Title : An Analysis of English Lexical Collocation in Transactional Speaking among Students of English Education Department at Alauddin State Islamic University of Makassar
Consultant I : Dr. H. Nur Asik, M.Hum.
Consultant II : Dr. Hj. Mardiana, M.Hum.

This study focused on the use of lexical collocations in transactional speaking skills of final year students majoring in English at the State Islamic University of Alauddin Makassar. This study aimed to determine the ability of final year students of the English education study program at UIN Alauddin Makassar in using Lexical Collocation and identify the type of lexical collocation used by final year students of the English education study program at UIN Alauddin Makassar in transactional speaking skills.

The study conducted in Alauddin State Islamic University of Makassar. The subject of this study were the final year students of English Education Department. These students can be categorized as the intermediate learners of English because they took speaking lectures one to three. It was important for their collocational knowledge to be native-like.

This study aimed to determine the ability of the students in using English Lexical collocations and identify the types of English lexical collocation they use in transactional speaking. This study used a descriptive method. Researcher used interview as the data collection tool. Then, the researcher analysed the transcript of the interviews. In analysing, researcher determined the collocation words and the types too, used Oxford online collocation dictionary to check whether the collocation were true or not.

The findings showed that the final year students of English Education Department at Alauddin State Islamic University of Makassar used English lexical collocations in their transactional speaking. Researcher found 179 English lexical collocations are used by the students. 81 of those collocations are correct. Researcher also found that they used four types from total 6 types (based on Benson&Ilson) of English lexical collocation which they tend to use the type 1 than the other types. The study therefore suggested that the teacher and students should more concerned about the collocational knowledge in this case lexical collocation.

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

In this chapter, researcher explained about the reason to choose the topic of the research or the background, then about research problem, research objective, research significances, research focus and description. For more detail explanation can be seen below.

A. Background

Speaking is one of the important skills for students who learn English specifically for English Education Department students'. Students need to speak English with the lecturers and the other students to practice their spoken English. Therefore, they can speak fluently.

Many people say or think that the students from English Education Department are the students who can speak English better than the students from another majors. This is the general reason about why English Education students have to concern their speaking skills, this assumption is true, but it cannot be an absolute reason to make all students of English Education Department are fluent in spoken English, because many factors affect the students in speaking English. To conclude, speaking is useful for the students to speak with other people such as their friends, lecturers, and native speakers to improve their speaking skills.

The importance of improving the speaking skills is also demonstrated in the Qur'an Surah Al Qashas verse 33-35 as follows:

قَالَ رَبِّ إِنِّي قَتَلْتُ مِنْهُمْ نَفْسًا فَأَخَافُ أَنْ يَقْتُلُونِ ﴿٣٣﴾
 وَأَخِي هَارُونُ هُوَ أَفْصَحُ مِنِّي لِسَانًا فَأَرْسَلْهُ مَعِيَ رِدْءًا يُصَدِّقُنِي إِنِّي أَخَافُ
 أَنْ يُكَذِّبُونِ ﴿٣٤﴾
 قَالَ سَنَشُدُّ عَضُدَكَ بِأَخِيكَ وَنَجْعَلُ لَكُمَا سُلْطَانًا فَلَا يَصِلُونَ إِلَيْكُمَا
 بِأَيِّدِنَا أَنْتُمْ وَمَنِ اتَّبَعَكُمَا الْغَالِبُونَ ﴿٣٥﴾

Meaning:

“He said, “My Lord, indeed, I killed from among them someone, and I fear they will kill me.”

“And my brother Aaron is more fluent than me in tongue, so send him with me as support, verifying me. Indeed, I fear they will deny me.”

“[Allah] said, “We will strengthen your arm through your brother and grant you both supremacy so they will not reach you. [It will be] through Our signs; you and those who follow you will be the predominant.”

[source: <https://quran.com/28>]

These verses contain information about the worry of Prophet Musa a.s. when he receive the command from Allah to fight the ruthless Firaun. Musa a.s. did not want to escape from the responsibility of da'wah assigned by his Lord, but he wanted to get things that could help him in carrying out his duties and overcome all obstacles that would hinder his da'wah. Therefore Musa a.s told his All-Knowing Lord that he left the kingdom of Pharaoh out of fear of his injustice and oppression of his soldiers, because he had killed one of them and the news of this incident had spread to all corners of the land, if they saw it they would surely would kill him in retaliation for the murder he accidentally committed. Therefore, Prophet Musa a.s. need help from others, his brother Aaron. He choose Aaron because, “... he is more fluent (speaking) than I am... to justify my words... (Quran verse 28:34). This verse explain that the ability to speak clearly, fluence is very necessary for the perfection of communication.

The English students must be able to speak in English. In other words, the speaking skill is needed. Therefore, communication in English between the students either with other students or the lecturers is important and it can be the exercise to be native-like. They have to practice more often inside or outside the classroom to improve their speaking skills.

One of the ways to be native-like is learning about collocation. In speaking, most of the native-speakers use collocation. As Altuwairesh state that “researchers agree that collocational knowledge is part of the native-speakers’ competence (McCarthy, 1990; Nesselhauf, 2003).” Therefore, based on Hammadi state that “...collocations have to be highlighted when teaching English as a foreign language because collocational input leads to improve students’ fluency ...,” the English learners will be easier to be native-like.

As a matter of fact, students in English Education Department have ever learnt about English collocation. But, the lecturers mostly do not emphasize it as an important thing to raise students’ vocabulary. As Hammadi F Z (2015) state that both of learners and teacher is less concern to the English collocation. Hence, they product wrong words formation for example “fast train” (a collocation); the “fast” is the collocation of train and if the “train” fit with “quick”, it would not sound natural.

Based on the researcher's experience while studying at the Department of English Education, many students make mistakes in forming words when they speak. This might happened because the influence of the mother tongue, Indonesian language. As May Fan (2009) stated that using of collocation by the second English learners is less than English native speakers and they are having difficulties on using collocation properly. Fan also found that there are influence for the collocation words forming with the mother tongue of the second English learners. Therefore, as the second English learners, the students of English Education Department speak English but they use the style of speak in Indonesian language, their mother tongue.

As Kaharuddin (2018) states that, “Learners commonly memorize two types of vocabulary words i.e. content words and function words. These two words are used to help learners to convey their ideas in English. Content of words can often be identified as nouns, verbs, adjectives, and adverbs. Collocation include in content of words.”

As Nation (2000) also states that, “...collocational knowledge is important for developing both fluency and accuracy.”

Therefore by learning collocation, students can express what they are feeling and tell their friends with their own styles in spoken English because using collocation is one of ways to improve vocabularies, it will make students become more fluent in English.

There are seven types of collocation when students want to understand about collocation, those are verb plus adverb, verb plus preposition, noun plus noun, adjective plus noun, adverb plus adjective, verb plus noun, and noun plus verb.

As Mc Carthy (1991) also states that, “Most are already in agreement that vocabulary is a rather catch-all term and what we need to do at this point is to look at some of the specific relationship between vocabulary choice, context (in the sense of situation in which the discourse is produced) and co-text (the actual text surrounding any given lexical item).”

From the statement co-text more refers to collocation that is knowledge about two words or more that is matched together and used it in spoken or written English.

Collocation is really helps students to fluent their English because by knowing collocation, they can produce words cohesion. These are researchers' statements about collocation for the EFL students. The first, Mrs. Hammadi Fatima Zohra (2015) states that the common learning strategy of the students used is about synonym. It affects the collocation structure be ungrammatical collocations, this problem has encountered by the Arab EFL learners (Farghal & Obidiet, 1995) and Boonyasaquan in Mrs. Hammadi Fatima Zohra (2015) discovered that Thai EFL learners rely on synonymy strategy, the learners use their mother tongue language pattern of collocation in English language, especially when it relates to adjectives-noun combination leading to problem in collocations. Synonymy strategy is a strategy used by learners to make it easier for themselves to form words using the patterns of their mother tongue. Thus, synonymy is one of the major sources of miscollocation (Guo, 2009). Next, collocation is necessary to be successful in learning English as the second learner and can be native-like. But, the advanced students hard to master about collocation too. They are also hard to differentiate between the collocational restrictions between the L1 and the L2 (Elahe Attar and Hamid Allami (2013). Their object in the research is Iranian EFL learners. The last, based on the researcher experience, there were many students lacked of collocation knowledge. This happened when the English Education Department students presented their material but use wrong collocation. Their lecturer concern about it and suggest to learn about English collocation. Therefore, they can be more native-like especially in speaking English. The students who did the same mistake in collocation was not only once but many times. Even, the lecturer found the mistakes in their English speaking and writing.

