The aim of the research is to know how the central frames of color-blind racism are experienced by minorities in Nic Stone’s novel “Dear Martin.” This research used a descriptive qualitative method. In collecting the data, the researcher analyzed the object by using the theory of color-blind racism by Bonilla Silva. The results of the research are in the form of several findings about racist acts in ideology of color-blind racism by the majority (white people) against the minority (black people) especially the teenager of African-American. There are four central frames of color-blind racism as the problem of this research, namely; Abstract Liberalism, Naturalization Racism, Cultural Racism, and Minimization Racism. The researcher found that racist acts still occur in African-American life based on the four central frames color-blind racism system applied to racial equality in the novel.

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

A. Background of The Research

Racism is an inseparable part of Africa-America history and culture, based on a single principle, the white majority's conviction that they are superior to all people of color, racism also defined as the hate of one person by another because of customs, language, skin color, or any factor (Reid, 2019: 15). Where the racism related between concept discrimination of ethnic, religion, race, custom, or physical characteristics of a person. The attitude of racism gives an action that feels a higher degree compared to people who lower identity. Another definition of racism according to Alana, she explains that racism is such a pervasive concept that it's easy to mistake it for something that simply exists; a fact of existence. Racism is therefore linked to the fear and even hate that people are generally supposed to have for one another (Lentin, 2011: 6).

Racism in an ideology which stated that racial differences can cause problem in the society that will never end until now. Racism also arise because the differences in terms of psychology, ideology, and economics. There are many racist act that occur around us can described that racist in human life is a serious problem and difficult to avoid. Racism in the United States and several other countries is still expand and created an intractable conflict throughout the civilization of the world community and becomes a dark history for all nations in this world.

The phenomenon and cases of racism are a form of hostility towards black people, resulting in their group being attacked often for no reason and simply assumed inferiority complex. Racism is also something that is irrational and often toxic. In many racist cases, the death of George Floyd is seen as a reflection of the various phenomena of racism that aroused the anger of the black people in the United States. The phenomenon of racism in Indonesia also often occurs openly, especially the racist treatment experienced by Papuans and other countries. This explains that racism is a problem of the world that often occurs and is difficult to stop.

A novel "Dear Martin" by Nic Stone published in 2017, this book appeared as on The New York Time Best Seller and got some accolades. Dear Martin described the reality in people's lives. Nic Stone in his novel tells of a teenager who experiences racist acts by white people. This of course has to do with the real life of a part of American society who oppressed minorities. As we know that racist action was born from the thinking of American society, which says that black people are not the same as white people, even considering that minorities are very lowly people. So that this thought is raised in a novel with a background about the condition of African people receiving unfair treatment from Americans.

Literary works have various forms, genres, conflicts in stories, and any events that are born in a story that can basically describe reality in people's lives, or an imaginative thought from the author himself. According to Emmanuel in the process of creating literary works, an author may include facts about events or real life of people, but they combined these facts with imaginary settings and situation (Emmanuel, 2018: 15). The novel tells a story about a situation that is meant to represent real life or to raise the reader's imagination (Danesi, 2010: 75).

Literature is research that is concerned with people; about their life and events, literature is related with all things (Norhaili & Harison, 2014: 2). According to Habib, the relationship of literature is inextricable with religion, politics, morality, and philosophy, and can be said that literature was deeply related to all facets of people's lives (Habib, 2011:1).

Literature refers to the creative and imaginative writing that aims to emotionally and intellectually engage readers through major literary genres including drama, poetry, and novels, as well as sub genres like fable, parable, and short stories (Emmanuel, 2018: 10). Of the many literary works that were born from their creators, one form of literary work that was born in the form of writing, one example is the novel. Novel is also one of the greatest forms of work in a literary work, where the author gives beautiful things in their writing, so that people reading them can feel the beauty that is in the writing. Jamie said, the novel is a substantial story with several characters and a plot that spans a long time period and may have many settings (Jamie, 2015: 53).

The novel "Dear Martin" obviously describes a phenomenon that is familiar to African-American people, that racism is a view against understanding held by society and denies a certain group of people based on race, degree, religion, and another. According to Paul, racism is founded on the idea from white people which is a powerful fiction imposed by power and violence. Racism has long been a feature of many human cultures for justifying inequality and violence towards those who are inferior or different (Kivel, 2011: 17).

One of the racist actions that appear in this novel is very different from the racist in previous years, where the majority emphasized torture on the minority. “Dear Martin” has a very different racism conflict and it can be said that the racism that appears in this novel is a new type of racism issue. The type of racism in question is color-blind racism with the term “racism without racists,” this form of racism is hidden, invisible, and does not seem racist. This form of racist ideology is very dangerous.

Other than that, the writer also would like to correlate verses of holy Qur’an between racism issues which has been described above, based on Islamic views, Allah SWT said in Q.S. Al-Hujurat 49-13:

يَا أَيُّهَا النَّاسُ إِنَّا خَلَقْنَاكُمْ مِنْ ذَكَرٍ وَأُنْثَىٰ وَجَعَلْنَاكُمْ شُعُوبًا وَقَبَائِلَ
لِتَعَارَفُوا ۗ إِنَّ أَكْرَمَكُمْ عِنْدَ اللَّهِ أَتَقْوَاهُ ۗ إِنَّ اللَّهَ عَلِيمٌ خَبِيرٌ ﴿١٣﴾

“O mankind! We created you into nations and tribes from a single (pair) of male and female. So that you could know one another (do not hate each other). Surely, in God’s eyes, the person who hates God is the noblest of people. Allah is All-Wise and All-Knowing.”

Based on the holy Qur’an verse above, it is really clear that Allah SWT provides perfection to His creation. To create humans with different ethnic groups, but Allah SWT, prohibits us to differentiate all human beings and still know each other in equality. Islam is one of the religions that refused the ideology of racism, because racism can break mankind in kinship. Islam is also a religion that effaced racial problems in mankind.

