Title : The stylistic in Neil Gaiman's "American Gods"
Supervisor I : Umar Thamrin
Supervisor II : Helmi Syukur

This research discussed about lexical expressive means and stylistics devices in American Gods novel which aimed to know all of the style used in the selected Neil Gaiman's novel "American Gods". The researcher focused on Galperin's theory about all aspects of lexical expressive means and stylistic devices from the text of the novel. Then, the data were analyzed using qualitative method. The Researcher used note taking as the instrument of the research to find out the valid data. The finding showed that this thesis have three categories of lexical expressive means and stylistics devices; they are Interaction of different types of lexical meaning (Metaphor, Metonymy, Irony, the Epithet, Oxymoron, and Antonomasia), Intensification of a certain feature of a thing or phenomenon (Simile, Periphrasis, Euphemism, and Hyperbole), and Peculiar use of set Expression (Proverb and saying, Epigrams, Allusions). The text were used in the selected Neil Gaiman's novel were mostly simile, hyperbole and epigram while the other style still appeared to create some atmosphere in the novel. The researcher concluded that the analysis of data and explanation about stylistic have an important function to create story in the novel. Stylistic also is a tool to give stressing in the context, so the reader can be easy to understand the story or character in the novel and making the story more beautiful and alive.

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

A. Background

In the novel, the author describes the reality of human's life wrapped neatly by using the right language, so it can make the reader feel as if they are experiencing themselves what is written by the author. Hakim (2009: 10) says that, the author conveys his imagination into a novel by playing with aesthetics words. In addition, the author also compiled a series of words that build the flow of novel with meaningful words, so that readers can feel the presence of high aesthetic value in the novel by themselves.

A good novelist is an author who can play with words. In addition he can also create various styles of language in the imaging of various sequences of plot and events that occur in a novel. This is because the essence of the unique style of language that the author use as the way in expressing imagination through written language. The author expressed his desire in conveying the idea through beautiful language with the reason that readers are interested in reading through the course of the path in the story.

According to Eko (2009: 2), each author in making a work will show the use of language with distinctive features and patterns that can make the differences with other authors. The use of a distinctive language in his work will certainly show the characteristics of individualism, originality, and style of each author. One of the peculiarities of the use of language is shown by one of the talented young writers Neil Gaiman, through his novel American Gods. Neil Gaiman succeeded in creating a literary masterpiece in which he had a rich variety of styles and conflicts, written in a bold style of realism. Notice this quote:

The boundaries of our country, sir? Why, on the east we are bounding by the rising sun, on the south we are bounding by the procession of the Equinoxes, and on the west by the Day of Judgment(p.3).

Based on the above quote the researcher concludes that Neil Gaiman is able to leverage the style of engaging language. He is able to present stories with beautiful language words. He is able to choose a good diction so that the effect of suggestion by the series of words to the reader and directly target the reader's awareness.

One way to find out the writing style of each author is to examine the uniqueness and peculiarity of the language used by each author in making his works. The study of the uniqueness and peculiarity of the use of language is to discover and characterize the general characteristics of a writer's work. Then the right science to examine the use of language in literature with a linguistic approach is stylistic.

This stylistic study is an examination of literary-oriented literature or the use of linguistic parameters in the study of literary works. The emphasis of stylistic study itself lies in the use of language and language style of a literary work. This study aims to examine specific aspects of language usage in literary works, such as peculiarities in the use of sounds (rhythms), diction and figurative language (Subroto, 1997:2). Stylistic is also an object of study research. It means that in the novel of American gods by Neil Gaiman there are potential languages that are processed and exploited by the author for the purpose of aesthetic expression.

Having linguistic in a literary work means not doing a thoroughly literary study like a literature study, but this research is more focused on linguistic studies of literary works in the novels of American Gods by Neil Gaiman. According to Leech and Short (1981: 13) Stylistics categories consist of the lexical categories grammatical, figure of speech, context, and cohesive. This study will examine aspects of lexical expressive means and stylistic devices in the novel American Gods by Neil Gaiman. This research is mainly prioritized on lexical expressive means in determining expressiveness of disclosure power and centered on stylistic devices in expressing the language of an author. Research on lexical expressive means and stylistic devices also aims in order to understand and interpreted of the meaning contained in the work.

