of Islam. The elements that are contrary to the principles of Islam itself must be removed and replaced. This is the meaning of the Islamic existence in a place or a country.

In that regard, NurcholishMadjid stated that the arrival of Islam has always resulted intajdid (updates) on the society towards a better, but at the same time Islam does not necessarily destructive which will hinder the society from its past alone, but also can help preserve what is good and right in the past and can be maintained in the universal teachings of Islam.¹⁵ But it does not mean that Islam and culture, and the result of culture from religion in the past can be associated. Islam and other things cannot be equated. The position of Islam with others including the resulted culture can be differentiated intelligently. Therefore, in the writer's view that reconciliation between Islam with others and other cultures can be seen in terms of 'urf' which is a part of the culture. The term 'urf' in Usul Fiqh is referred to as a local tradition that was later called the local culture. 'Urf' is etymologically derived from the Arabic, which has the same root word with al-ma'ruf, which means something you know well and in line with Islamic principles.

It should be believed that Islam should be strongly influenced by the acceleration of the local culture. Nurcholish Madjid then argues that when someone says "religion is a culture", some people were startled and asked, "What is the meaning of this statement?" this statement will cause pros and cons from the society. Then came the follow-up question, "Does religion have to be static, while culture is dynamic stuff?" The question of the relationship between religion and the concept of local culture that surrounded him into something that is always interesting to discuss.¹⁶ In this regard, the humanist tends to view that religion as a product of culture because culture is a way of life that developed and inherited from generation to generation. In other words, a culture is made up of many complex elements including a system of religion, politics, customs, languages, tools, clothing, buildings and works of art. Culture is a holistic lifestyle. Culture is complex, abstract, and spacious. Many aspects of culture help determine communicative behavior.

The elements of the socio-cultural as mentioned scatter and include many social activities of people in the society, so that culture becomes a set of values which is symbolized as something that contains a view on its merits alone. Next, it will take different forms in any culture which is also different. The debate on whether the culture creates a religion or that is a religion that actually forms a culture expression becomes similar to the debate about which came first, the egg or chicken, whether religion came when human civilization has existed in earlier times or people become more civilized after the existing or religious belief system that has existed in earlier times. This is the reality of life, religion forms culture and vice versa. Apart from this, most people are happy to conclude that religion is a belief system. Although most people stick to the idea that a belief system is a culture that is produced by cultures preceded. Such system will be found in the activities of mappaccing within the society in Sinjai.

Research on cultural assimilation has produced research was conducted as field research, which took place in the district of Sinjai. This was a case study in which the research tried to describe a phenomenon related to the local culture mappaccing in Sinjai. Thus, it was classified as qualitative research.

The research approach used in the present study was multidisciplinary including historical, anthropological, sociological, and theological approaches. The types of data in this study consisted of two, which were primary data and secondary data. The primary data was taken from observation, interviews, and documents. The primary sources of the data were from ten informants of indigenous stakeholders in Sinjai, five religious figures, and three local authorities.

In collecting data, some instruments were used such as notes, recording, research forms, and questions guidelines. The data obtained from the field was used observation method and interviews. The literature review was taken from documents study or review. The data were processed by systematically organize the written record of observations as well as the unwritten data, and predict the results of the interview. The collected data was described as the findings of the research report. The procedure of data processing was analyzed interactively and continuously until complete, along with the data reduction, data display, data verification, then it was analyzed using descriptive-exploratory techniques and inductive-qualitative methods. The researcher also processed data taken from literature deductively, inductively, and comparatively.

Sinjainese Community in South Sulawesi

The indigenous people who first settled in Sinjai who is called to Manurung is located in Karampuang, a village located about 31 kilometers from the center of Sinjai now. It was said that to Manurung who first settled in Karampuang are derivatives of King of Bone, the Son of Manurung UjungLohe, who later formed his own kingdom includes Bulu-Bulu, Tondong, and Lamatti, which then lasts yet still under Kingdom of Bone territory.¹⁷ In the next development, some areas of Sinjai is controlled by Kingdom of Gowa, especially during the reign of King of Gowa IX called Tomapa'risi Kallonna, which was then completely dominated by Kingdom of Gowa under King of Gowa X, who is called Mario GauDaengBonto (1546-1565) that ascended the throne .