The majorities of white people stated that “I do not see color, but only people,” there is no such thing as discrimination and equal opportunity is available to everyone, whether white, black or Latin, they all believe that America has achieved racial equality. Color-blind racism is a racial ideology that to try emphasizes the most effective way to end discrimination against minorities by treat them as equally as possible, regardless of ethnic, race, or culture. Color-blind racism is part of the past so that this ideology is to restrict human understanding of the concept of race and racism in the community. However, this is not enough to heal racial wounds that experience acts of racism, so this ideology is considered another form of racism.

However, the concept of color-blind racism is inseparable from being racist, even though racial equality already exists in the life between white people and black people, but black people feel that they will not be separated from being racist. Psychology researchers, specifically Eduardo Bonilla-Silva, coined the term “color-blind racism” to describe the “new” racist ideology that white people used in post-Civil Rights America (Silva, 2014: 1). Colorblindness, or the inability to see color (race), is universal argument that white use to justify racial discrimination in today’s culture (Silva, Forman, & Embrick, 2000-2014).

The purpose of the researcher chose a novel Dear Martin by Nic Stone as the object of research, first because the researcher is interested in analysis literature. This novel also is a very interesting story because it really depicts the life of society, not only in America there, but also indirectly in Indonesian society. This novel provides many moral values that can be seen from the characters and plot in the story. Then the racist action in this novel is a new case as a conflict of racism.

B. Research Question

Based on the background of the research above, the researcher formulated research question as follow:

How are the central frames of color-blind racism experienced by minorities in Nic Stone's novel "Dear Martin"?

C. Research Objectives

Related to the problems above, the researcher showed the objectives of the research as follow:

To identify how the central frames of color-blind racism are experienced by minorities in Nic Stone's novel "Dear Martin."

D. Research Significance

This research can contribute to the development of literature science, especially in the phenomenon of racism, can provide contribution to development of knowledge, particularly the literary study in the novel Dear Martin by Nic Stone about central frames of color-blind racism as a new theory in the issues of racism, and this research can useful as a references for the next researcher who would like to make further research about racism especially in English and Literature Department.

E. Scope of The Research

In this research, the researcher focused on analyzing a novel Dear Martin by Nic Stone using Bonilla Silva theory about color-blind racism from beside the author's life experiences. These theories are mentioned in four central frames of racism such as abstract liberalism of racism, naturalization of racism, cultural racism, and minimization of racism.

CHAPTER II

LITERATURE REVIEW

In this chapter, the researcher presents the previous findings as related to this research and the theories of the problem formulated in chapter I.

A. Previous Findings

Suryani (2021) in her thesis Color-Blind Racism Based on the Dear Martin Novel by Nic Stone (2017); A Sociological Perspective. This research used a qualitative method, where the data source is a novel Dear Martin by Nic Stone. The data collection technique used documentation technique. The problem raised in this research about color-blind racism and from the result, the researcher found three types of frames color-blind racism, they are; cultural racism, minimization racism, and abstract liberalism, and then color-blind racism reflected in the novel using literary elements.

Anjasmara (2020) in his thesis Racism Reflected in Nic Stone's Dear Martin 2017; A Critical Race Theory. This thesis used as a reference is critical racial theory in the novel "Dear Martin" by Stone as an object. The method used by researchers in this thesis was library research by collecting data from objects suitable with the issues to be analyzed. There are three racism issues in this thesis, namely; institutional is the distinction in punishment between black and white in criminal cases, interpersonal is that the two races look badly off each other, and internal is a case of racism against themselves or their own people.

Abielah (2016) in the research title Racial Prejudice in Harper Lee's "Go Set A Watchman." Her research identified racial prejudice in Harper's novel, Go Set A Watchman. The data was collected by interpreting and analyzing the words, sentences and dialogues from the novel. So the results show that the racial prejudice that happens in the novel Go Set A Watchman has four aspects social structure, they are; economic life aspect, legal processes and politics, inter-racial marriage and family patterns, and the educational aspect.

Robiah (2018) in her thesis Racism Reflected in Colour Blind Novel (1968) by Cookson; Critical Race Theory. This research analyzed the racism reflected in the novel "Color Blind" by Cookson as an object by using critical race theory. Data collection is done by analyzing and interpreting descriptively as the method in this research. The racism issue illustrated in this research is the existence of unfair treatment by the majority group of minorities which leads to community racism.

The similarity between this research and the four previous studies are that they all raise the issue of racism of the majority against minorities that occurs in American society and from the four previous studies they all analyzed the novel about racism as an object. The previous findings are that Suryani showed the same analysis as this research, where in her thesis analysis the central frames of color-blind racism in the novel Dear Martin used Bonilla Silva theory. Other similarities are seen from the research method and the research concept that is about literature.

The differences are research focuses on analyzing the action of racism which is a new racism about color-blind racism. This racism is based on frames of color-blind racism, a new theory suggestion by Eduardo Bonilla Silva. For the thesis from Suryani also analyzed color-blind racism used the theory from Eduardo Bonilla Silva and also used novel “Dear Martin” by Nic Stone as an object, but this research just only analyzed three the central frames of color-blind racism and analyzed color-blind racism reflected in the novel. While, this research analyzed four types of frames of color-blind racism in the novel Dear Martin using Bonilla Silva theory. The conclusions of the four research above focus on analyzing racism received by black people from the issue of racism, racial prejudice, to unfair treatment in the majority group.

B. Pertinent Ideas

1. Definition Racism

As it is known that racism was born and developed in America in the 1700s when it was known as the era of slavery which made the minority as a slave. The majority of white people do not consider themselves to be subject of black supervision and judgment. White people have a tendency to believe that black people see them just as they want them to be seen and white people believe they are on a higher and superior stage (Helen, 2017: 142). The belief is obvious, permanent, hierarchical distinctions between human groups identified in terms of genetics, physical appearance, or ancestry is referred to as “race” (Fleming, 2018: 8-9).