In essence, all kind and varieties of language that exist in the entire universe are part of His authority. Therefore, truly noble people who up hold the majesty of the verses of Allah SWT. In Al-Quran Karim Surah Ibrahim Verse 4, Allah SWT says:

وَمَا أَرْسَلْنَا مِنْ رَّسُولٍ إِلَّا بِلِسَانِ قَوْمِهِ لِيُبَيِّنَ لَهُمْ فَيُضِلُّ اللَّهُ مَن يَشَاءُ
وَيَهْدِي مَنْ يَشَاءُ ۗ وَهُوَ الْعَزِيزُ الْحَكِيمُ

Translation: “And we never sent a messenger save with the language of his folk, that might make (the message) clear for them. Then Allah sendeth whom he will astray and guideth whom he will. He is the mighty, the wise.” (Translated by M. Habib Shakir).

Stylistics tightly relates to the Al-Qur'an karim surah Ibrahim verse 4 which said that "And we never sent a messenger save with the language of his folk". By learning language in the world, besides to keep the language's existence, it is also to be grateful to Allah SWT and language is the most effective means of communication in the society (Shihab : 2011). In addition, language and societies are two things that cannot be separated. We as human have to understand the expressive means to make a good communication. We need to study for reading situation, context, and how to understand the expressive means of language.

Study expressive means in novel specifics of styles is not a simple exploration to reveal the natural language into literary work functional of stylistic. Means of expressiveness of the novels have a fundamental importance to understand the language term. The novel is represented to be the systematic on the level of expressive means, which are both possible inventory of expressive means and their volume. The novel is one type of literary work or transactional discourse. The discourse emphasizes the content of the communication or the plane of the imagination of its author. In principle the focus of stylists is the style of language, the way used by author to express his meaning with the language as the ingredients. It is reasonable to conduct linguistic studies in order to discover lexical expressive means and stylistic devices in the American Gods by Neil Gaiman.

In this case the researcher will use lexical expressive means and stylistic devices because the data that have been chosen from slogan stylistics. Among the types of lexical expressive means that are discussed and used by researcher such as, Interaction of different types of lexical meaning, Intentional Mixing of Stylistic aspect of words, Intensification of Certain Feature of a things or phenomenon, and Peculiar use of set Expression.

The researcher takes American Gods novel as the object of stylistics study. The researcher is interested in discussing American Gods novel by Neil Gaiman deeply based on the brief findings about language style. The stylistics element in literary work used by the author on American Gods novel can be related in linguistic aspects. The researcher will explore for literature in linguistic aspect, especially in stylistics. So in this case, the researcher is interested in analyzing more deeply about stylistics in American Gods novel.

B. Research Question

Based on the background, the researcher formulates research questions as follows: How are the lexical expressive means and stylistic devices used in American Gods novel by Neil Gaiman?

C. Objective of the Research

The objective of this research is: To describe the lexical expressive means and stylistic devices used in American Gods novel.

D. Significance of the Research

The researcher expects this research generally can increase the science in the field of language and especially for the readers or the other researchers who are interested the use of stylistics in literary work.

E. The Scope of The Research

In this study, the researcher used expressive means and stylistic devices aspects stated by Galperin's (1981:20) who divides it into five aspects: Stylistics Classification of The English Vocabulary, Phonetic Expressive Means and Stylistic Devices, Lexical Expressive Means and Stylistic Devices, Syntactical Expressive Means and Stylistic Devices and The Functional Styles of The English Language. The researcher focused on lexical expressive means and stylistic devices in American Gods novel and then the researcher also explained the meaning in form of stylistic in American Gods novel.

CHAPTER II

THORETICAL FRAMEWORK

A. Previous Studies

The researcher found some previous findings related and relevant with this research, as follow:

Nisyarkawi (2017) on his thesis "The Stylistics Analysis in the Selected Eminem's Songs". The researcher found that the slang word is used often the other word classification. There are eight aspects of stylistic classification of English vocabulary in the selected Eminem's songs such as: terms, poetic word, foreign word, slang, jargon, professionalism, dialectical word and vulgarism. In this research, the researcher focused on Galperin's theory about description all aspects of stylistics classification of vocabulary from the lyrics of the songs. The researcher used descriptive qualitative method and note taking as the instrument of the research to find out the valid data.

Putri (2011) on her thesis "An Analysis of Stylistics in Dear John Novel by Nicolas Sparks". The researcher found the most common figures of speech are grouped in three categories: figures of comparison, figures of contrast, and figures of association dealing with describing the stylistics analysis focusing on eight categories of figure of speech theory of Vivian and Jackson (1961) in Dear John Novel. In this research, the researcher collected the data from the novel that uses qualitative method of discourse analysis and explained some theories that relate to figurative language.

Gozaly (2009) on his thesis "Stylistics Analysis Hamzah Puadi Ilyas Short Story Mother's Hair" the researcher found that Hamzah Puadi Ilyas creates his story around the use of figure of speech in building the theme of short story Mother's Hair. This research uses the stylistics figurative language of Leech that explained the stylistics of indirect meaning as figurative language. The research concerned in verbal data collected from the story which is analyzed qualitative method based on the figure of speech.