The word Sinjai comes from the word sijai meaning the same. The current situation of the population in Sinjai from year to year can be seen in the following table:

Tabel 1: The Population in the District of Sinjai¹⁸

Year	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014
Male(people)	110.771	110.225	108.909	108.905	105.767
Female (people)	118.108	118.079	117.034	113.010	111.607

Population Growth (%)	-	1	-	-	-
Population Density (people/km ²)	-	278	276	-	265

The cultural life of Sinjainese community cannot be separated from the natural environment and social dynamics. Naturally, the environment that are in coastal areas is empirically very strategic in expanding its economy, of its geographical position, people depend on aquatic resources. Therefore, in terms of social life, Sinjainese has the original source of all cultures around the coastal areas such as ma'rimpasalo and ma'panretasi. For the people outside coastal areas like in Karampuang that are scarcely touched by outside influences, they can still hold the old traditions, such as the principles of management of a kingdom, there is a king, the prime minister and several ministers. Karampuang is led by a Pamatoa which serves as the king, a Panggela as a Prime Minister, a Sangro or shaman as minister of health and welfare, and a teacher acting as minister of education and religion.

Other cultural area, which applies in all areas of society is the level of social stratification in Sinjai, has strongly been used, including greetings of petta, puang, karaeng and andi. In terms of kinship (asseajingeng) Sinjainese also maintains it that is considered important to keep togetherness and unity.

In terms of Sinjai District, a village generally consists of a number of families of 10 up to 200 hundred households that live and stay in. The houses are lined up, facing south or west. If there is a river in the village, residents will try to keep their homes built with its back to the river. In their culture, there was an old village as a sacred place called pocci'na, which was surrounded by large big banyan trees. In the history of Sinjai, a combination of villages is called hanua, which was led by an arung, gellareng, or sulle-watang.

In the perspective of history, the process of the first acceptance of Islam in Sinjai has a historical relationship with the process of Islamization of kingdom of Gowa and kingdom of Bone, which dates back to the 16th century. By the early 17th century, the Kingdom of Gowa stated Islam as the official religion, at the same time, established the kingdom of Tellumpocoe as a basis of Islam. In the meantime, the King of Bone embraced Islam, and several provincial governments, including the kingdom of Sinjai accepted Islam as the official religion of the government that were included in the federation of Tellu LimpoE and Pitu LimpoE.¹⁹ The alliance of kingdom of Tellu LimpoE consisted of the kingdoms of Sinjai which were located on the coastal area such as Tondong kingdom, Bulu-Bulu kingdom and Lamatti kingdom. While Pitu LimpoE is the kingdoms in the highlands including Turungen kingdom, Manimpahoi kingdom, Terasa kingdom, Pao kingdom, Manipi kingdom, Suka kingdom and Bala Suka kingdom. From a number of kingdoms mentioned, the Lamatti kingdom gave the most contribution to the process of Islamization in Sinjai. Next, the spread of Islam after Lamatti was played by Bulu-Bulu kingdom.²⁰

The history of the development of Islam in Sinjai can be seen in the time dimension, which can be classified into three periods, or that the kingdom period or post period. The spread of Islam in Sinjai on the kingdom period revealed the top down side. This had happened until the 1670s. After the post kingdom period and the enactment of Sinjai district on October 20, 1959, the expansion of Islam in Sinjai was centered in mosques, and other educational institutions.

Until recently, the development of Islam in Sinjai grew rapidly. The current population of Sinjai is 228,879 inhabitants in which Muslims reaches 228,674 people, Christians is 172 and Hindu and Buddhist is four people.

The Practice of Mappacing in Sinjai Community

Mappacing is derived from the verb of mapaccing which means clean, which is an activity intended to clean everything before the marriage ceremony performed for the bride.²¹ Mappacing or flower bath for Sinjainese is cemmebotting or more commonly called cemmemajang, which according to their traditions majang means areca flower, which is very useful to remove all dirt whether of those stuck on the body or stored in the soul will be removed along with the water of areca flower during the procession of flower bath. Thus, besides aiming to remove impurities on the body, flower bath is also beneficial to purify themselves from evil spirits from the bride and groom and will get the halal sustenance.