Diangelo stated “I just finished presenting a description of racism that acknowledges white’s social and cultural control above people of color” (Diangelo, 2018: 1). The both perspectives above, see racism as a mechanism of dominance that exists in social structure and organizations, whereas others see it as a mental illness, racism also encompasses dominance and prejudice, properties, and behavior, and the distribution of property and power as well as pigment differences. The term racism is related to life in a community group and race, the existence of racism is a form of difference in terms of psychology, ideology, and economy. The condition of racism in a society is the existence of several race groups with the culture that they carry is different from each race, so that there is an inequality of relations with one another.

Racism in the ideology of society shows resentment towards a different race group, more specifically, the majority who do not agree with the minority, so that in this problem, the terms white and black people emerged. White people or the majority argue the opinion that their position and level are higher than black people or minorities. This issue shows to discrimination, enslavement, and racist acts committed by whites people to black people.

The existence of racism ideology gives many descriptions of the treatment of racism in the world. Not only in America, inadvertently racist began to enter other countries with different racist treatments. It can be said that the world has long faced a pandemic of racism, but racism continues to appear in the lives of people. Even in Indonesia, racist acts have emerged in the form of a campaign by the Papua community that raised the issue of discrimination against the Indonesian population to Papua community.

Of course, in general racism is a view, attitude and action which discriminatory against certain groups on the basis of biological differences. Diangelo stated the confession that whites wield social and institutional control over people of color is part of racism (Diangelo, 2018: 1). According to Bonilla Silva, racism is defined differently by whites and people of color, the white people assume racism is a prejudice, while people of color claim that racism is systematic or institutionalized. Then it racial convenience tries to present a balanced description by claiming that white people's racial attitudes represent change and resistance (Silva, 2014: 5-6).

Based on the definitions and concepts above, this research takes one issue that occurs in racism, it is color-blind racism. This form of racism is a form of racism which was proposed by Bonilla Silva about a new racism and according to her it is very difficult to understand, because this racism is different from previous forms of racism.

2. Color-Blind Racism

Over time, there is a new racism which is better known as Color-Blind Racism which is part of the racism issue. This ideology has a role in the life experience of a society to forget the racism issue in the past. Color-blind racism is a form of racism that is hidden, invisible, and seems very dangerous. According to Silva in her book “Racism without Racists: Color-Blind Racism and the Persistence of Racial Inequality in the United States,” color-blind racism has arisen as a new powerful ideology to defend the current racial order. Color-blind racism on the other hand, is a strange racial ideology, while it specializes in “blaming the victim,” as all ideologies do, it does so in a somewhat indirect, “now you see it, now you do not” manner that is consistent with the current racism (Silva, 2014: 25).

This form of racism also shows that Africa-America society has achieved racial equality. Racial equality which means that there is no longer any act of discrimination or enslavement in society by the majority to minority, but this form of racism is known to be more dangerous because the views of the majority do not care about racial issues experienced by black people that clearly still occur around them, and they already knew their position as white people.

According to Shannon, the line of reasoning contributes to the anti-racist tactic of color-blindness which is to “not see,” this term to not include race in any of one’s judgment of others (Shannon, 2014: 3). Color blind-racism provides an opportunity to place all people. The minority assumes that racial equality makes them free from racist actions, but racial equality itself makes the minority still accept racist treatment by the majority. Although white people no longer see color (color blindness), racism is still born from their thinking, and accidentally still plays the race between the both.

Color-blind racism hides the fact that the black people still face systematic discrimination and left behind white in many important areas or aspects of life. Their chances of pursuing up to whites are very narrow. As a result, dominant racial frames serve as a road map for rulers as they walk the often rough road to dominance (Silva, 2014: 26).

Some arguments from experts and communities believe that the color-blind racism was indeed there and it is a good thing. However, the color-blind racism was not desirable and may cause more harm in inter-racial interactions. The perspective of color-blind racism was viewed as an ideology that provides a framework in which to ignore racism.

3. Central Frames of Color-Blind racism

The central frames are a component of the ideology of color-blind racism that is assigned to interpretation the racial issues. The central frames of color-blind racism are determined based on analysis of the interviews with DAS respondents and college students revealed color-blind racism contains central frames, these frames are employed by the vast majority (white people) respondents.

The four central frames are abstract liberalism, naturalization, cultural racism, and minimization of racism. Among the four central frames of color-blind racism, abstract liberalism is the most important in the issue of racism, because it is the basis of the new racism ideology and is also difficult to understand. The following is the definition the four central frames of color-blind racism by Bonilla Silva, as follows:

a. Abstract Liberalism

According to Silva in his book, the frames of abstract liberalism involves abstracting concept from political liberalism (e.g., “fair opportunity,” the thought that compulsion should not be used to achieve social policy) and economic liberalism (e.g., option, individualism) to justify racial issue (Silva, 2014: 28). As explained, this form of racism is related to politics and economics. Abstract liberalism emphasizes the ideas of liberalism and the existence of equal opportunity, both of which believe that politics and economics only create divisions toward race groups. There are principles in abstract liberalism, such as:

1) Equal opportunity

The existence of a racial equality system in the ideology of color-blind racism provided by minorities to forget about racist issues, so that one of the principles of this ideology is equal opportunity which explained the treatment between individuals or groups in accepting fair conditions and opportunities.

Equal opportunity was available to everyone, equality and opportunity are everyone’s right. But a few of the white people think that this equality and opportunity is only given to minorities, so that the majority feel this is unfair and harms the white people

2) Meritocracy

Meritocracy is more to the principle of white people, where the view of white people in this form of racism is based on their principle “Where a people are appreciated and selected based on their hard work, not from the privileges they have,” so that the majority think that minority are not seen from work hard or achievement but a special place given by the minority. Finally, the white people feel that this also deserved to be given by the majority and is more special in anything.