After comparing those theses, the researcher found the similarities and differences that the researcher can see between those theses with this research. Three of them use stylistics analysis to show the style in the object of the research but the focusing is not same. Such as Nisyarkawi (2017) focused in Galperin theory about classification vocabulary to description all aspects of stylistics classification of vocabulary from the lyrics of the songs, Putri (2011) focused in figure of speech theory of Vivian and Jackskon to analyze the novel, and Gozaly (2009) focused in figurative language of Leech that explain the stylistic of indirect meaning as figurative language to analyze the short story. Two researches above have similar object novel and short story which are based on text to read so that the researcher limited by text analyzing.

In this research, the researcher has the same object with Putri (2011) and Gozaly (2009) thesis. The object in this research is novel which is American Gods by Neil Gaiman. The theory of this research is same with the research above, but the aspect in this research is different. In this research, the researcher used the lexical expressive means and stylistic devices aspects to show the style of word in novel American Gods which is used by Neil Gaiman and used the theory of Galperin (1981:123).

B. Stylistics

1. Definition of stylistic

According to Turner (1973:7) Stylistics is the part of linguistics which concentrates on variation in the use of language, but exclusively with special attention to the most conscious and complex uses of language in literature.

Stylistics is a method about the style of language. According to Simpson (2004:2), the definition of stylistics is a method of textual interpretation in which primacy of place is assigned to language. Style is different from structural grammar. Doing stylistics thereby enriches our ways of thinking about language and exploring language offers a substantial purchase on our understanding of (literary) texts.

Carter and Simpson (2005:4) define that Linguo - stylistics is the study of texts but from a linguistic orientation. The linguistics is concerned with language codes themselves and particular messages of interest and to give example how the codes are constructed. Leech and Short (1981:13) states that in general, literary stylistics, implicitly or explicitly, has the goal of explaining the relation between language and artistic function.

Stylistics has connection with the literature. The connection between stylistics and literature brings two important caveats, they are:

- 1) Creativity and innovation in language use should not be seen as the exclusive preserve of literary writing. Many forms of discourse such as: advertising, journalist, popular music-even casual conversation often display a high degree of stylistics dexterity, it will be wrong if we see the dexterity in language use as exclusive formal literature.
- 2) The techniques of stylistics analysis are about deriving insights, linguistics structure and function as their understanding literary texts (Simpson, 2004:3).

Galperin (1981:5) suggests that stylistics is a branch of general linguistics, which deals with the following two interdependent tasks, the first is it studies the totality of special linguistic means (stylistic devices and expressive means) which secures the desirable effect of the spoken or written language, and the second is it studies certain types of text “discourse” which is due to the choice and arrangement of the language which are distinguished by the pragmatic aspect of communication (functional styles).

2. Expressive Means and Stylistics Devices

For our purposes it is necessary to make a distinction between expressive means and stylistic devices. All stylistic means of a language can be divided into expressive means, which is used in some specific way and it is called stylistic devices.

Kukhareno (1968:12) suggests stylistic devices a consciounes and intentionally literary use of the language (including expressive means) in order to give further intensification of the emotional or logical emphasis which is contained in the corresponding expressive means.

Galperin (1981:22) also explains that the interrelations between expressive means and stylistics devices can be expressed in terms of the theory of information. Expressive means have greater degree of predictability than stylistics devices, but the stylistics devices carry a greater amount of information and require a certain effort to decode their meaning. Stylistics devices must be regarded as a special code, which has to be well known for the reader to be deciphered easily. The expressive means and stylistics devices are categorized into five; stylistic classification of the English vocabulary, phonetic expressive means and stylistic devices, lexical expressive means and stylistic Devices, syntactical expressive means and stylistic devices and the functional Styles of the English language.

The most powerful expressive means of any language is phonetic. The human voice can indicate subtle nuances of meaning that no other means can attain. Pitch, melody, stress, drawling, drawing out certain syllables, whispering, a singsong manner of speech and other ways of using the voice are more effective than any other means in intensifying an utterance emotionally or logically.

a. Lexical Expressive Means and Stylistic Devices

According to Galperin (1981:125), the lexical expressive means and stylistic devices can be divided into three main layers:

1) Interaction of different types of lexical meaning

The stylistic effect of the lexical means is achieved through the binary opposition of dictionary and contextual or logical, emotive or primary and derivative meanings of a word. There are three types of interaction of different of lexical meaning such as:

a) Interaction of primary dictionary and contextually imposed meanings.