After the flower bath, mappacing is continued with tudangpenni or mehndi night as the core of the self-cleaning activity for the bride before tudangbotting or sitting in the aisle next day. Thus, mappacing becomes the integral activity of a series of marriage. Marriage system in the local culture of Sinjai in terms of terminology, referred to siala and siabbeneng. The marriage will not only involve two individuals elements directly, but involve various stakeholders in the system because within their pangngadakkang system, marriage is a family affair, relatives affairs, community affairs, personal affairs in a different relationship.²² Thus, a marriage may be accomplished if the two elements of the bride have the support of individuals associated directly, or groups of individuals in society, especially from the family and close relatives. The marriage lasted, always according to the custom and sarak.

In the regular community of Bugis in Sinjai, marriages usually take place between close family or between groups of the same patronage (clients). Customary law of Bugis Sinjai in terms of marriage is to match a man or a woman in a family environment. This mating type, called sialamassapposiseng, massappokadua and massappokatellu.²³ Thus, marriage between cousins one time based on the information obtained, it is often the case among the high nobility. The aim is that wealth does not fall into the hands of others. Especially on the nobility, marriage between cousins mean offspring will not be reduced or lost.

For marriages between twice cousins termed sialamassappo-kadua or sometimes in Bugis Sinjai called assiparewesenna meaning going back to relatives, which aims to re-establish a close kinship so that it is not be far apart. While marriage between thrice cousins or sialamassappokatellu aims to ripasirewasengngi or ripaddeppemabelai or in other words is to reconnect kinship between extended families.²⁴ The tight matchmaking among the noble people in the past in Sinjai caused the relationship between the royal child with ordinary people were very closed.

The series of customs and traditions in determining the pairing restriction is a necessary condition that must be obeyed. The noble people shall be mated with the noble one, Otherwise, it violates the relevant customs and traditions. This violation is called lejjak sung tappere meaning stepping on the corner of the mat. Penalties for violations of customary marriages called riladung or rilamung.²⁵ It means that both the offenses are subjected to heavy penalties, which are both drowned into the water. In addition to the restrictions mate, a man who will be married has more conditions to be met rather than a woman. A Sinjainese man who will marry, beside having a preparation of wealth, he must also equip himself with lessons or knowledge related to household. This is because the husband is required to know how to build household and especially the safety of his wife according to pappaseng to riolo'e, which is isnauillepimattulilingdapurengngewekkapitu.

Bugis Sinjai community also recognizes that marriage is not admirable when some misconduct occurred prior to the marriage. The misbehavior that exceeded the normal limit of relationship is called malaweng which has three levels, malawengpakkiti, malawengkedo, malawengLuse,²⁶ but today, the writer found that the people are no longer punished if such misconduct occurred. The writer viewed that men and women in the community of Sinjai began to be affected by the free relationship. The writer also observed other disgraceful acts in society that they called elopement. Elopement is divided into three types, namely silariang, rilariang, and eloriale.

It is understood that the ideal marriage of the Bugis Sinjai community Sinjai is when whether the man or women gets their expected soul mate within the family and civilized relatives. This is the standard of their local culture as it can show the social status in their society. The standard of culture of Sinjainese which still lasts today based on the writer's survey is the choice of a mate. In choosing the mate, they follow the principle called sikapuk or worth, which is normal in the marriage law. The other principle is called tessikapu or inappropriate. In this case, the candidate from the family or relatives either from mother side or father side will still get the priority. However, if there is a pair that does not fit, then it will be chosen from the external environment, which is not a relative, even out of the village or area.

When there is an agreement in the choice of a mate, then they set the day of marriage, through mappettuada, when the bride enters a sort of semi-seclusion stage called arapo-raponna, after both formally bound by the agreement which was decided at the last mappettuada. Bride afterward, should not to be busy at work, have to save her energy where the transition is believed highly vulnerable to external things such as spiritual or temporal, which people still believe in the existence of so-called witchcraft that could be made calamity when the bride is not careful. Therefore, in addition to forbidden to work, they are also restricted to appear in general public. Especially for the bride, she usually spends her time in the room and at home. She cannot pass through the yard until the wedding day comes.