The idea of meritocracy is that people receive rewards based on their achievements and actions, and they must work hard to gain recognition. This idea makes evidence of how white people and black people work hard and get the same rewards, but factor in the privileges that each has between the two groups. The majority (white people) show affirmative action that there is a difference in privilege between the majority and the minority, and consider all of them to be different.

Abstract liberalism allows white people to express concern for race, social inequality, and at once oppose race-specific policies directly to resolve racial inequality. Abstract liberalism believes that no group should be selected to get “special treatment” and “individual freedom” which is something that must be protected above all else.

But, ironically, this allowed white people to protect their status and their own group interests at the expense of the special group interests of minorities. This form of justification for white people who have the privileges they have and do not care about the negative consequences that blacks receive.

Here we can still see racial inequality, therefore the ideology underlying abstract liberalism serves to show and inform us that we all have equal opportunities. However, the racial divide is shown where white people blame the rights of minorities which are obtained from working hard to achieve what they want and here whites are trying to show the privileges they have and do not want these privileges to be lost and blacks have to accept that.

The frame of abstract liberalism explains that the majority sees minorities as having equal access to education, accommodations, and jobs. They assume that discrimination is only an individual act. The majority use abstract liberalism to emphasize the bootstrap concept (act on its own) of how black people have to work hard to achieve these goals without special support. So that the existence of affirmative action, which is a form of claim, requires that minorities ignore various institutional practices and are given by the state and do not care about negative consequences. This emphasizes and provides many reasons that minorities should ignore history.

Abstract liberalism proves that black people do not deserve recognition that must be equal to white people. The existence of racial equality in this case is only a form of effort to forget the racist history that has been experienced by black people. Although there is racial equality applied in the United States, the majority have more status and they are the first to deserve privileges in any case.

b. Naturalization Racism

Naturalization is a frame that encourages white people to rationalize racism or racial expression by claiming they are natural occurrences (Silva, 2014: 28). This frame of racism is the existence of racial groups which is a natural event, this frame also was said to be natural because it was born of the incident and believed to come from groups or communities. The frame of naturalization strengthens them that racism is not a racist thing.

This form of color-blind racism is a phenomenon where the separation between the two groups is considered normal because of their backgrounds. Naturalization is a form that allows white people to justify/manage racial inequality as if it were an unavoidable/natural occurrence.

c. Cultural Racism

According to Silva, cultural racism is a frame that uses direct reasoning of culture to justify minority status in society, such as “Mexicans do not place a high value on education” or “Black people have too many babies” (Silva, 2014: 28). Cultural racism supports the existence of racial and cultural differences to explain the position of minorities in society.

In this case, an argument or a view from the white people assumes that the black people are living in poverty. So that the model of this racism explained by Eduardo as a “culture of poverty.” Where the majorities see the minorities as dangler because they are poor.

Cultural racism is the third form of the central frames of color-blind racism which explains the social economic status of minorities. Majorities often denounce black people for failure because they do not make remaining choices in adapting to normal culture. This form criticizes minorities for their dysfunctional cultural and family values. This is a criticism that is closely connected with the two previous forms which explain the concept of bootstrap and are rationalized by the majority.

d. Minimization Racism

Minimization of racism is a frame that assumes that discrimination is no longer a major factor impacting minorities’ chances of life, “It’s better now than it was before” or “Discrimination exists, but there are plenty of work opportunities” (Silva, 2014: 29). This form of racism to minimize the issue of racism in the social sphere, model of this racism shows that there is no longer a discrimination which influenced the life opportunity of minorities, the opinion of white people that racism is something that is usually done by the majority and does not care about the racism in around them.

Minimization racism is another form of the majority to show racism. This form was considered particularly dangerous because it allowed white people to ignore claims of racial inequality experienced by individuals or minorities. Minimization is known as “playing the race card” or accusation and “reverse discrimination” or accuse minorities of being over sensitive and using race as an excuse.

Minimization also allows white people to act racist through the rhetoric of color-blind racism, by silencing the voices of the oppressed, to tell those experiencing racism that black people are “hypersensitive” people, and allowing for oppression that black people accept.

C. Sociological Literature Approach

Sociological approach is one of literary studies to understand and assess literary works based on community and social aspects. In sociological literature to understand literary phenomena in relation to the social aspect of humans in society. According to Michele, sociological is the collection of concepts and conceptual frameworks used to make sense of society’s multidimensional, empirical patterns and underlying processes (Michele, 2014: 28).

Sociology is a science that studies social relationships and gets data from a variety of source literature. Human relationships and their environment are represent in literature and sociology. One of the ways to interact with the environment is real life. Sociological can be taught as a collection of literary facts and their implications for the social context. According to Jonathan, sociological theory is a theory that describes the social universe related to human actions in life, environment conditions, and social processes that are important for understanding reality at the time and place in particular (Jonathan, 2014: 1-2).

Seth Abrutyn said Sociological is an action in the view of sociology one's belief in thinking that focuses on cultural issues, identity, habits, socialization, and framing (Seth, 2016: 187). In general sociology of literature can be defined as the study of the relationship between literary works and society. This relationship can be in two directions, such us; how the social context influences literary writers in building their imagination and how the implications of their work on social life in general.

Sociology concepts, they must state the point of view of multidimensional action in life. The relationship between literature and society, literary works have broad social implications. Sociology seeks to understand all aspects that affect people's lives or can be called social implications. Sociology is the study of social relationship with the group as the major focus rather than the individual, the scientific study of nature, development of society, and social behavior (Muck & Anang, 2013: 2). In this thesis, the researcher used the sociological approach because the color-blind racism is the social phenomenon that always develops in the social life of society.

Racism is one of the problem related in human life to refers a various beliefs, practices, social relations that result of superiority, power, privilege for some people, as well as discrimination and oppression to other people. The existence of color-blind racism ideology that applied racial equality is again a problem for society, especially the minority. It is described that there are problems in the aspect of society and the impact to human life based on the sociological literature approach.