The interaction or interplay between the primary dictionary meaning (the meaning which is registered in the language code as an easily recognized sign for an abstract notion designating a certain phenomenon or object) and a meaning which is imposed on the word by a micro-context may be maintained along different lines (Galperin, 1981:125). The interaction of different types consists of the following groups of words:

(1) Metaphor

Metaphor is language that directly connects seemingly unrelated subjects. More generally, a metaphor describes a first subject as being or equal to a second object in some way. Where with few words, emotions, and associations from one context are associated with objects and entities in a different context. According to Vivian & Jackson (1961:307) Metaphor, on the other hand is not stated explicitly but implied.

(2) Metonymy

Metonymy is the use of word or phrase for another which it bears an important relation, as the effect of the cause, the abstract for the concrete and similar contraction. Perrine (1991:65) says that metonymy is the use of something closely relates for the thing actually meant. In metonymy, the meaning of a word is extended from its ordinary referent to something associated with that referent (Vivian & Jackson, 1961:309).

(3) Irony

Irony as a figure of speech represents a particular kind of extended reference: Extension in a direction opposite to the normal one. That is, a word or expression used ironically takes on a meaning which sharply contrasts with or even in effect contradicts its ordinary meaning (McArthur, 1992:532).

b) Interaction of logical and emotive meanings

The emotional elements of the language have a tendency to wear out and constantly replaced by new ones. Almost any word can acquire a lesser degree of emotiveness. In other words, emotiveness in language is a category of our feelings are expressed not directly but indirectly, that is, by passing through our minds. We shall try to distinguish between elements of language which have emotive meaning in their semantic structure and those which acquire this meaning in the context under the influence of a stylistic device or some other more expressive means in the utterance. The interaction of logical and emotive meanings consists of the following groups of words:

(1) Interjection and exclamatory word

According to Leonard (1933), Interjection is a word or expression that occurs as an utterance on its own and expresses a spontaneous feeling or reaction. Interjections are subdivided and classified in several ways. A common distinction is based on relations to other word categories:

primary interjections (examples: Oops!, Ouch!, Huh?), while secondary interjections are words from other categories that come to be used as interjections in virtue of their meaning (examples: Damn!, Hell!)

(2) The Epithet

The definition of epithet has changed more recently and has come to mean something negative or derogatory. However, in general an epithet is a glorified nickname. According to Galperin (1981:143), the epithet is a stylistic device based on the interplay of emotive and logical meaning in an attributive word/phrase or even sentence used to characterize an object and pointing out to the reader, and frequently imposing on him, some of the properties or features of the object with the aim of giving an individual perception and evaluation of these features or properties. The epithet is markedly subjective and evaluative. The logical attribute is purely objective, non-evaluating. It is descriptive and indicates an inherent or prominent feature of the thing or phenomenon in question.

(3) Oxymoron

According to Keraf (1985:136) says that an oxymoron is like language style which contains contradiction using contrary words with the same phrase. In general, oxymora are either expressions that are deliberately crafted to be contradictory such as dark day and pretty ugly or those inadvertently or incidentally phrases contain a contradiction, often as a result of a punning use of one or both words as even odds and divorce court (Wegmaan, 2008: 4).

c) Interaction of logical and nominal

(1) Antonomasia

Antonomasia is lexical stylistics device in which a proper name is used instead of a common noun or otherwise. This stylistics device is based on the immediate interplay between logical and nominal meanings of a word which is realized in the text. The realization of only one meaning does not give a stylistics device. Antonomasia stands close to epithets. Another type of antonomasia is metonymic antonomasia which is based on the relation of contiguity. A product can be named after the inventor, manufacturer or after the place where it is produced (Galperin, 1981; 150-151).

b. Intensification of a certain feature of a thing or phenomenon

This is an entirely different principles from which the second group is based, that interaction between two lexical means of simultaneously are materialized in the context. In this third group, the quality picked out may be seemingly unimportant, and it is frequently transitory, but for a special reason it is elevated to the greatest importance and made into a telling feature. The intensification of a certain feature of a thing or phenomenon consists of the following groups of words:

1) Simile

(McArthur, 1992:36) Simile is a figure in which a comparison is stated explicitly. The comparison is expressed by using of some words or phrase, such as like, as, than, similar to, resembles, or seems. The comparison has to be specific and needs the sign posting words between two kinds of ideas or objects.

2) Periphrasis

The term 'periphrasis' refers to use of excessive language and surplus words to convey a meaning that can otherwise be conveyed with fewer words and in more direct manner. The use of this literary device can embellish a sentence, to create a grander effect, to beat around the bush and to draw attention away from the crux of the message being conveyed.