Before the ceremony, flower bath is held in the afternoon, which is termed as mappacing and in the evening or night is used for mappanretemme or mehndi night as the core of mappacing. This activity is held separately in the bride's and the groom's house. Besides the activity mentioned, the other series of the activity during mappacing night is prayer or Barazanji which is held by the people who still strongly hold their tradition.

Mappacing and the Stages of Human Life

The implementation of mappacing or flower bath in the marriage uses some tools based on the observation. The tools are a pitcher for the bride and a bucket for the groom, flower nut, cloth, water, lakka (dipper for bride made of brass, groom use a plastic bucket), baskets, and the various kinds of leaves. According to Hj. Andi Bahra, in ancient times among people in Sinjai, before the procession of flower bath is done, there will be a special place made for the bride to conduct the bath that has been accepted by family members. The place is usually near the doors of the house. The intention of doing such a thing is that it is expected the plague or disaster from the outside does not go into the house and reinforcements coming from inside the house to get out.²⁷

²⁶Hj. A. Bahra, 62 tahun, Pemangku Adat, interviews, Bulupoddo, on 20th October 2014.

In addition to some of the preparations that have been mentioned above, there are some other equipment prepared for the bath such as a barrel filled with water, scoop, seven kinds of flowers, perfume, ja'jakkang consisting of a bushel (four liters) of rice placed in a basket, seven or nine red candle, palm shoots, red cub, pa'dupaang, and leko' passili. But for the present time, based on observations of the writer, a sort of completeness is no longer all used.

After the flower bath, then it is continued to mappanretemme as the core of mappacking activity. Andi Mangnggenre stated that mappacking also called mehndi/henna night. Henna is the name of plant known in the Bugis language as Pacci which is ground to redden the nails of girls. Some of the materials used in the mappacking and the usage are:

- 1) Pillow as a symbol of the dignity of honor that must be maintained which is in the Bugis language is called mappakalebbisipakalebbi, (2) Nine pieces of silk sarung to wrap or cover the body as a symbol of moral self-esteem. Sarung symbolizes the persistence and skills possessed by bride or groom, (3) Banana leaf symbolizes continued life, old but not dry leaves and young leaves to symbolize endless wealth, (4) Jackfruit leaves which means hope and ambition. This is where the bride puts both her hands to invoke blessing from everyone who puts henna on her hands started from the right to the left hand. (5) the red candle is to light the way of the bride in her household journey. (6) tai bani is from honeycomb, to symbolize the life of a peaceful and harmonious as it unevenly as seen in the life of bees that diligently work in harmony and obey orders but when an enemy comes to disturb, they attack simultaneously, (7) Benno or Lappo is rice fried without oil which is then dissipated/thrown over the bride's head three times with hopes and prayers that she will always be able to evolve and grow as well as easy bounties, (8) Pacci as a symbol of purity.²⁸

All the ingredients mentioned above are stored in a special place in a couple of jugs and placed on a silver tray, and then the mappacking is held in front of the bride. In this process, there is hand pads which is usually with the long elliptical pillows. Others sometimes use a pillow covered with banana leaves, seven sheets of silk sarong neatly folded and then on top of it, it is placed jackfruit leaves which is designed like flower. Taibani or light passé pelleng is put near the bride, rekkoata, bennoase (blomms rice), pinang (nut) on Kappara, or a tray placed on hand washing, napkin tray and sometimes it is also put cigarettes as many as people of mappacking. In this procession, one by one guest and family are called and are picked up by the parents who carry taibani. The first person who comes will take Pacci leaves, and place it on the palms of bride accompanied by prayer.