Sociology in literature describes events that occur in society and are created into literary works. The main discussion in sociological literature is the relationship between literature and society, where literature itself is made in imagination into a work that describes social problems in real life, the reality of life, and actions that occur in society. So, the researcher used the sociological approach to describe the racist actions in the novel and related the color-blind racism theory by Eduardo Bonilla Silva into the four central frames of color-blind racism.

In this research, the theory of sociological approach used a basis for analyzed the conflict in life of African-American in the novel Dear Martin, more precisely the racist conflict known as color-blind racism. The theory of sociological approach applied through several read sources such as journals, articles, and books which have related to the problem raised in this research. The sociological approach is also applied through problem in literary works in the form of novel as an object by looking the relationship of literary works with social reality. The problems that used as topic in this research are seen from reality of social problems and their relationship to what is applied in literary works.

D. Racism in America

The United States is one of the countries that is used as a criterion for the ideal standard of state life. The United States of America is a country inhabited by all races of various kinds of people around the world. After Barack Obama was appointed as President, he became a figure of representatives of black people, a manifestation of policy as well as the strength of the United States in multiculturalism. Even so, It is not mean the United States is not free from problems, with the condition of the country inhabited by several race and ethnicity from various worlds allowing for a conflict between races, as was the case on June 18th, 2015, in one of the churches in Charleston, South Carolina, which occurred shooting by a white youth that killed nine African-Americans. From this incident based on its history, America has a dark history of racial conflicts between whites and blacks.

Racism is one of the problems that we often see in the life of the United States to this day, even though the conflict or racist treatment is different from the past. A lot of racist conflicts that are happening today even in all corners of the world proves that racism is still alive in the realm of human life. There are many campaigns and movements to overcome this crime, unfortunately there are still many citizens in the world who seem to still be carrying out racist practices, one of which is in the United States. They often apply racism such as “black lives matter” or the right to equality, this does not make the United States free from racism. Many cases of crime and death have occurred such as the shooting of Jacob Blake until the death of George Floyd at the hands of a white police officer in 2020.

The sad reality of racism is that it has existed throughout the world for thousands of years. Currently we see the manifestation of racism in various forms, one of the graffiti that insults race, destruction of property rights, intimidation, and even some physical violence. People also commit racist acts blatantly, such as insulting or telling jokes about ethnicity. This is so related to the opinion of Bonilla Silva in her ideology about racism, namely color-blind racism.

According to Ajrouch, the problem of racism until now has become a common pressure on African-American descent and has become a basic principle in the social and cultural life of US society (Ajrouch, 2010: 15). According to W.E.B Du Bois there is not a single country in the world where racism is considered important, for such a long time as in the United States. In this modern era, the practice of racism has become more real and felt under the leadership of Donald Trump. In the era of Donald Trump's leadership, racial discrimination is at an alarming level. Trump has turned racism from euphemism to more overt, by frequently making racist remarks to minorities.

The white supremacist political practices and racist rhetoric from Trump at the beginning of his leadership have made racist behavior and hate crimes more flourish in the United States. The incident over the death of George Floyd in the Trump era is the worst racist incident in the history of modern society. So that Donald Trump is seen as the most racist president in the modern history of the US because it is considered a trigger for racial divisions and conflicts in the United States.

After Donald Trump left his job as president of the United States and was replaced by Joe Biden. Biden is considered to be able to bring major changes to the US, especially regarding the future of racism politics in the United States. Although some Americans implemented and carried out racist actions during Biden's tenure. Joe Biden also began to act and issued a national policy in the form of an executive "racial equality" in an effort to eliminate the practice of systematic racism that has long infected the United States of America. In his speech, Biden said that the United States government needed to change its entire approach to the issue of racial injustice, that racial equality programs could improve the economy of the American people.

Although the reign of Joe Biden until now has not been able to completely eliminate racism in the United States, but anti-racist policies have indirectly presented better prospects for the future of the American nation. Moreover, Biden is fully supported by the multi-racial community in America, so that it can facilitate Biden in efforts to eliminate all forms of racial injustice in the United States.

E. Novel “Dear Martin”

1. Synopsis of Novel “Dear Martin”

After reading some reviews and analyzing the novel Dear Martin on the internet and getting information from www.amazon.com, the researcher was given a synopsis about this novel. Justyce McAllister is a African-American teenager, he is 17th years old. Justyce is a child who has a good personality, is an exemplary student, and always helps his friends. Because of traits and characteristics like that, he was awarded a scholarship to attend a prestigious high school in Atlanta.

Justyce’s life must be faced with racist behavior by white policemen who judge Justyce as a criminal offender based on the skin color of Justyce. At first he got the racist behavior when he was accused of stealing a car when he tried to drive home his drunk ex-girlfriend. Justyce collects a letter from Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and sees how the teaching of these letters may apply to modern American life.

The reality is that Justyce still faced daily discrimination by his classmates who claim to be “color blind.” He also felt that he was not accepted wherever he was. This made Justyce forced to live in depression and feel that this was the worst. Justyce was also traumatized by police brutality which resulted in gunshot wounds to his body and death of his friend. Novel Dear Martin itself was written based on the true story of the shooting African-American teenager.

CHAPTER III

RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

This part deals with the research method which presents research design, data collection technique includes; source of data and instrument, procedure of data collection, and technique of data analysis.

A. Research Design

The researcher used a qualitative method in this research. The term qualitative method applies to research that generates descriptive data on people's written or spoken words, as well as visible behavior in the broadest context (Steven, Robert, & Marjorie, 2016: 7).

Robert stated that qualitative research entails into the meaning of people's lives in real-world situations and attempting to gather, incorporate, and provide data from a variety of sources of evidence as part of any given analysis (Robert, 2011: 8-9).