3) Euphemism

The term 'euphemism' is used to refer the literary practice of using a comparatively milder or less abrasive form of a negative description instead of its original, unsympathetic form. This device is used when we write about matters such as sex, violence, death, crimes and things "embarrassing". The purpose of euphemisms is to substitute unpleasant and severe words with more genteel ones in order to mask the harshness. The use of euphemisms is sometimes manipulated to lend a touch of exaggeration or irony in satirical writing.

4) Hyperbole

Hyperbole/Overstatement is a rhetorical term for exaggeration or overstatement, usually deliberate and not met to be taken too literally (McArthur, 1992:491) .In hyperbole, the speakers do not expect to be taken literally but they are only adding emphasis to what they really mean or in other words, they are overstating their statement. Like all figure of speech, Hyperbole may be used with a variety of effects such as humorous or grave, fanciful or retrained, convincing or unconvincing. The media and the advertising industry often use hyperbole (which may be described as hype or media hype).

c. Peculiar Use of set Expression

Peculiar use of set expression can also be named stylistic phraseology or phraseological stylistic, as it studies phraseological units in their no ordinary application in a text. In linguistic, phraseology describes the context in which a word is used. This often includes typical usage/sequences, such as idioms, phrasal verbs and multi-word units. Phraseological unit or idiom is ready made combination of words reproduced in speech as a unity.

1) Proverb and saying

According to Ray (1978) proverb is usually defined, an instructive sentence, or common and pithy saying, in which it is more generally designed than expressed, famous for its peculiarity or elegance, and therefore it is adapted by the learner as well as the vulgar, by which it is distinguished from counterfeits which want such authority.

2) Epigrams

According to Galperin (1981: 169) an epigram is a stylistic device same to a proverb, the only difference that epigrams are coined by individuals whose names we know, while proverbs are the coinage of the people.

3) Allusions

According to Keraf (2007:141) Allusion is like a reference which tries to suggest the similarity between people, place or accident. Literary, mythological fact of everyday life is made in the course of speaking or writing. The use of allusion presupposes knowledge of the factsthing person alluded to on the part of the reader or listener.

A man named Mr. Wednesday offers Shadow a job. Mr. Wednesday tracks him and offers him a job to be his assistant and Shadow accepts.

Shadow and Wednesday go to the House on the Rock for a meeting. They meet two men, Czernobog and Mister Nancy. Shadow sees that Wednesday, Czernobog, and Mr. Nancy are gods who came to America when the people who believed in them came to America. Wednesday is the Norse god Odin. Wednesday tells the other gods that the new gods hate the old and he wants to band together against the new gods. The old Gods are our teacher in many way and they are meant to teach us how to be good and virtuous. The new gods are what people worship now, like internet, media, and drugs. Wednesday tells Shadow he is going to live in Lakeside between trips. In Lakeside, Shadow meets Hinzelmännchen who tells him about a raffle to guess which day an old car will fall through the ice on the lake.

After some trips with Wednesday, Lakeside policeman Chad Mulligan arrests Shadow for parole violation. While Shadow is in prison, the new gods manipulate the television and show Wednesday get shot. Czernobog and Mr. Nancy pick Shadow up. They arrange to pick up Wednesday's body. Shadow recognizes one of the new god's men as Low Key Lyesmith, a friend from prison, who is the god Loki. Shadow performs a vigil for Wednesday's body by being tied to the World Tree for nine days, and dies after three days. The gods assemble at Rock City for the war. Laura stabs Mr. World, one of the new gods' men, with a stick from the World Tree. Shadow arrives, and Wednesday tells him that he and Loki, who was Mr. World, were behind the war so they could feed off of the power expended during the battle. Shadow tells the gods that Loki and Wednesday have tricked them. The gods leave the battle. Shadow takes the gold coin from Laura and she dies. Shadow returns to Lakeside and finds the missing Laura's body in the car on the ice. Shadow confronts Hinzelmännchen, who is a mythical creature, about killing children as a sacrifice to keep the town prosperous. Chad Mulligan as the chief of police in Lakeside comes into the room and shoots Hinzelmännchen in the head.

In fact, the original Burma-Shave was a brushless shaving cream, and Burma-Shave's own roadside signs frequently ridiculed "Grandpa's old-fashioned shaving brush."