The important thing that the researcher underlined here was that most EFL students in any country, especially in Indonesia at the Department of English Education at the State Islamic University of Alauddin Makassar, made the same mistake in using collocations. One possibility that caused this case to occur was that they do not recognize collocations. Then, the researcher was interested in showing the importance of collocation and making collocation familiar to English students. Here, the researcher analyzed the collocation of English in speaking, especially in transactional speaking. In this case, the researcher interviewed final year students majoring in English Education at Alauddin State Islamic University Makassar to find out whether final year students use lexical collocation or not.

The researchers interested in analyzing about their skills of using English collocation in speaking because researcher thought that speaking was more often used by students in daily life, in the formal or informal situation, and the first insight that people pay attention was their spoken English. Therefore, the researcher presented the research about analyzing the English lexical collocation in students' transactional speaking skills among students of English education department at Alauddin State Islamic University of Makassar.

B. Research Problem

The objective of this research were to identify the English lexical collocation words from the seventh semester students' transactional speaking at English Education Department. Therefore, reasearcher formulated three research questions as follow:

1. Do the final year students of English Education Department use lexical collocations in their transactional speaking?
2. What are the kinds of lexical collocation types that appeared in students' transactional speaking at English Education Department?
3. What are the students' error lexical collocation in their transactional speaking?

C. Research Objectives

Based on the research problems above, the objective of this research are:

1. To find out whether or not students use English lexical collocation and
2. To identify kinds of English lexical collocation that it is found in students' transactional speaking.
3. To identify students' mistake in using lexical collocation in transactional speaking.

D. Research Significances

By conducting this research, the researcher hoped wholeheartedly that the significances in the using of collocation in spoken English of the students of English Education Department as follows:

1. Theoretical Significance

This study described the types of lexical collocations that students used in spoken English in transactional speaking. Therefore, the researcher expected the findings of this study to be an explicit reference for increasing students' vocabulary in spoken English.

2. Practical Significance

This research served three practical significances in spoken English in transactional speaking. Those were the students, teacher and the other researcher.

a. Significance for the Students

The researcher hoped that the students realized the benefit of lexical collocational knowledge to improve them in spoken English especially in transactional speaking. The students learn more about lexical collocation if they want to be more fluently or native-like when speaking English.

b. Significance for the lecturer

The researcher hoped that they used this as a reference to take action to teach the students about lexical collocation to help students improve their vocabularies especially for speaking. Moreover, the lecturer can input lexical collocation material in their lesson plan as the part of the speaking subject or the other subject too that has relation with the skill of speaking.

c. Significance for the other researcher

The researcher hoped that this research can be a good reference for the next research that concerned about students' transactional speaking skills especially about the lexical collocation.

E. Research Focus and Description

This research focused on the types of lexical collocation. That was the lexical collocation that students used when they speak English. Here the researcher explained the description of the key terms to understand the topic of this study easily as follows:

1. The Analysis

The word “analysis” have similar words based on Cambridge thesaurus dictionary. From the dictionary, the researcher took the word “search” to make a comprehensible meaning. Search means to find something, in this case, to find the words of English lexical collocation in students transactional speaking.

2. English Collocation

English collocation is two English words fit together or the words that is paired together. These words look similar with phrase but it is not because it has its own rules. Those rules are different with the phrase rules. This is also one of reason that collocation can be stated as unique words.

3. English Lexical Collocation

English lexical collocation is one of kinds of English collocation. This type of collocation consist of two class of words or content of words. There six type of English Lexical Collocation.

4. English Education Department

English Education Department is one of major in a university that focusing on the study of English for Education. The students of this department are taught about English and how to teach it in the future. This department is one of the favourite department in State Islamic University of Alauddin Makassar, therefore it is quite challenging to enter this department.

CHAPTER II

REVIEW OF RELATED LITERATURE

This chapter contains about the explanation of some previous related research findings, some pertinent ideas, and the conceptual framework. Here, researcher explained about the findings of the previous other researcher, the definition of some terms in this research or the theories that related with this research, and the last was the explanation about the conceptual framework.

A. Previous Related Research Findings

There are some researchers have the same topic that can support this research. The findings of the other researchers can be seen as follow:

The first, Xiujuan Zhou (2016) conducted the research under the title “A Corpus-Based on High Frequency Verb Collocation in the Case of “HAVE”” shows that most of the Chinese non-English major learners use the collocation have. They use low collocation types because they are affected by their mother tongue and overgeneralization.

The second, May Fan (2009) conducted the research under the title “An exploratory study of collocational use by ESL students – A task based approach” shows that through their writing task, Hong Kong ESL students have lower collocational competence than the native-speaker British students because the collocation indeed still problematic by the second learners. Here, the ESL are also affected by their mother tongue.

The third, Maria Moreno Jaen (2007) conducted the research under the title “A Corpus-driven of a Test for Assessing the ESL Collocational Competence of University Students” shows that the ESL students have lower productive collocational competence than the receptive collocational competence. The researcher do the research using the corpus based – data provided by the Bank of English and the British National Corpus.

The fourth, Elahe Movahediyan Attar (2013) conducted the research under the title “The Effects of Teaching Lexical Collocations on Speaking Ability of Iranian EFL Learners” shows that teaching the Iranian students about lexical collocation have positive effects and can increase students’ collocational knowledge on speaking.

The fifth, Suthatip Thongvitit and Narathip Thumawongsa (2011) conducted the research under the title “A Corpus-Based Study of English Collocations Found in the Abstracts of Research Articles Written by Thai EFL Writers” shows that noun + preposition and adjective + noun collocation (grammatical and lexical collocations) is used the most often by the Thai EFL writers from their abstract of their articles writing. There is the most often misused of the collocation, those are noun + preposition and verb + noun collocations (Grammatical and lexical collocations).

Here, the researcher wants to describe shortly about the research that be conducted. The researcher analyze the understanding of the collocational knowledge through the types of collocation that students use in spoken English as the second learner because there is still no researcher do this research in Alauddin State Islamic University of Makassar especially in English Education Department.

B. Some Pertinent Ideas

1. Definition of Speaking Skills

There are many definitions of speaking that have been proposed by some experts. Speaking is a productive language skill (Siahaan, 2008:95). It means that speaking is a person's skills to produce sounds that exist at the meaning and be understood by other people, so that able to create of good communication. Furthermore, speaking is the use of language to communicate with other (Fulcher, 2003:23). It means that this activity involves two or more people in whom the participants are both hearers and speakers having to react to whatever they hear and make their contribution a high speed, so each participant has intention or a set of intention that he wants. So, the English teacher should active the students speaking ability by providing communicative language activities and interesting media in the classroom and then giving them the opportunities to practice their speaking skill as much as possible.

According to (Bailey, 2000:25), speaking is a process of interaction where speakers intend to build meaning through producing, receiving and processing information. It means through the communication, when people using their own way to speak or choose words, people can understand each other. They can share many things about interesting thing or something that it is important to be talk about.

From those theories, it can be concluded that speaking skill is related to communication. Speaking is a skill to use a language appropriately to express someone's ideas, opinions, or feelings in order to give or get information and knowledge from other people who do communication.