Another method used by researchers is the descriptive qualitative method. According to Steven, a descriptive qualitative method is written or spoken words from the people and observable behavior to make a conclusion from the data (Steven, Robert, & Marjorie, 2016: 7-162). This method will focus on analyzing the central frames of racism in the novel "Dear Martin."

B. Source of Data

The researcher got the data from the novel “Dear Martin.” This novel was written by Nic Stone and was published in the United States of America in 2017 by Crown Books, New York. This novel has two parts with 23 Chapters, Consists of 210 pages and the genres novel are African-American, criminal justice, fiction, and epistolary novel.

C. Instrument of The Research

In collecting data, the researcher used note taking as an instrument of the research. Note taking is a technique for taking notes when out in the field, reminding people that they will always have permanent observation and they will be sent to the place or things that researcher is interested in (Steven, Robert, & Marjorie, 2016: 84). After read the novel Dear Martin, summarizing every chapter of the novel and other supporting references, the researcher was made notes to classify the important points or sentences that are related to the problems and objectives of the research.

D. Procedure of Data Collection

In collecting data, the researcher was used the procedures as follows:

1. The researcher read all chapter Nic Stone’s Novel “Dear Martin” closely and comprehensively.
2. The researcher looked carefully to get the suitable topic that can be analyzed.

3. The researcher identified racism conflicts that happened in the novel.
4. The researcher noted that racism conflicts are based on central frames of color-blind racism.
5. The last added related information about color-blind racism phenomenon in the novel from several references, articles, books, and journals.

E. Technique of Data Analysis

The data was used to analyze the central frames of color-blind racism by Bonilla Silva theory. Bonilla Silva theory mentioned four central frames of color-blind racism that are abstract liberalism of racism, naturalization of racism, cultural racism, and minimization of racism. The researcher analyzed four central frames of color-blind racism which relate to the problem of racism in a novel Dear Martin.

This research used a qualitative method to analyze the data, because the data in this research is non-numerical. First, the collected data be identified and classified the act of racism in question, and then it will analyze the use of central frames of color-blind racism by Bonilla Silva theory.

CHAPTER IV

FINDINGS AND DISCUSSIONS

In this chapter, the researcher presents the data which are considered as racism based on Eduardo Bonilla Silva in the novel “Dear Martin” by Nic Stone.

A. Findings

In this part the researcher presented the data which were considered as racism based on Eduardo Bonilla Silva in the novel “Dear Martin” by Nic Stone. In understanding the data the researcher presented an explanation, P is Page and D is Data. The central frames of color-blind racism are experienced by minorities in Nic Stone’s novel “Dear Martin. They are as follows:

1. Abstract Liberalism

Abstract liberalism of racism entails explaining racial issues using abstract principles when white people explain racists concerns, they use this frame to describe their abstract behavior. This frames is based on two supporting principles or ideologies, they are:

a. Equal opportunity

Equal opportunity explains that everyone will receive all rights, both white people and black people, but in reality this is often used to resist affirmative action to black people. In the novel Dear Martin, this action is shown by white people including Jared and his friends. Jared who did not receive justice when Justyce was able to get into Yale University.

Jared: I wanna discuss how affirmative action discriminates against members of the majority.

SJ: You're not even serious.

Jared: Oh, I certainly am. Let's observe, shall we? I'm ranked number two in our class, I'm captain of the baseball team, I do community service on weekends, and I got higher test scores than Justyce...yet he got into Yale early action, and I didn't. I know for a fact it's because I'm white and he's black. (P.40/D.1)

From the quotation above when Doc as the leader of the school's debate team into the Class Evolution opens the discussion and Jared wants to discuss how affirmative action discriminates against members of the majority and compares his excess with Justyce. The argument shown by Jared is one of the frames of abstract liberalism, namely Equal Opportunity where it is often used as an affirmative action against black people. Jared's actions reflect that he rejects the justice that Justyce received in getting into Yale University, whereas he does not. He thinks that minorities are often given special opportunities to the inflicted of the majority.

“You coming over here asking us to help you use a black girl is a big deal, Blake. That's not to mention you tossin' the n-word around like you own it.”

Blake: You don't own it any more than I do, bro. Nobody owns words. I'd think you'd know that as someone “smart enough” to get into Yale. (P.63/D.2)

The quotation above happened while they were visiting Blake's birthday, talking about admission into Yale and offending the privileges of white people. Blake showed that people who are accepted into Yale University are only based on their intelligence, while Blake thinks that all those who are rightful to Yale must have all the advantages, especially white people who have more privileges. This made Justyce angry because of the affirmative action on racial equality.

b. Meritocracy

In this principle, white people believed that someone would be chosen and rewarded based on their hard work, not on their features. In this novel Jared's actions show that he has everything but justice. So this blames affirmative action on minorities who are selected into Yale University based on the rights of equality they receive, and When Quan Banks explain the legal system in life of African-American. The quotation of the action in question is as follows:

Jared: Yeah it does. He took a spot I didn't get because Yale has to fill a quota...Sarah Jane: Justyce got in because he deserved to....
Jared: I deserved to get in too! Affirmative action is bullshit. (P.41-42/D.3)

From the quotation above when the debate is going on and discusses affirmative action, Jared argues that the minorities accepted at Yale University are not what he expected, because Yale provides places and prioritizes minorities so that the quota of places provided is limited. This makes Jared think that equality only belongs to black people like Justyce's friends.

Jared: Point is, it gives an unfair advantage to minorities. So, okay, Justyce and I might be "equals" or whatever. But there are other minorities without qualifications I have who will get in before I do. That's just not fair. (P.42/D.4)

The quotation above when the debate is still on and Jared did not accept the fact that Justyce who first entered the Yale. Jared's argument to attack affirmative action and protect her privileges, he offends about the equality between himself and Justyce who according to him has the same qualifications to enter the Yale. But Jared did not care how hard Justyce got accepted into Yale University because Jared thought he deserved more than Justyce. Meanwhile, Justyce considers herself acceptable because of her hard work and intelligence.