Datum 105: “Wide open and unguarded stand our gates, and through them passes a wild motley throng. Men from Volga and Tartar steppes. Featureless figures from the Hoang-ho, Malayan, Scythian, Teuton,,Kelt and Slav, Flying the Old World’s poverty and scorn; These bringing with them unknown gods and rites, Those tiger passions to stretch their claws, in street and alley what strange tongues are these, Accents of menace in our ear, Voices that once theTawer of Babel knew” (p: 167)

The sentence above is categorized as epigram. The sentence is a poem by Thomas Bailey Aldrich with the title Unguarded gates. Aldrich refers to the general policy in US, that all immigrants may be freely to enter the country. In general business interest resisted calls for restriction on the ground, that free immigration insured a plentiful labor supply. America is uniquely defined by it is open borders, expressed in the sonnet by Emma Lazarus (1849th -1877th), “The New Colossus” was placed on a plaque at the Statue of Liberty in 1903th.

Datum 106: *“Tiger’s balls, yeah,
I ate Tiger’s balls*

*Now ain't nobody gonna stop me ever at all
 Nobody put me up against the big black wall
 'Cos I ate that Tiger's testimonials
 I ate Tiger's balls" (p: 174)*

The sentence above is categorized as epigram. The sentence explains that this is a universal collective mind operating behind and expressing itself through the individual consciousness of a myth's author.

Datum 107: "As the Hindu gods are "immortal" only in a very particular sense—for they are born and they die—they experience most of the great human dilemmas and often seem to differ from mortals in a few trivial details . . . and from demons even less. Yet they are regarded by the Hindus as a class of beings by definition totally different from any other; they are symbols in a way that no human being, however "archetypal" his life story, can ever be. They are actors playing parts that are real only for us; they are the masks behind which we see our own faces" (p: 197)

The sentence above is categorized as epigram. This sentence is Hindu Myth Quotes by Anonymous. As the Hindu gods are "immortal" only in a very particular sense for their life and die. The experience most of the great human dilemmas and often seem to differ from mortals in a few trivial details, and from demons even less. They are regarded by the Hindus as a class of beings by definition totally different from any other; they are symbols in a way that no human being, however "archetypal" his life story, can ever be. They are actors playing parts that are real only for them they are the masks behind which we see their own faces.

Datum 108: "You lined up when you died, and you'd answer for your evil deeds and for your good deeds" (p: 261)

The sentence above is categorized as epigram. The sentence expresses so much of Gaiman's works, this is the sort of book that contributes a half-dozen quotes to my quote file during my first reading. Gaiman always impresses me by not only managing to portray gods as human without losing the numinous edge, but sustaining that portrayal through is very extended contact with the same god. The sentence despite the interlude with the undertakers, the long interlude in small-town life in Lakeside, and the numerous other digressions and meanderings of a book that's not in much of a hurry to get anywhere, there is a plot and a definite conclusion, and Gaiman has some interesting twists in store at the end of that road. There is a lot of philosophical currents going on under the surface, not all of which cohere, but Gaiman does pull a lot of them together. The resolution can be a bit of an anticlimax, but I think it's a fitting.

c. Allusions

Allusion is a figure of speech which refers to an object or circumstance from an external context.

Datum 109: “In the late afternoon the sun began to lower, gilding the world in elf-light, a thick warm custardy light that made world feel unearthly and more than real” (p: 225-226)

The sentence “In the late afternoon the sun began to lower, gilding the world in elf-light, a thick warm custardy light that made world feel unearthly and more than real” is categorized as allusions. The sentence is an allusion to sunset, which it is very common with its color, afternoon, and beautifulness.

B. Analysis of Data

In this analysis the author tries to analyze the stylistics in literary texts in the American Gods novel by Neil Gaiman. Stylistic studies can be aimed at a variety of language uses and are not just limited to literature, but usually stylistics is often associated with literary language. Stylistic analysis is usually intended to explain something generally in the literature to explain the relationship between language and artistic functions and meanings. Besides that, the stylistic can also aim to determine how far the language used shows deviations, how the author uses linguistic signs to obtain special effects.

American Gods is a novel fiber with conflict, written in the style of real-styled stylists, which contains a lot of guidance for everyone. American Gods novel add a very interesting theme, mythology. Especially how God was created and died. It contrary to popular belief, God does not create humans but humans create gods and try to explain strange phenomena around them. Gods depend on human attention and once that attention disappears the god will die and fade into the void. All are told by choosing unique vocabulary.

The uniqueness and distinctiveness of language usage in American Gods novels are influenced by social factors of the author. In addition, the author's Education also plays a role in realizing the uniqueness and distinctiveness of vocabulary which expressed through the description of the story.

As a writer Neil Gaiman is outstanding, he received education from several British Church schools such as, Fonthill's school in East Grinstead, Ardingly Collage (1970 - 1974), and Whitgift School at Croydon (1974 - 1977).

Neil Gaiman settled in Minneapolis about 1972nd until now. With the background of his life, Neil Gaiman easily uses the demands or guidance of life in his writing.