2. Component of Speaking Skills

a. Pronunciation

It alludes to "the way for students to deliver the expression of words obviously when they are speaking" (Kline, 1998, p. 69). In a similar way, "English elocution doesn't add up to dominance of a rundown of sounds or secluded words. All things considered, it adds up to learning and rehearsing the explicitly English method of making a speaker's musings simple to follow" (Gilbert, 2008, p. 1). That is, elocution exemplifies a bunch of perspectives, in particular, stress, pitch, volume, and discourse pace that permit correspondence when at least two speakers collaborate.

b. Grammar

It is needed for the students to organize sentences in a fitting manner when they trade thoughts both in composed and oral structures. Williams (2008) states that "syntax is the proper investigation of the design of a language and portrays how words fit together in significant developments" (p.2). All in all, it is to satisfy with right examples of a language to have an unmistakable conveyance of the message

c. Vocabulary

'Vocabullary can be characterized as the expressions of a language, including single things and expressions or pieces of a few words which pass on a specific importance, the manner in which individual words do' (Lessard, 2013, p. 2). In like manner, vocabullary manages words we impart in oral and composed structure. Open jargon alludes to the words we perceive through perusing and tuning in. Useful vocabullary is identified with the words we use to move data through composition and speaking (Lehr, Osborn, and Hiebert, 2004). In short, vocabulary is the lexicon that students need to send and comprehend open expectations.

d. Fluency

It typically has to do with communicating oral language in a decent speed without interference. In educating and learning measure, if the educator needs to actually look at understudies' familiarity, "the instructor permits understudies to communicate unreservedly without interference. The point is to assist understudies with talking smoothly and without any problem. The educator doesn't right quickly while the thought being that an excessive amount of remedy meddles with the progression of discussion" (Pollard, 2008, p. 16). This implies that there ought to be a sensible method to give students criticism or revision when talking not to break the progression of the discourse. Similarly, to impart easily, a few understudies delay to stay away from syntactic mistakes, make some bogus beginnings, reformulate sentences, build expressions, and handle trades to keep in a proportional correspondence (CEFW, 2016).

e. Interaction

It assumes a significant part in correspondence since understudies investigate different structures to trade thoughts. They break down, make, dispatch, and decipher verbal and nonverbal messages. Thus, Brown (2007) proclaims that "connection is a community trade of considerations, sentiments, or thoughts between at least two individuals, bringing about a corresponding impact on one another" (p.212). In like way, Rivas (as referred to in Brown, 2007): "Through connection, understudies can build their language store as they pay attention to or read legitimate etymological material, or even the yield of their kindred understudy in conversation, dramas, joint critical thinking assignments, or discourse diaries" (p.213). Subsequently, connection assists students with trading musings, sentiments, feelings, and learn new data.

3. Type of Speaking Skills

Based on the function, there are sorts of type on spoken English or English speaking skills. The first, interactional speaking, the second, transactional speaking, and the last, speaking performance (Richards, 2008). Beside, Brown and Yule (1983 in Nunan, 1989) stated that there are two fundamental types of functions of speaking, those are transactional and interactional. Yet, the reasearcher focused on the transactional speaking only. Furthermore, the explanation about the interactional speaking, transactional speaking, and performance speaking can be seen below.

1. Interactional Speaking

a. Definition of Interactional Speaking

Interactional speaking or speaking as interaction means the speaking that it functioned to deliver speaking in social interaction to build interpersonal relationship. Brown and Yule (1983) stated that the conversation may be either casual or more formal and it depends on the circumstances, their nature has been well described too.

b. The Main Features of Interactional Speaking

Based on Brown and Yule (1983) served some features in interactional speaking. Those are:

- 1) Focussed on social function
- 2) Represents role relationships
- 3) Represents speaker's identity
- 4) May be formal or casual
- 5) Uses conversational conventions
- 6) Reflects degrees of politeness
- 7) Applies many generic words
- 8) Uses conversational register
- 9) Well constructed

c. Some Skills needed in Interactional Speaking

Richards (2008, p.23) served some skills in interactional speaking. Those are:

- 1) Opening and closing conversations
- 2) Choosing topics
- 3) Making a small talk
- 4) Joking
- 5) Recounting personal incidents and experiences
- 6) Turn taking
- 7) Using adjacency pairs
- 8) Interrupting

9) Reacting to others

10) Using an appropriate style of speaking

2. Transactional Speaking Skills

a. Definition of Transactional Speaking Skills

Course Transactional speaking skills is the skills of speaking that noticed the meaning of the messages and the way of the speaker state the thoughts therefore it can be understood easily by the hearer. (Richards (2008:25). Transactional speaking is also the medium level of skills for the English second learners.

b. The Main Features of Transactional Speaking

According to Richards (2008:25) there are some main features of Transactional Speaking. It can be seen as follow:

- 1) The functions to give and take information.
- 2) It notice the message when communicate.
- 3) Participants use their own way to understand each other.
- 4) It needs more questions, repetitions, checks for comprehension.
- 5) Sometimes there are ideas negotiation.
- 6) Language accuracy is not always important.

c. Some skills needed in transactional speaking

According to Richards (2008:27), there are some skills that is needed when speaking as transaction as follow:

- 1) Explain an intention.
- 2) Describe something.
- 3) Ask questions.
- 4) Ask for clarification.
- 5) Confirm information.
- 6) Justify an opinion.
- 7) Make suggestions.
- 8) Clarify understanding.
- 9) Make comparisons.
- 10) Agree and disagree.

3. Speaking Performance

Speaking performance refers to the public speaking that it is used to transmit information to the audience. The example of this kind of speaking skill are classroom presentation, public announcements, and speeches. For more explanation about this, can be seen as follows.

a. Types of Speaking Performance

According to Brown (2004), there are five types of speaking performance. There are imitative, intensive, responsive, interactive, and expansive in speaking performance kinds.

1. Imitative

Imitative is the ability to imitate a word or phrase or a sentence. This type is like parrot which imitate the sounds.

2. Intensive

Intensive is the type of speaking that assessment the context of production in competences grammatical, phrasal, lexical and phonological. And the kind test of this types is directed response tasks, sentence or dialogue completion tasks and oral questioner and picture cued tasks.

3. Responsive

The responsive types is assessing tasks interactions, it such as question and answer, paraphrasing, giving instructions and directions, test of spoken English (TSE).

4. Interactive

This type is including the tasks that involve long stretches of interactive discourse it such as interviews, role play, discussion, games. And this type has long duration but less interaction such as speeches, telling longer stories, and extended explanation. However researcher use intensive type because this type suitable by the technique which the researcher used in this research because transactional also one of form that can be included in this part too.

5. Expansive

Expansive speaking tasks involve complex and relative stretches of discourse. The variations of this type on monologues, it such as oral presentation, picture-cued storytelling, retelling a story, new event and translation. All the types above can be used in the classroom.

b. The factor influencing the speaking performance

The factors are grouped into two types. They are:

1. Internal Factors

The ability of the students and the psychological aspects of the students included in this internal factor. As its name 'internal factor' it means the factor that appears from the students themselves. There are some factors:

a. Psychology

The psychology factor that is referred here, as cited in (Schwartz, 2005); and (Chandraloka, 2016) is anxiety. Talk about anxiety of the students, it is about the less confidence of the students that appeared because they have problems about their self-esteem, self-confidence, knowledge, and belief in their capabilities, they are always afraid to fail in everything they do because they are always afraid to make a mistake. In opposite, the other students who have good self-esteem, or self-confidence, they have positive reflection on themselves and improve their language learning.

b. Language Competence

It refers to the practical use of the language in the concrete situation. Begin from fluency, intonation, pronunciation, grammar usage, and vocabulary are covered in speaking performance and students have to master it.

c. Topical Knowledge

It is defined as knowledge structures in long-term memory Bachman, L.F., & Palmer (2010) as cited in Tuan & Mai (2015). Topical knowledge is the competence of the students that they can integrate what they know and the actual life then it enables them to use the proper language. Hence it can make them easier when speak in real life and do not feel difficult that caused by anxiety.

2. External Factors

There are some external factors discussed.

a. Performance Condition

According to Nation & Newton (2009) said, undoubtedly, performance conditions can affect speaking. The condition cover the pressure of time; planning, performance standard, and the number of support.

b. The environment of learning

A good language environment can influence students' learning interest. The more active of using English in learning process can help them become more fluent in speaking. Another statement that suitable with this, Minghe & Yuan (2013), "another eternal factor affecting the learners' skill in oral English learning is unsupported learning environment.

c. Speaking problems

There two factors here, linguistic and non-linguistic problems. There are pronunciation, vocabulary, and grammar included in linguistic problems while in non-linguistic problems covers on inhibition, less topic to say, low or uneven participation and mother tongue use.