People who are asked to put Pacci leaves on the bride will be in the queue, starting with paddupa (welcoming) simultaneously while the bride was sitting in the aisle, and one member of family who is designated as a protocol begins the procession with the following utterances;

At the same time, the bride is invited to sit in the aisle. Then in front of her, it is put a pillow as a symbol of mappakalebbi (honor), seven pieces of silk sarong as a symbol of pride, a banana leaf as symbol of continuous living, seven jackfruit leaves as a symbol of the future (hope), a plate wenno (rice roasted until fluffy) as a symbol of the breed, a flaming candle as a symbol of light, and henna leaves, which are crushed and pulverized as a symbol of purity and bekkeng (the yellow metal to put pacci in it) as the symbol of unity of two people (brides).

Next, one by one, people will come to the bride and put pacci on the bride's hands followed with prayer. At the meantime, the parents will throw wenno over the head of the bride or groom.

Those who are invited to rub Pacci are usually relatives, close relatives and people who have a good social life and happy marriage. It usually starts from the parents and then continue to the next kin, but there is also a tradition usually preceded by people who have good social position and have a happy home life. All this implies that the bride someday in the future can also live happily as they had put pacci on the hands.

In ancient times among the Sinjai, the number of people who put the leaves Pacci adjusted for stratification bride itself. For the highest aristocracy, it is 2 x 9 people or duakasera. For the middle class, it is 2 x 7 people or duakapitu, and the lower class is only a 1 x 9 or 1 x 7 people. But at this present time, there are no more differences in the number of people who will be doing this tradition.

Assimilation between Islam and Local Culture

Based on the observations of the writer, the bride in Sinjai before entering mappaccing activities in this case the flower bath, first invoke blessing of both parents in the room, or in front of the altar. This is one of the services of a child to both parents, which is Arabic termed bir al-wālidayn, and become one of the essential teachings of Islam as mentioned in Q.S. al-Nisa / 4: 36, the translation, "Worship Allah and associate nothing with him, and to the parents do good."²⁹ Earlier this verse asserting وَأَعْبُدُوا اللَّهَ which is about the importance of worship, and one of the worship series is prayer including requesting the blessing of both parents for Allah's approval, which has implications on إِحْسَنًا إِلَىٰ وَالِدَيْهِ containing interpretation of the importance to be kind to parents.

After the bride prayed and were prayed, and received approval from both parents, especially in Sinjai in that old days, the bride will be delivered to the splash of water in the shade of the umbrella-shaped rectangular (leilu) held by four girls for the bride and four men for the groom. Upon arriving at the spray, the procession began with preceded by Indo Botting, thereafter followed by both parents and the elder people (to 'malebbi) of seven or nine pairs.

After a flower bath, the bride changed clothes, then is placed in front of the altar dressed in BajuBodo, tope (bridal sarong) or lipa 'sabbe, as well as other accessories to join TudangPenni as a series of mappacking activity which is attended by more family, distant relatives also came to attend a family gathering with a full kinship, they sat together on the night before the wedding. TudangPenni in a real sense is sitting together with comrades called Tudangsipatangarengto discuss about the implementation of the wedding. In this TudangPenni, it is also discussed something related to the event, which is several verses mentioned for example³⁰ وَأَمْرُهُمْ شُورَى بَيْنَهُمْ and is a³¹ وَشَاوَرُكُمْ فِي الْأَمْرِ command to deliberation or talk off in terms of stabilization of the completeness of the bride the next day like balibotting, patiwi-tiwi, including pickup and setting their respective duties.

Observation of the writer subsequently found in the field that within the community, they will precede the ceremony by praying and forinladSinjaines who holds the local cultural traditions, reciting Al quran or barazanji will be held. Barazanji is a book that contains the history of the Prophet Muhammad and salawat upon him. The tradition of barazanji has long held in the community at events like in some monumental events such getting in a new home, going to the holy land, and when the wedding will be held. For them, without doing Barazanji, the sanctity of marriage is not enough. In addition to Barazanji, the bride and groom reads the Quran who is led by a priest. This is called Khatam al-Quran is Islam, or in sarak is called mappanretemme as a series of important events of mappacking.