Jared: Whatever. All I know is that no matter what college I end up at, when I see a minority, I'm gonna wonder if they're qualified to be there. (P.43/D.5)

The quotation above while still in discussion and Jared refutes the opinion from SJ about the qualifications to get into Yale. Jared's argument again reflects the rejection of racial equality that occurs. Jared argues that minorities do not have anything to get a special place, one of them is getting into a college, because he thinks that white people have more qualifications and requirements to get special places and privileges.

“I know you all about getting ahead and everything, Justyce, but you gotta face reality at some point. These white people don’t got no respect for us, dawg. Especially the cops. All they ‘protect and serve’ is their own interest. You just gon’ continue to bend ya knee after they proved that shit by killing ya best friend?” (P.101-102/D.6)

The quotation above when Justyce visited Quan Banks in Fulton Regional Youth Detention Center and they talk about the incident of Manny’s murder. Quan explained and resuscitated the Justyce that white people only protect and serve themselves, and they do not respect black people because they only care about their life. And this was proven when Manny was shot by Garrett Tison

2. Naturalization Racism

Allows white people to rationalize racial issues by claiming they are natural occurrences. The act of color blindness in the novel Dear Martin is shown to the majority who think that racism is a natural phenomenon. Related things to racism are reasonable. Jared and his friends claim that color-blind racism in the United States has been implemented and even that racial equality already exists, so they think that the mistakes made by white people have become a reality that just happened. Following the quotes from frames of naturalization racism:

SJ: I know you'd prefer to ignore this stuff because you benefit from it, but walking around pretending inequality doesn't exist won't make it disappear, Jared. You and Manny, who are equal in pretty much every way apart from race, could commit the same crime, but it's almost guaranteed that he would receive a harsher punishment than you.

Manny: Why do I keep getting pulled into this?

Jared: Obviously because you're black, bro. (P.18-19/D.7)

The quotation above is when the debate is going on in the class, and their discussion switches from other topics to talk about the current legal system. SJ's argument shows that the issue of racism that occurs around the majority will never go away so that American society ignores these issues related to racism, racial inequality shows color blindness by nature. There is even an injustice received by black people when it comes to receiving punishment for committing crimes. Then Jared says to Manny confirm the fact that blacks including Manny and his friends are the fount of every fault or incident because they are black.

Trey looks back and forth between Jus and Manny. "Don't get it twisted, my dawgs. These white boys might be standing here next to y'll, but y'll stiil ain't nothin' but niggas to them, ya heard me?" he says. "Ain't no amount of money nor intelligence can change that shit." (P.29/D.8)

From the quotation above when Jared and his friend invited Justyce to Halloween. They wear costumes that describe some stereotypes. Then a gang called Black Jihad. This gang led by Martel Montgomery, was annoyed with Blake's Klansman costume. One of the gang members, Trey, punches Blake in the face. And Trey argues about the white people view of black people to Justyce and Manny that they still see black people as a Negro and that won't change.

“That’s what it was like for me at the new school. Everybody saw me as black, even with the light skin and green eyes. The black kids expected me to know all the cultural references and slang, and the white kids expected me to ‘act’ black. It was a rude awakening for me. When you spend your whole life being ‘accepted’ by white people, it’s easy to ignore history and hard to face stuff that’s still problematic, you feel me?” (P.72/D.9)

From the quotation above when Doc visited the Justyce’s dorm room to check Justyce after the incident on Blake’s birthday, Doc asks about the situation and problem experienced by Justyce and Manny. And Doc tried to resuscitate Justyce about the life of the African-American by talking of experiences when he accepted injustice for the first time in his life. The fact which Justyce revealed when he first experienced new school was that white children saw the differences that black people had. They saw the difference in other things that were owned by white people, and made Justyce at that time trying to be accepted in the racist life she experienced. This shows that black people never forget history and blacks always face problems related to race.

“You’ll learn, young brotha. You’ll learn. The Europeans succeeded in denigrating and enslaving peoples of African descent, but there’s royal blood flowing through your veins, you hear me?”

Justyce nods and swallows. “Yes, Sir.”

“People across the diaspora have been treated as inferior for so long, most of us have habituated to the lie of white superiority. But never forget,” Martel goes on. (P.115/D.10)

From the quotation above when Justyce visited Martel the lead gang of Black Jihad in Wynwood Street. Justyce tries to be brave to join the gang because he feels hopeless over Manny’s death. Argument from Martel explains the view of white people of African descent who are despised because of the superiority of white people. This argument that Justyce will never be separated from the history of slavery Europeans from past history.

3. Cultural Racism

Cultural racism to explain the status of minorities in society, it relies on cultural reasons. In the novel Dear Martin, frames of color-blind are reflected in the attitude of Jared, a white teenager, who is also Justyce’s school friend. His attitude showed frames of cultural racism when conducting a debate on equality led by Doc as the supervisor of the debate team. The quotes that show these actions are as follows:

Jared: Okay, I’ll bite. In my opinion, yes, we have reached full equality when it comes to race...Doc: Expound, please...Jared: Well, anyone born here is a citizen with full rights. There are people who claim certain “injustices” are race-related, but if you ask me, they’re just being divisive. (P.16/D.11)

The quotation above when discussion in the class, they talk about equality. Jared explains about equality and offends the people who are against the injustice that only can divide. This is related to the social background and culture of the American community who live in their respective rights and equality, so it creates a color blind system.

Jared: Well, anyone born here is a citizen with full rights. There are people who claim certain “injustices” are race-related, but if you ask me, they’re just being divisive.....Jared: America’s pretty color-blind place now. (P.16/D.12)

From the quotation above When the Doc opens the class Social Evolution and starts from discussion about the “Declaration of Independent” and Jared offended by injustices. Jared explains that American citizens have full rights from birth and injustice related to race according to him is only divitiated, this shows how the lives of the majority and minorities in America, and also some of American society always to offend related about the race, because America is one of places that look at race and color blindness are things the majority can do today.