4. English Collocation

a. Definition of English Collocation

English collocation is the collocation in English language. English collocation is used to differ the collocation of the mother tongue of the second learners. According to Lewis (1997), collocation is a form of words that already fit together consistently or it has co-occurrence. The combinations of any word that do not have co-occurrence are not classified as collocations.

According to Benson et al. (1986) and Lewis (2000), there are two categories of collocations divide it into two major groups. Those are lexical and grammatical collocations. The combination of two content words between nouns, verbs, adjectives, and adverbs are included in lexical collocation. There are some types of the lexical collocation, adjective-noun (ex. Verbal communication), verb-adverb (ex. Examine thoroughly), and verb-noun (conduct research).

According to scholars such as Pawley and Syder (1983) and Wray (2002), collocations was important in second language or foreign language context as they help students become more fluency in English and more native-like. Therefore, the students also will be easy to remember and use the words. A collocation sometimes called as word pairing, the words that is used together. The example of the collocation are “make tea” and “do homework.” (James, 1998).

b. Types of Lexical Collocation

Benson (1986) defined lexical collocations as phrases consisting of dominant words (noun, adjective, verb and a preposition). Noun is a word to state a person, place, things, or ideas. They are in contrast to grammatical collocations, and normally do not contain prepositions, infinitives, or clauses. Typical lexical collocations consist of sixes sub-categories:

1) Type 1 (Adjective + Noun)

The adjective is a word which describes or modifies a noun or pronoun. Beautiful girl, Handsome boy, Good job, Sweet orange, Heavy smoker, Curry favor, High probability, Stale food, Tall body, American people, hard life, hard time, Example : He has been a heavy smoker and drinker all his adult life. They have a hard life and worked for a hard time. We don't have hard evidence that they had used hard drugs.

2) Type 2 (Verb + Noun)

- a) Verb (Usually transitive) + Noun/pronoun (or prepositional phrase)

Collocation is called CA Collocation because they consist of a verb denoting creation or activation and a noun/ a pronoun. For example: (denoting creation) come to an agreement, compose music. (denoting activation) set an alarm, launch a missile.

b) Verb (Meaning eradication and or nullification) + Noun

This lexical collocation combination is called EN (eradication and or nullification) collocation. For example: reject an appeal, revoke a license, annul a marriage, and withdraw an offer. Some verbs denoting similar meaning and that can be used with large number nouns are considered as free combination. For example: the verb destroy can combine with almost any nouns denoting physical objects: village, school, document, etc.

3) Type 3 (Noun + Verb)

The verb names an action characteristic of the person or things designated by the noun. Example: lions roar, cooks crouch, bees' sting, baby sucks, hens hatch, ball rolls.

4) Type 4 (adverb + adjective)

These are the examples of adverb modifies adjective :

- Absolutely wrong That is Absolutely wrong opinion.
- Completely disappointed She look Completely disappointed.
- Extremely difficult The test was Extremely difficult

5) Type 5 (Verb + adverb)

These are the examples of verb and adverb collocation :

- She dresses beautifully

-He drives dangerously

-Thoroughly disapprove

- Fully understand

6) Type 6 (Noun + noun) Collocation:

Noun and noun collocation is a kind of words combination that sound nature to native speakers. The phrase “food stamp” does not sound natural for people who speak English all theist love. The correct one will be “food coupon”

- World capital

- blood vessel

- Ticket seller

- animal fat

- Food chain

- life cycle

- Food coupon

- research project

c. Learners' Problems about Collocation

Jamesas as cited in Carter, (2011), agrees that the correct usage of collocations "contributes greatly to one's idiomaticity and native likeness." Taiwo as cited in Darunee, (2015), sees lexical errors and grammatical errors as equally important. Sonaiya goes even further to say that lexical errors are more serious because effective communication depends on the choice of words. Mahmoud's study shows that most of the collocations produced by students in his study were lexical and most of the grammatical and lexical collocations detected are incorrect.

Collocation problems are largely connected to the students' attempts to write creatively in L2. The students still need to improve their grammar as the framework in writing, which seems to be a part of their incapacity for allowing creativeness now. Boonyasaquan summarized the characteristics of collocation that lead to L2 errors as follows:

- 1) Collocations are frequent co-occurrences of items between which no word can be added. For example, in knife and fork, it is very unusual to add a word to this collocation like, knife, spoon, and fork.
- 2) Collocations consist of components that cannot be replaced by a synonym or word of similar meaning. For example John makes a cake; but not John makes a pancake.
- 3) Collocations are binomials that cannot be reversed. The order of the parts of collocation is more or less fixed, for example, bread and butter, not butter and bread.
- 4) Learners may have intralinguas problems. For example, instead of doing homework, they might incorrectly use making homework.

- 5) When learners learn words through definitions, their chances of using appropriate collocations or remembering the words decrease.
- 6) When students read texts, they may not recognize collocations as meaning full phrases, which would inhibit their understanding of the text. To recap, ESL/EFL learners do have problems in producing

d. The Importance of Collocation in EFL/ESL Education

Since the middle of the 20th century, the power of syntactic rules has been one of the captivations of many scholars, especially those following the Chomsky an approach. According to Pawley & Syder as cited in Hama, (2010), it has been accepted that one of the main parts of the language learners' tasks is to learn structures of rules that form infinite set of sentences in the language, and to distinguish those infinite sentences from ungrammatical structures.

The other statement from Benson & Ilson, they have acknowledged the necessity of studying English collocations as an integral part of language teaching. This specifically has pushed materials designers to take this phenomenon into consideration while designing language teaching/learning materials. Brown, for example, suggested the incorporation of collocations in the EFL/ESL classrooms. She claims that learning collocations not only increases EFL/ESL learners' collocation competence, but also improves their oral fluency, listening comprehension, and reading speed. It has also been suggested that one of the basic reasons that EFL learners often find listening and reading difficult is due to the density of collocations.

According to Pawley & Syder, one of the major secrets behind the fluency of native speakers' language is the ready-made prefabricated units in their minds. Another claim is made by Carter and McCarthy who state that "students do not have to reconstruct the language each time when they want to say something; instead, they can use these collocations as pre-packaged building blocks". Sometimes students, who are insufficient in collocation knowledge, stop in the middle of the conversation because they cannot find suitable phrases for conveying their messages. This is also acknowledged by Hill who claims that collocations make thinking easier because they allow us to "identify and produce complex ideas without using all our brain space to focus on the form of the words". Moreover, Hill in his article states that "students with good ideas often lose grades because they do not know the four or five most important collocations of a key word that is central to what they are writing [or speaking] about". Therefore, collocations always can be used as ready-made phrases for expressing various ideas.

The knowledge and the capability of using collocations are essential for language learners and for the naturalness of language. Unfortunately, however, language learners, even advanced ones also face considerable difficulties in using collocations correctly.

C. Conceptual Framework

English education students are the students who learn English. One of the result of study English is speak fluently. Therefore they are taught about speaking and vocabulary subject at the early semesters. Then, there are a part of speaking and vocabulary subject discussed about collocation.

Talk about speaking, there are some skills. The speaking skills that researcher focused on was only about transactional speaking. English collocation is the word pairing with the other words. Talk about collocation is the same with talk about vocabulary which it can increase students' vocabularies or ways to be used when speaking. It can easier students to speak English, to express what the students want to talk about. While speaking, it has two functions. According to Kaharuddin (2014) the functions of speaking are speaking as interaction, transaction and speaking as performance. Speaking as transaction can be found in real social lives for instance in conversation or dialogue or other terms it is called classroom conversations and casual conversation. Speaking as transaction focused to 'what is said or done' then the information that it was obtained from the conversation would be a quite long explanation. Aside, the speaking as interaction usually shorter than speaking as transaction because it focuses to encourage the interpersonal relationship between the people who do conversation while the speaking as transaction is semi formal conversation.