After prayers, barazanji and then and continued with mappanreTemme or Khatam al-Quran for the bride, the point is to make sure that the bride is able to read the Qur'an and is believed that the bride and groom can practice the teachings of the Quran in developing household. In this regard, in a hadith is mentioned

عَنْ عَلِيٍّ رَضِيَ اللَّهُ عَنْهُ قَالَ قَالَ النَّبِيُّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ يَقُولُ حُبُّوا نَبِيَّكُمْ بِتِلَاوَةِ الْقُرْآنِ فَإِنَّ حَمَلَةَ الْقُرْآنِ فِي ظِلِّ عَرْشِ اللَّهِ يَوْمَ لَا ظِلَّ إِلَّا ظِلُّهُ مَعَ أَنْبِيَائِهِ وَأَصْفِيَائِهِ³² (رواه أبو داود)

This means:

From Ali ra said that the Prophet said: Love your Prophet by reading the Quran, for people who are expert of the Al-Quran is located in the shadow of the throne of God on the day there is no protection other than the protection of God and His prophets and holy people. (HR. Abu Dawud)

This hadith advises all Muslims to love him, and one of the efforts is to read the his sirah, which is barazanji actually including containing the life history of the Prophet

Muhammad, And then to read the Qur'an that in their culture is to hold khatmu al-Qur'ān at mappanretemme prior to the wedding.

Mappanretemme activity according to the writer's survey is guided by an imam/priest on the orders of the imam of the village. In the event, the bride will be led to read short letters in the order starting from Q.S. al-Duhā/93, Q.S. AlamNasyrah/94, Q.S. al-Thīn/95, Q.S. al-Alaq/96, Q.S. al-Qadar/97, Q.S. al-Bayyinah/98, Q.S. al-Zalzalah/99, Q.S. al-Adiyat/100, Q.S. al-Qārī'ah/101, Q.S. al-Takāśur/102, Q.S. al-Asr/103, Q.S. Humazah/104, Q.S. Fīl/105, Q.S. al-Quraisy/106, Q.S. al-Mā'ūn/107, Q.S. al-Kawśar/108, Q.S. al-Kāfirūn/109, Q.S. al-Nasr/110, Q.S. al-Lahab/111, Q.S. al-Ikhlās/112, Q.S. al-Falaq/113, Q.S. al-Nās/114, continued with reciting Q.S. al-Fātiḥah/1 chorally, where the bride and all visitors will recite Q.S. Al fatihah out loud. After that, the imam will lead the bride to recite Q.S. al-Baqarah/2: 1-5 and is closed with prayer of khatmul Qur'an.

Conclusion

Based on the issues examined in relation to the findings of the research, the writer formulated three basic conclusions as follows: Mappacing is an activity that aims to clean up everything before the marriage ceremony performed for the bride. Mappacing or flower bath in regard of Sinjainese community is cemmebotting or more commonly called cemmeMajang, which were followed by a mehndi night or TudangPenni and then continued with mappanretemme, prayers and other rituals of remembrance as well as activities for the self-cleaning for a bride.

Mappacing or flower bath in its implementation before the procession will be done in a shack, a room which is specially made for this purpose-flower bath. The procession is held around the door with the intention that the plague or disaster from the outside does not go into the house and the vice versa, the curse from inside the house is reinforced to get out. After the flowers bath, the next series of the activity will be mappanretemme or mehndi/henna night. Henna in buginese is the name of a plants where it's leaves called pacci. In the mehndi night, people are asked to put the Pacci leaves on the bride in the queue which is started with the welcoming (paddupa) at the same time with the bride sitting on the aisle. Next, one by one will take pacci leaves from basket (bekkeng) and rub it onto palms bride while praying for his/her. While doing this, the parents will throw wenno to the bride.

The assimilation of the Islamic teaching can be seen before entering mappacing activities. Firstly, the bride invoke the blessing of both parents in the room, or in front of the altar. This is to show that the child obeys their parents which is termed bir al-wālidayā mentioned in Q.S. al-Nisa / 4: 36. Next is TudangPenni as a series of mappacing activities where in this activity, the prayers will be read for the inland people who still hold the tradition of local culture, they will recite holy Qur'an which is called barazanji aiming at sending salawat to the prophet Muhammad SAW. Meanwhile, there will be a reciting al quran by the bride prior to the wedding. This is called khatmu al-Qur'ān or mappanretemme.