Furthermore, the using of the stylistics makes the description of the story more interesting and has its own aesthetic value. In addition to the analysis of data it is also intended to strengthen the meaning contained in the sentence. Based on the description of the data, it can be seen that the use of words, phrases, and clauses used by Neil Gaiman in American Gods has its own uniqueness and distinctiveness which other writers do not have.

A portrayal of the story is not only about the story of Nordic mythology and Slavic, but also reveals figures from Egyptian mythology and Hinduism described with a connotative but compelling vocabulary. More than that, the majority of diction in the American Gods is the creation of Neil Gaiman himself as a prolific author who creates a new vocabulary that is a characteristic of the author.

Neil Gaiman to describe the story often uses the main clause and subordinate clause so the sentence is very long. Neil Gaiman's distinctive character in describing stories is by using long sentences using conjunctions that are a marker of subordinate clauses.

The image of the American Gods novel basically uses careful, coherent and beautiful strings of language in accordance with the circumstances described and many aspects of morph-syntax that support its own peculiarities. The prominent attraction of Neil Gaiman's work also lies in the vast possibilities of exploration of characters and events, so that the paragraph always contains wealth.

Neil Gaiman is a word artist, he presents interesting, inspirational stories and strong descriptions.

Based on the analysis of the data on the use of the stylist in describing the story, it was able to revive the depiction of the real-life reality experienced by the characters and refresh the disclosure. Clearly with the use of the vocabulary the expression of intentions becomes more impressive, more alive, more clear and interesting.

The vocabulary used in describing the character of the character is completely different from other authors. The selection and use of figurative language that is so precise and astute, has a suggestive effect on the reader and with his language style Neil Gaiman immediately targets the center of the reader's awareness. Neil Gaiman through the American Gods novel has its own peculiarities and uniqueness in the selection and use of vocabulary and language style. That made the style for Neil Gaiman as a talented writer.

The types of language styles that are widely used by Neil Gaiman is American Gods:

1. Simile

Simile is the intensification of some one feature of the concept in question is realized in a device and expressed by liaison such as, like, like, etc. (Galperin, 1981: 153). Based on existing data the following are some of the simile styles found in the American Gods:

“She looked quite doll-like in the morning light” (p.134)

Dolls are an artificial form of humans and animals. Dolls are one of the comparison models and also has special characteristics. In the simile above the Shadow character compares ZoryaUtrennyaya with a doll even though a doll is a toy. The simile gives an illustration that the beauty possessed by ZoryaUtrennyaya is the same as a beautiful human artificial doll. The function of the Simile above gives a beautiful effect on the story, by comparing a woman with a beautiful doll, making the story more beautiful and alive.

“The woman chuckled like a rain” (p.203)

Rain is the fall of water coming from the sky to the surface of the earth. Shadow compares the voice of a woman who chuckles as the rain, because woman thinks that shadow is crazy. Shadow said he wanted to go to Egypt with an old car from Mississippi that was a great distance. The simile description above gives a picture of the nature of people who always underestimate others. The above simile function has a beautiful effect on the story, by comparing the sounds of people chuckling with waterways, making the story more interesting and comfortable.

“I think they add a kind of zest to the world like salt in a stew” (p.563)

Mystery is something that is not known with certainty and attracts the desire of people. Shadow compares the mystery to the world with salt for stew. The simile illustrates that the world without mystery is not cool, just as stew without salt is bland. The simile function above gives the effect of beauty in the story, by comparing mysteries to life with salt to stews, thus making the story more alive and interesting.

2. Hyperbole

According to Galperin (1981:162) Hyperbole is a device which sharpens the reader's ability to make a logical assessment of the utterance. This is achieved, as is the case with other devices, by awakening the dichotomy of thought and feeling where thought takes the upper hand though not to the detriment of feeling. Hyperbole can be defined as a deliberate overstatement or exaggeration of a feature essential to the object. On existing data here are some hyperbole styles found in the American Gods:

“His voice a triumphant shout that echoed from horizon to horizon” (p.170)

The above hyperbole exaggerates the truth so that it makes no sense because everything that is felt like as fantasy. Shadow did not believe that he had been met with Odin "the father of all things", so the name Odin was said to be continuous shadow from his mouth because he was happy after knowing the truth. The Hyperbola above describes someone's happiness when he meets someone he doesn't expect to meet. Hyperbola gives beauty to the story so that the character is alive and attractive.