There are many skills needed when speaking, included collocation, as the micro-skills of speaking (Brown, 2004). Furthermore, Brown said, collocations is one of important thing for the EFL learners. Based on the conceptual framework above, researcher looked for the words of collocations especially lexical collocation in students transactional speaking that it was taken from the interview transcription. Then the researcher looked for about the kinds of lexical collocation that they used when they speak. In the other side, researcher used oxford online collocation dictionary to help the researcher in determining the words and the types of the lexical collocation. With this dictionary, the researcher can knew exactly the words that it was collocate with and the lexical of those words and found the error lexical collocation. Through these steps, the researcher can find out the lexical collocation that final year students' used in transactional speaking and what type of the lexical collocation that students used too. Then identified the mistakes in using the lexical collocation that the students make.

At the end, this showed about how many types lexical collocation that students used. This was used too to show to the students and teachers that lexical collocation was important to be taught or learnt in Speaking lecture. Moreover, as the previous explanation, actually collocation or especially lexical collocation is important to increase students' fluency in not only speaking, but also their listening and reading speed. In other hand, this research can be used a proof about how the students used the lexical collocation in their transactional speaking then researcher hoped that the teacher can take action to teach the students about this materials, and for the students also can be more motivated to increase their collocation words. Therefore, they can learned about it from the teacher or the other sources such as from their friend who had interest to collocation or from dictionaries, hard paper dictionaries or digital dictionaries, etc.

CHAPTER III

RESEARCH METHOD

In this chapter the researcher explain about the research method. In the research method, there are some parts, research method, research setting and subject, research instruments, data collection procedure, and data analysis technique. For more explanation can be seen as follows.

A. Research Method

In general, there are three types of research that researchers can do, namely qualitative research, quantitative research, and action research. This study aims to analyze the use of English lexical collocation in transactional speaking among students of English education department at Alauddin State Islamic University of Makassar. Of course, it is more suitable to use qualitative studies.

Qualitative research is basically interpretive. This means that the research is used as the interpretation of the data. This research is qualitative. Qualitative is research that explores a phenomenon by describing it in non-numeric language in a scientific context and paradigm.

In contrast to quantitative research which is identical to using numerical language. According to Creswell, qualitative research is a means to explore and understand the meaning described by individuals or groups of a social or human problem. The research process involves questions and procedures that arise, data is usually collected in a participant setting, data analysis is constructed inductively from specific themes to general themes, and the researcher makes interpretations of the meaning of the data.

The final written report has a flexible structure. In this study, the researcher considers the phenomenon of the effective domain in language learning. The researcher has used a qualitative approach to investigate and analyze students' abilities about collocation in transactional speaking skills. This research was conducted at the Department of English Education, Alauddin State Islamic University of Makassar.

B. Research Setting and Subject

The setting of this research was conducted at the State Islamic University of Alauddin Makassar on April 2020 until Mei 2021. In this study, the researcher used research subjects, the subject is defined as an individual who participates in a research study or a person from whom data is collected. As Sugiono (2017:117) said that population is generalization area, consists of objects or subjects with specific qualities and characteristics set by the researcher to be studied and drawn conclusions then.

The subjects of this study were final year students of the English Education Department batch 2017 at Alauddin State Islamic University of Makassar. The respondent were consist of 20 students, more specifically they were consists of 19 women and 1 man. They were chosen by their lecture, that they had given the speaking one until three lectures and discourse analysis at their early semester. Therefore, they learnt about how to speak in English and discussed about collocation in discourse analysis lecture at previous.

C. Research Instruments

Creswell said that “in many qualitative studies, inquires collect multiple forms of data and send a considerable time in the natural setting gathering information”. Therefore, the data was gained through several techniques in triangulation as follows:

a) Documentation

Documentation in this research aims to prove authenticity of the data. The documentation was used to support to describe the data in the research. Documentation can be in form of all documents that those are collected as data such as: transcript of interview, and photograph during process of the research.

b) Interview

Interview is a meeting of two persons to exchange information and idea through question and responses, resulting in communication and joint construction of meaning about a particular topic. From the quotations, it can be noted that what the data must be memorized and controlled over the line of questioning. The researcher used the depth interview, by the reason that the participants are not equally as the interviewer. Hence, they be enjoy to answer the questions. The researcher use open-ended questions. In the open ended-questions, the researcher varies some questions in the form of 5W/1H questions that allow the participants answer in free thought, suggestions, and detailed answer. As it was explained by Creswell “these interviews involve unstructured and generally open-ended questions that are few in number and intended to elicit views and opinions from the participants”.

D. Data Collection Procedures

Here the steps of collecting the data that the researcher did in the research are as follows:

1. Documentation

The researcher took the data transcript from the students transactional speaking that it was taken from the interviews. Transcription one of the documents. The other was documentation about how the interview conducted or the photograph. Another form of documentation was the recording of the interviews.

2. Interview

The researcher used interview guide because researcher provided some questions in some topics. The interview questions consisted of 18 number to gain students spoken English to get their transactional speaking, in this case transactional speaking. The interview questions types were open-ended question and it required thought or ideas from the respondents.

The researcher did not interview the students by face to face because of the pandemic. The students did not study in the classroom, but online learning. Therefore, the researcher did the interview by telephone call by number phone than interview through online in social media because most of them lived in rural areas and had bad network. But, some of (small amount) the respondents who had a good network, they were interviewed by online in social media such as Whatsapp.

From the interviews, it was obtained the transactional speaking of the respondents, it was transformed to a transcription. The transcription was analysed to looked for the English lexical collocation and its types.

E. Data Analysis Technique

Data analysis in qualitative research is used when data collection takes place. Miles and Huberman (2014) explain that activities in qualitative data analysis are used interactively and continue until they are finished, therefore the data is saturated. Activities in analyzing the data are mentioned with the following explanation:

a) Data Collection

It is the first step in conducting the qualitative research. The researcher gathered the information as many as possible. In this case the researcher gained the information from the students' analysis collocation by using interview. Then researcher made a transcription of the interview.

b) Data Condensation

Data condensation is the process of selecting, focusing, simplifying, abstracting, and transforming the information that appear in the full corpus (body) of written-up field notes, interview transcripts, documents, and other empirical materials. The data can be stronger by condensing by the researcher.

c) Data Display

Data display is the presentation of the information that was done in short essay, draft, relationship among the category, flowchart and etc. The display should be able to describe the content of the entire data.

d) Conclusion

Conclusion include drawing and verifying. It is the process of elaborating with length argumentation and review of the conducted research. The researcher took the important thing from all the explanation and presented it in brief explanation or some points.

CHAPTER IV

FINDINGS AND DISCUSSION

This chapter present the research findings and discussions based on data collected from the final year students majoring in English. This chapter showed transactional speaking among students of English Education Department at Alauddin State Islamic University of Makassar in using the lexical collocation and determined the kind of lexical collocation types that students at English Education department used in their transactional speaking skills. For more explanation, it can be seen as follows.

1. English Lexical Collocation in Students Transactional Speaking

In this research, the researcher analysed the lexical collocation and types of lexical collocation in the students' transactional speaking. The researcher analyzed 20 students' at the final year of English department of Alauddin State Islamic University of Makassar. In analyzing the types of students' collocation in their transactional speaking skills, the researcher used transcription of the interview that it was used to analyze the lexical collocation of the students' used when they speak. It was found that students used collocation when they speak.

The researcher found 81 students' lexical collocations in transactional speaking from 179 lexical collocations used by final year students majoring in English Education at Alauddin State Islamic University Makassar in the interview procession with the researcher. This was caused by the repetition of the use of collocation by students in the interview procession. In addition, the frequency of lexical collocations usage by final year students was still very small when it viewed from the overall transactional conversation that occurred. From about 31 sentences spoken by students in answering the 18 questions, the used of lexical collocations only ranged from 9-27 words, this data can be seen in Appendix 2.

These results indicated that lexical collocations were not commonly used by final year students. As May Fan (2009) said that it is quite difficult indeed for the second learners to use collocation because when they speak they still affected by the mother tongue. This statement also supported by the Xiujuan Zhou (2016) statement that second learners still affected by their mother tongue and overgeneralisation. This was also because the students' knowledge about lexical collocation was less, as Lewis (1993) cited by Siwi Karmadi Kurniasih, "one element of a collocation pair may be strong, perhaps almost uniquely, suggesting that this degree of fixedness is non-reciprocal."

2. English Lexical Collocation Types

Lexical collocations are classified into six types, namely type 1 (adjective + noun), type 2 (verb + noun), type 3 (noun + verb), type 4 (adverb + adjective), type 5 (verb + adverb) and type 6 (noun + noun). Based on the data in Appendix 2 of 179 lexical collocations used by the final year students at the Department of English Education, Alauddin State Islamic University of Makassar. It can be seen that students used lexical collocation in general. Specifically, they used the type one mostly than the other types instead the other types in their sentences or utterances. For the other types, they used them less than the amount of the type one and more than the type three. More details 100 of those lexical collocation were type 1 were forty one, then type 2 is twenty seven, type 3 is not used at all by students, type 4 is 1, type 5 is two, and type 6 is 6 times.

Based on the using of interview, there are students' lexical collocations, those are:

1. English Lexical Collocation type 1 [Adjective+Noun]

No	Words	Headword	Pattern
1	Bad weather	Weather	Bad (Adjective) + Weather (Noun)
2	Beautiful City	City	Beautiful (Adjective) + City (Noun)
3	Beautiful place	Place	Beautiful (Adjective) + Place (Noun)
4	Best friends	Friends	Best (Adjective) + Friends (Noun)
5	Boarding House	House	Rented (Adjective) + House (Noun)
6	Capital city	City	Capital (Adjective) + City (Noun)
7	Capital town	Town	Capital (Adjective) + Town (Noun)
8	Central city	City	Central (Adjective) + City (Noun)
9	Cold weather	Weather	Cold (Adjective) + Weather (Noun)
10	Compulsory subject	Subject	Compulsory (Adjective) + Subject (Noun)
11	Cool Place	Place	Beautiful (Adjective) + Place (Noun)
12	Difficultest subject	Subject	Difficultest (Adjective) + Subject (Noun)
13	Early morning	Morning	Early (Adjective) + Morning (Noun)
14	English teacher	Teacher	English (Adjective) + Teacher (Noun)
15	Every time	Time	Every (Adjective) + Time (Noun)
16	Family member	Family	Family (Adjective) + Member (Noun)
17	Final year	Final	Last (Adjective) + Year (Noun)
18	Foreign language	Language	Foreign (Adjective) + Language (Noun)

19	Fried rice	Rice	Fried (Adjective) + Rice (Noun)
20	Free time	Time	Free (Adjective) + Time (Noun)
21	Future goal	Goal	Future (Adjective) + Goal (Noun)
22	Hard choice	Choice	Hard (Adjective) + Choice (Noun)
23	History teacher	Teacher	History (Adjective) + Teacher (Noun)
24	Interesting place	Place	Interesting (Adjective) + Place (Noun)
25	Largest city	City	Largest (Adjective) + City (Noun)
26	Long term	Term	Long (Adjective) + Term (Noun)
27	Long time	Time	Long (Adjective) + Time (Noun)
28	Main Goal	Goal	Main (Adjective) + Goal (Noun)
29	Male friend	Friend	Male (Adjective) + Friend (Noun)
30	Modern era	Era	Modern (Adjective) + Era (Noun)
31	Native speaker	Speaker	Native (Adjective) + Speaker (Noun)
32	Natural beauty	Beauty	Natural (Adjective) + Beauty (Noun)
33	New information	Information	New (Adjective) + Information (Noun)
34	Professional teacher	Teacher	Professional (Adjective) + Teacher (Noun)
35	Public places	Places	Public (Adjective) + Places (Noun)
36	Peaceful Atmosphere	Atmosphere	Peaceful (Adjective) + Atmosphere (Noun)
37	Quality time	Time	Quality (Adjective) + Time (Noun)
38	Small town	Town	Small (Adjective) + Town (Noun)
39	Spare time	Time	Spare (Adjective) + Time (Noun)
40	Sunday evening	Sunday	Sunday (Adjective) + Evening (Noun)
41	Three times	Times	Three (Adjective) + Times (Noun)
42	Introvert person	Person	Introvert (Adjective) + Person (Noun)

43	Learned language	Language	Learned (Adjective) + Language (Noun)
44	Rented house	House	Rented (Adjective) + House (Noun)

This type of collocation, many words of this lexical types were found in students transactional speaking. It can be seen from the table above that students looked easier use this type because this was the higher amount of lexical types that students used. As Zareian et.al (2015) conducted research about lexical collocation especially adjective plus noun types, there was a high frequency of this collocation types used by Iranian EFL learners. This is the same as the findings in this research, adjective plus noun types of collocation words are the highest amount than other types of lexical collocation.

2. English Lexical Collocation type 2 [Verb+Noun]

No	Words	Headword	Pattern
1	Balance of the weather	Weather	Balance (Verb) + Weather (Noun)
2	Have time	Have	Have (Verb) + Time (Noun)
3	Learn new language	Language	Learn (Verb) + Language (Noun)
4	Spend my time	Spend	Spend (Verb) + Time (Noun)
5	Have any schedule	Have	Have (Verb) + Any Schedule (Noun)
6	Have many	Have	Have (Verb) + Many Places (Noun)

	places
7	Learn about Indonesian language	Learn	Learn (Verb) + About Indonesian Language (Noun)
8	Learn about Islamic	Learn	Learn (Verb) + About Islamic (Noun)
9	Learn many skills	Learn	Learn (Verb) + Many Skills (Noun)
10	Listening to music	Listening	Listening (Verb) + Music (Noun)
11	Make videos	Make	Make (Verb) + Videos (Noun)
12	Take a nap	Take	Take (Verb) + A Nap (Noun)
13	Take inspiration	Take	Take (Verb) + Inspiration (Noun)
14	Talk about the subject	Talk	Talk (Verb) + The Subject (Noun)
15	Turning on the music	Turning	Turning (Verb) + on The Music (Noun)
16	Waste my time	Waste	Waste (Verb) + My Time (Noun)
17	Watch music video	Watch	Watch (Verb) + Music Video (Noun)
18	Watch TV	Watch	Watch (Verb) + TV (Noun)
19	Watch video	Watch	Watch (Verb) + Video (Noun)
20	Watching Indian movie	Watch	Watching (Verb) + Korean Indian Movie (Noun)

21	Watching Korean drama	Watch	Watching (Verb) + Korean Drama Movie (Noun)
22	Watching movie	Watch	Watching (Verb) + Movie (Noun)
23	Climb the tree	Climb	Climb (Verb) + The Tree (Noun)
24	Enjoy the moment	Enjoy	Enjoy (Verb) + Moment (Noun)

In this type, there is twenty four words of lexical collocation. This type was also one of the lexical type that students' often to used in their speaking. This type took place at the second after the type 1 (adjective plus noun) if the amount of those collocation types were compared. Some of words from students transactional speaking have the same verbs but different words' partner such as verb 'watch', there are students use word 'watch' (the verb) with Korean drama (the adverb), 'watch' with Indian movie. Too, from the twenty two words of this type of collocation, mostly students use word 'watch' (the verb) from their transactional speaking.

This type has less amount of the lexical collocation than the type one, adjective noun combination. In lined with this findings, Rasmatur (2019) state that verb noun combination is more problematic for the English students than the adjective noun combination of the collocation.

3. English Lexical Collocation type 3 [Noun+Verb]

There were no lexical collocation type 3 was found in students transactional speaking, as Suhardijanto et.al that study about the collocation by the English learners of Indonesian that determining which words can be collocated with is not an easy task. For the native speakers, collocation is natural, but, for language learners, it often makes them feel frustrated (Wray, 2002; Wang, J.T. & Good, R.L., 2007).

4. English Lexical Collocation type 4 [Adverb+Adjective]

There were not any collocation found in this type. It meant that students did not use this type of collocation in they spoken English. As Yalmiadi (2016) that also studied about the using of collocations that students still misused the pattern of this type of lexical collocations. In this research, the students were still uncommon with this lexical collocation type because none of this type were found.