“The afternoon sun at her back burned her hair into a platinum aura” (p.390)

In hyperbole above the afternoon sun it is considered doing deeds or behavior like humans who can do work such as burned. The afternoon sun can only be seen using the senses of sight and can't do things like burning hair. The above depiction gives a beautiful evening atmosphere in beautiful colors. The function of hyperbole gives a beautiful effect in the story. The color of the afternoon sun or called sunset affects the surroundings so that the color of the sun burns the woman's hair into a silvery color. The sentence exaggerates the actual story so that it makes the story more interesting and alive

“Shadow imagined the fish freeing itself and swimming off across the sky, and he smiled” (p.458)

The Hyperbola above exaggerates the reality so that it doesn't make sense, because all what shadow feels is just the imagination. Shadow fantasizes that a fish can free itself from the aquarium, swim across the sky and smile. The hyperbole has the true meaning that the Shadow wants to see the fish free and swim where it is supposed to be. The function of hyperbole gives the effect of beauty on the story so that it becomes more interesting.

3. Epigram

Epigrams are terse, witty, pointed statements, showing the ingenious turn of mind of the originator (Galperin,1981:169). Epigrams possess a great degree of independence and therefore, if taken out of the context, will retain the wholeness of the idea they express. They have a generalizing function and are self-sufficient. The most characteristic feature of an epigram is that the sentence gets accepted as a word-combination and often becomes part of the language as a whole. Based on existing data here are some epigram styles found in the American Gods:

“Look at my King all dressed in Red,

*Iko Iko all day,
I bet you five dollars he'll kill you dead,
Jockamo-feena-may" (p.42)*

The sentence above is the song lyrics called iko - iko . This song comes from New Orleans Mardi Gras, has elements of Creole and African languages. The song Iko-iko has a very specific meaning about the Black Indians. The Black Indians are a parade crew (tribe) who march through the streets of New Orleans at Mardi Gras wearing luxurious traditional Indian clothing. "Jockamo-feena-may" is a ritual song used by Mardi Gras Indians that has been around for so long which translates "don't mess with us". Epigram above gives an illustration of Black Indians. Neil Gaiman's epigram function tries to describe the situation of the Black Indian tribes from ethnic, traditional costume and Black Indian culture.

"Wide open and unguarded stand our gates, and through them passes a wild motley throng. Men from Volga and Tartar steppes. Featureless figures from the Hoang-ho, Malayan, Scythian, Teuton, Kelt and Slav, Flying the Old World's poverty and scorn; These bringing with them unknown gods and rites, Those tiger passions to stretch their claws, in street and alley what strange tongues are these, Accents of menace in our ear, Voices that once the Tower of Babel knew" (p.167)

The sentence above is a poem from Thomas Bailey Aldrich. In Unguarded Gates poetry he expresses the anti-immigrant xenophobia and Anglo-American nation superiority shared by many native-born Americans of the time. Aldrich's important reminder of the authoritative sides of American patriotism can come with symbolic symbols like the statue of Liberty. Epigram above provides an overview of the state of America with terrorism as a consistent threats, America has begun to scrutinize the effect of rising immigration and porous borders. Neil Gaiman with his epigram petrified the reader to get to know the history of America.

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTIONS

A. Conclusion

Based on the aspects stylistic classification's of lexical expressive means and stylistic devices, which are used in American Gods novel. Overall, the researcher found 109 data which consist of 6 metaphor, 7 metonymy, 6 irony, 7 interjection and exclamatory words, 9 epithet, 7 oxymoron, 7 antonomasia, 17 simile, 6 periphrasis, 2 euphemism, 12 hyperbole, 11 proverb and saying, 11 epigrams and 1 allusions. 159	Life is hard

	Its Toil and Trouble Keep your Jawline Free from Stubble Burma Shave
167	Wide open and unguarded stand our gates, and through them passes a wild motley throng. Men from Volga and Tartar steppes. Featureless figures from the Hoang-ho, Malayan, Scythian, Teuton,,Kelt and Slav, Flying the Old World's poverty and scorn; These bringing with them unknown gods and rites, Those tiger passions to stretch their claws, in street and alley what strange tongues are these, Accents of menace in our ear, Voices that once the Tawer of Babel knew.
174	Tiger's balls, yeah, I ate Tiger's balls Now ain't nobody gonna stop me ever at all Nobody put me up against the big black wall 'Cos I ate that Tiger's testimonials I ate Tiger's balls.
197	As the Hindu gods are "immortal" only in a very particular sense— for they are born and they die—they experience most of the great human dilemmas and often seem to differ from mortals in a few trivial details . . . and from demons even less. Yet they are regarded by the Hindus as a class of beings by definition totally different from any other; they are symbols in a way that no human being, however "archetypal" his life story, can ever be. They are actors playing parts that are real only for us; they are the masks behind which we see our own faces.
261	You lined up when you died, and you'd answer for your evil deeds and for your good deeds.