5. English Lexical Collocation type 5 [Verb+Adverb]

No	Words	Headword	Pattern
1	Apply or looking for a new job	Apply / Look	Apply Or Looking (Verb) + For A New Job (Adverb)
2	Be alone	Be	Be (Verb) + Alone (Adverb)

There were some collocation words of the type 5, verb plus adverb. There were only three collocation in this type. There were headwords, those were ‘job’ and ‘alone’ that it included in verb lexical of words. In other side, the adverb lexical of words that matched with those verbs were ‘apply or looking’ and ‘be.’

6. English Lexical Collocation type 6 [Noun+Noun]

No	Words	Headword	Pattern
1	Arabic language	Language	Arabic (Noun) + Language (Noun)
2	Draft proposal	Draft	Draft (Noun) + Proposal (Noun)
3	Home town	Town	Home (Noun) + Town (Noun)
4	House wife	Wife	House (Noun) + Wife (Noun)
5	Indonesian Embassy	Embassy	Indonesian (Noun) + Embassy (Noun)
6	Mother five times	Mother	Mother (Noun) + Five Times (Noun)

There were six lexical collocation this type where there were no same headwords of each collocation in their transactional speaking. This type of lexical collocation consisted of noun-noun combination which this combination helped the students to express about something such as matter or people when they spoke. In other hand, this lexical collocation words was also the part of vocabulary which Lessard (2013) stated that vocabulary included in language expression to state about everything.

Based on the data above, the researcher concluded that students needed to improve their understanding of various types of lexical collocations. Hence, in the future, they can use it while speaking English because lexical collocations are very useful in transactional speaking. In lined with Brown statement, learning collocations not only increases

EFL/ESL learners' collocation competence, but also it improves their oral fluency (speaking), listening comprehension, and reading speed.

The results of this analysis indicated that the usage of 6 types of lexical collocations, final year students majoring in English Education at State Islamic University of Alauddin Makassar only used 4 types in their transactional speaking. This can be shown as the following graph:

Based on the graph above, students tend to use type 1 lexical collocation in (oral) transactional speaking skills. It was explained that there were 58% lexical collocation type 1 (Adjective+Noun), 31% lexical collocation type 2 (Verb+Noun), 0% lexical collocation type 3 (Noun+Verb), 0% lexical collocation type 4 (Adverb+Adjective), 3% lexical collocation type 5 (Verb+Adverb) and 8% lexical collocation type 6 (Noun+Noun) in their transactional speaking.

From the using of lexical collocation by the last year students of English Education Department at Alauddin State Islamic University, they mostly used the type one which the pattern adjective plus noun. In other hand, it was found that they easier to express ideas when describing something. Then the second lexical collocation, many of them use it was the type 2. It was also followed with the other types but only a small amount of the lexical collocation, it was type 6, type 5, type 4, then the last was type 3 which there was no students use this type 3 at all at their transactional speaking.

More explanation, for the beginning, researcher wanted to talk about the correct collocation of this type because there were incorrect lexical collocations too in here and those incorrect lexical collocation would be discussed in the next explanation. From first table, researcher found twenty two headwords that each headwords collocated with some other words. For instance, the headword 'time' collocated with 'three' then built a lexical collocation 'three times.' Another words were paired with 'time' were 'every,' 'free,' 'long,' 'quality,' 'spare.' This headword, time, had the most pairing words than the other headwords in this type 1 of lexical collocation. The next headword of lexical collocation, 'city' was the second word that it had many pairing words. Those are 'beautiful,' 'capital,' 'central,' 'largest.' For the headwords 'place' has three collocation words. Those are 'cool,' 'interesting,' and 'public.' Next, the headwords 'teacher' has three collocation words too, 'professional,' 'history,' and 'English.' The headwords 'weather,' 'friends,' 'town,' and 'goal,' each of them have 2 collocation words. The headword of 'bad,' and 'cold' is 'weather.' Next, the headword of 'best,' and 'male' is 'friend'. Then, the headword of 'small,' and 'capital' is 'town.' There are 'future' and 'main' that those collocate with 'goal.' For the other headwords but time, city, place, teacher, weather, friend, town, and goal, they only have one collocation word. Those are 'morning' collocates with 'early,' 'house' collocates with 'boarding,' 'family' collocate with ‘member,’ ‘final’ collocate with ‘year,’ ‘language’ collocates with ‘foreign,’ ‘rice’ collocates with ‘fried,’ ‘choice’ collocates with ‘hard,’ ‘term’ collocates with ‘long,’ ‘era’ collocates with ‘modern,’ ‘speaker’ collocates with ‘native,’ ‘beauty’ collocates with ‘natural,’ ‘atmosphere’ collocates with ‘peaceful,’ ‘Sunday’ collocates with ‘evening,’ and the last headword ‘information’ collocates with ‘new.’

It can be concluded that students had a good skill in using lexical collocation type 1 in their transactional speaking. Same as this findings, Suthatip et.al (2017) found that most of students in Thailand use the adjective plus noun collocation most than other type of the lexical collocation. It looked easier for the students in this research to use lexical collocation type 1 because they can used one headword with some collocations that collocated with the headword. For instance, the headword ‘time’ they produced ‘every time,’ ‘free time,’ ‘long time,’ ‘quality time,’ ‘spare time,’ and ‘three time.’ This appropriate with the Carter and McCarthy statement, “students do not have to reconstruct the language each time when they want to say something; instead, they can use these collocations as pre-packaged building blocks.” They used the words to expressed ideas with using chunk word or lexical collocation, such as the words ‘time’ that it had six collocated words, or there were six words fitted with word ‘time.’ Aside from Carter and McCarthy, Hills stated that collocation made thinking easier to utter words, she stated that with using collocation, it can allowed us to “identify and produce complex ideas without using all of our brain space to focus on the form of the words.” In other hand, by using lexical collocation especially type 1, students communicated easier to express about something or describe something. This was really helped students became more fluency and more native-like when speaking English especially in transactional speaking (Pawley and Syder (1983), Wray (2002).

There were headwords that it had only one collocated words found in this research that students used in their transactional speaking in this type 1 of lexical collocation. For instance, the headword 'speaker' only collocated with 'native' then the lexical collocation words were 'native speaker.' Same as with other headwords such as 'morning,' 'house,' 'family,' 'final,' 'language,' 'rice,' 'choice,' 'term,' 'era,' 'speaker,' 'beauty,' 'atmosphere,' 'Sunday,' and 'information, each of these words had one collocated word. It can be seen that the students had limited words in using those words that it only had one collocated word. In sum, the type 1 of lexical collocation had a high frequent words found. It meant students easier used this type of lexical and also meant that students easier to express when they wanted to describe something when their spoken English as stated before that the adjective plus noun words functioned to describe things.

From the second table, there were one hadwords had students used the words with many collocates words. It was word 'watch' paired with 'music video,' 'TV,' 'video,' 'Indian movie,' 'Korean drama,' and 'movie.' From these collocations, actually most of the collocated words that paired with 'watch' were most had the same meaning. It expressed about a movie. These collocations were found from the students utterances when they were asked about their spare time activities. Then, it described that most of students liked to watch movie. Therefore the collocation appeared was 'watch.' The second position, 'learn' and 'have.' These headwords, each of them had three collocated words. While the other headwords had two or one collocated words. This type two of lexical collocation was the verb plus noun pattern. It only 27 lexical collocation of this type that was found, meant that this type had less usage than the type one. As Rasmatmur (2019) stated that this type indeed more problematic than the adjective plus noun lexical collocation for the English students.

The problematic for the students was not only for the type two, but also the type three. Which there were no lexical collocation for noun plus verb found in their transactional speaking. Wray (2002), Wang et.al (2007) stated that this collocation is natural for the native speakers but it often make English learners feel frustrated. While Sudahardijanto studied too about collocation used by the English learners of Indonesian was not an easy task.

There were only one collocation that of the type four that was found. Because the students, as Rasmatmur (2019), Wray (2002), Wang et.al (2007), they stated that it hard for the English learners to use collocation than the native speaker. The same problem in this type because there were no many lexical collocation that was found here.

The same problem for the next type, type five. For the pattern verb plus adverb, the students only used two lexical collocation. Same as the statements of the theorist and previous researcher, the English learners in this case students of English Education had to make a great effort to use lexical collocation especially in their transactional speaking. This was also supported by the statements of Wang et.al (2007), Rasmatmur (2019), and Wray (2002) at the previous explanation.

For the last type of lexical collocation that it found in this research was the noun plus noun pattern. Such as 'Indonesian Embassy,' the headwords is 'embassy.' It only had one collocated word found in their transactional speaking. It was also the same with other headwords in this type, had one collocated word. It meant that students still had limited vocabulary, therefore they only paired one headword with one collocated word. Opposite with these students, the native speakers have rich vocabularies. As Siahaan (2008) stated that lexical collocation is a productive skills where most of native speakers have this skill than the learners of English.

3. Error Lexical Collocation

No	Incorrect lexical collocation	Headword	Pattern (Type of lexical collocation)	Suggested lexical collocation
1	Boarding House	House	Boarding (Adjective) + House (Noun) (Type 1)	Rented House
2	Cool Place	Place	Cool (Adjective) + Place (Noun) (Type 1)	Beautiful Place
3	Difficultest subject	Subject	Difficultest (Adjective) + Subject (Noun) (Type 1)	Difficult subject
4	Future goal	Goal	Future (Adjective) + Goal (Noun) (Type 1)	Long-term goal
5	Peaceful Atmosphere	Peaceful Atmosphere	Peaceful (Adjective) + Atmosphere (Noun) (Type 1)	Relaxed Atmosphere

Beside the types of lexical collocation that researcher explained before, there were some incorrect lexical collocation did by the students. The wrong collocation appeared because students had intralingual problems that affected the way they expressed the 'rented house.' This is one of characteristic that lead students of L2 errors in using the collocation by Boonyasaquan. This was also faced by the students in this findings.

There was 'cool place' as phrase, not a collocation. But from the words, the students meant to explain about a place that it was a really good place. Therefore if the phrase was changed to be collocation, then it could be 'beautiful place' because in the collocation dictionary, the word 'place' collocates with 'great/good/beautiful/nice.' The word 'beautiful' was more suitable with the word 'place' because the word 'beautiful' was also able to change the word 'cool.' Therefore, the correct collocation is 'beautiful place.' It can be seen that from this collocation, the words 'cool' and 'beautiful' had similar meanings, but the word 'beautiful' if it collocates with the word 'place' it cannot be replaced to be the word 'cool.' This incorrect collocation happened because the students had intralingual problems, therefore they preferred to say 'cool place' instead of 'beautiful place.'

The other words, 'peaceful atmosphere.' It is an incorrect collocation because 'atmosphere' does not collocate with 'peaceful'. Here the students meant to say a very good condition with the clear air that makes them feel relaxed. The word 'atmosphere' is suitable with words such as 'calm/relaxed/pleasant/warm' but the closest word that the students meant to, is the word 'relaxed.' Therefore the correct collocation can be 'relaxed atmosphere.'

The words 'boarding house.' It is an incorrect collocation. Actually the students wanted to explain about the house that they have to pay before they live in the house. But, the correct collocation is 'rented house.'

As yet, from Boonyasaquan's statements, there are some obstacles that students face in using collocation. One of them is that students learn the words through the definitions, it makes them have low capability in using appropriate collocations or remembering the words. This obstacle can lead to students' errors in using collocations appear when they speak.

The incorrect collocations were 'difficuldest subject' and 'exactly vocabulary.' For the collocation 'difficuldest subject,' students meant to say they had the hardest one of the subjects that they learnt. Then, the correct collocation they meant, 'difficult subject.' If they wanted to express that the subject that they learnt was more complex learning, they can added words 'the most,' then it can be 'the most difficult subject.' More specific, this collocation was incorrect because the word 'difficult' was added suffix '-est' which there were no rule or pattern in grammar of English that combined word 'difficult' with suffix '-est.' Even though the students wanted to say or express something that had a high level of difficulty, they just can added 'more' or 'the most' before the word 'difficult.'

Generally, the students have the same problem in using the collocation, they had intralingual problems that caused them to produce wrong collocations. Some problem about intralinguals such as overgeneralisation such as the word 'difficullest,' they overgeneralize to add '-est' at the end of the word 'difficult.'

Other intralingual problem, students did not follow the pattern of the collocation such as change one of a paired words (James), the words that build a collocation based on the rules of lexical collocation. For instance, when someone wanted to say a house that it was need to pay first before someone can live at the house, the right collocation was 'rented house,' both of the words match each other, if one of the words was changed with the non-collocate words, it was no a collocation anymore.

There were problem that the students fail to apply the pattern or the rules completely (Richard). In this findings, there was incorrect collocation such 'rent house.' There were students meant to say 'rented house' but they failed to apply the correct pattern, it resulted 'rent house' when they spoke English. As Mahmoud's studied, indeed most of collocation produced by the students were lexical and most grammatical collocation detected were incorrect.

In sum, there were various usage of lexical collocation by the students. Most of them had rich lexical collocation words at the type of adjective plus noun. That lexical collocation were used to explain or express when someone describing something. Where the second type was also almost reach the amount of the type one lexical collocation words that students used in their transactional speaking. While the other only a little usage, limited words, even there were no used of lexical type 3 at all. This meant that students have to learn more about lexical collocation that it can helped students have various and easy ways to express or to talk about everything especially in their transactional speaking.

This also showed that it is important to teach about lexical collocation for the students. Beside students can express various ways for the various ideas with using lexical collocation, they also can be more native-like if they use it when speaking. Therefore, even there is still no complete or detail material about collocation taught to the students, the students can learn about it by themselves, because in this era 4.0 has sophisticated technology, there are many feature to learn from the internet from the technology. Other benefit of the collocation, by leaning collocation not only increase EFL/ESL learners' collocation competence, but it also improves students' oral fluency, listening comprehension, and reading speed.

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

In this chapter, the exploration shuts the theory with ends, ideas and shutting. As can be seen below the explanation of the conclusion and suggestion.

A. Conclusion

Based on data analysis and discussion of research data, researchers generally can conclude that final year students of the Department of English Education at Alauddin State Islamic University Makassar used lexical collocation in their transactional speaking skills.

Based on the data, the students had long sentences with rich vocabularies, nonetheless, the researcher found small amount of the lexical collocation in their transactional speaking. Out of 20 students, they produced 614 sentences in totally which there were 179 lexical collocation found. Specifically, there were 77 lexical collocation if the repeated lexical collocation was separated. It was obtained from their answers of 18 questions were asked to them.

From those lexical collocation, it were specified or categorized into six types. The sequence of the types of lexical collocation that students used in their transactional speaking from the higher amount of the words are, the first is the type 1 (adjective + noun), 41 lexical collocations, the second is type 2 (verb + noun), 27 lexical collocations, the third is the type 6 (noun + noun), 6 lexical collocations, forth is the type 5 (verb + adverb), 2 lexical collocations, the fifth is type 4 (adverb + adjective), 1 lexical collocations, while the type 3 (noun + verb) were not found. In other hand, the students were lack of lexical collocation.

B. Suggestion

1. For the students

The students should enhance the frequency of using lexical collocation in transactional speaking, not only type 1 lexical collocation but also they have to use all of the types of lexical collocation because if they know about collocation it can make the easier to speak or express their ideas and also they spoken English can be more native-like. The students can also use the technology or using the internet as we are in the modern era which provided with sophisticated technology that facilitate the students to learn about the lexical collocation.

2. For the lecturers

The lecturers are expected to give an opportunity for the student to be taught about collocation in their transactional speaking especially lexical collocations before therefore they can use those collocation in their speaking or any subjects such as speaking subject. It is better if the lecturers provide lesson about collocation especially about lexical collocation. In other hand, the teacher is better provide the lesson plan about the collocation especially about the lexial collocation if there is still no material about collocation in the syllabus.