SJ: Sorry. It’s just you’re completely oblivious to the struggles of anyone outside your little social group. (P.16/D.13)

From the quotation above when discussion in the class, Jared said to refer to the color-blind system to implement in America and SJ tried to provide an understanding of the lives of minorities. SJ’s opinion is the fact that white people only see one side of black people. Where white people are not aware of the struggle that minorities are doing in achieving equality. SJ gives his assessment of Jared who always blamed Justyce's poverty and racial equality accepted by minorities.

SJ: I'm serious. What about the economic disparities? What about the fact that proportionally speaking, there are more people of color living in poverty than white people? Have you even thought about that? (P.17/D.14)

From the quotation above in the class and still in discussion. SJ gives facts to Jared who thinks that the black people live in poverty based on the economic gap. This shows that the culture of poverty is a form of color blindness by the majority towards minorities.

Jared: Dude, Manny drives a Range Rover...Manny: What does that have to do with anything?...Jared: No beef, dude. I'm just saying your folks make way more money than mine...Manny: Okay. They worked really hard to get to where they are, so... (P.17/D.15)

The quotation above when in the class, Jared talked about the background of Manny's family. Arguments from Jared which compare Manny and Justyce who are same black people, unconsciously offend that Justyce's mother is considered lazy so that she lives in poverty, while Manny was born rich because he has a mother who works hard. This makes Manny think that all black people worked hard to get what they wanted.

Jared: I'm just sick of people suggesting African Americans still have it so hard these days. I don't care what SJ says, Manny. Your parents are totally proof that things are equal now. (P.20/D.16)

The quotation above when Jared, Manny, and their crew sit together in a room, Jared talks about racial inequality to a classroom full of millennials. Argument from Jared says that dealing with the attitude of African-American descent people is very difficult when related to equality. Jared only gave the fact that equality began to be shown from Manny's family which was quite rich. However, Jared still blames Justyce's background and does not agree with SJ's argument that always compares the minority and the majority.

4. Minimization Racism

Indicates that prejudice is no longer a major influence on minorities' life choices. This form of color-blind racism is almost similar to the form of cultural racism. Where people think that racism in the United States is a common thing. When they accidentally talk or throw a joke in front of black people, white people think it's just a joke. In the novel Dear Martin, Jared and his white friends often make jokes or insults about race. Here are some quotes related to minimization racism:

SJ: God. This country is headed to hell in a hand basket with people like you at the helm, Jared...Justyce: (Chuckles).

Jared: Anyway, to those unfamiliar with the US Constitution, thanks to the Fourteenth Amendment, every person in this country has the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness... (P.17/D.17)

From the quotation above when in the class and discussion about the country club and system racial in the US. Jared to offend the racial system in American that minority communities must be familiar with the existing rules in the United States about racial equality, this shown that race in American is not a serious problem, they inclined to simplify of the various forms a racial discrimination around them and create an invisible racial attitude.

Jared: Ah, here we go. Not every white person who kills a black person is guilty of a crime. Pretty sure the courts proved that yesterday.

SJ: All the courts “proved” yesterday was that a white guy can kill and unarmed teenager and get away with it if the kid is black. (P.18/D.18)

The quote above when SJ talks about the news, Shemar Carson is a black people killed by white people, and then talks about legal justice that happened. This is Jared again defending the majority against crimes, give an opinion on the black people who accidentally offended the minority for his opinion on the murder case. This shows that every mistake made by white people of course has a reason why they did that action, so here all mistakes and crimes lead to black people.

Blake: You still totally wanna tap that, bro.

Kyle: Too late, though. If Justyce is your competition, you’re screwed, dog. “Once you go black,” right, Manny?

Manny: [Snorts.]

Tyler: Too bad for SJ, Justyce has his hands full with Melo Taylor literally.

Jared: Which makes no sense to me, bro. What the hell does a hottie like Melo Taylor see in a guy who can't afford a Happy Meal? (P.20/D.19)

From the quotation above when Jared, Manny, and their crew Kyle, Tyler, and Blake in Bras Prep senior lounge which is set up like a restaurant. Kyle made a racist joke to Justyce about skin color. Kyle offends Justyce who is black and thinks that those who join the black competition will be in the same position and will look like Justyce, in the sense that people joined with Justyce in the competition would be on equal footing and will look inferior because of joining with a black people.

Kyle: See, things really are equal nowadays, bro. A white kid can play a famous black dude in a play, and it's no big deal.

Jared: Exactly! This is a color-blind society, my brethren. People are judged by the content of their character instead of the color of their skin.

Kyle: Right, dude. Like I totally don't even see you as black, Manny! (P.21/D.20)

The quotation above after the Social Evolution class ends. Jared, Kyle, Blake, and Manny are in the Bras Prep senior lounge. Jared is still upset with Sarah Jane over a class debate about racial inequality. Jared mentioned a speech from Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. about "I Have a Dream" and the performance of the Heritage Culture Drama when Jared was in eighth-grade. Where white people black people characters which is not a problem, because today is society does not see color.

Blake said “There’s this fine-ass black girl here from Decatur Prep, and I was thinking you guys could wingman it up for me and shit. Home girl’s got the fattest ass I’ve ever seen, and I think if she meets my niggas, I’ll have a good chance of getting’ her upstairs. You feel me, dogs?” He nudges Jus and grins. (P.63/D.21)

From the quotation above on Blake’s birthday. Blake accidentally throws a joke to friends of Justyce who are both blacks. The jokes from Blake on Justyce’s black female friends make them angry and offended by racist jokes made by whites, this shows Jared’s friends always mention race which makes blacks feel sensitive.

Manny: All right, y’all, let’s calm down before this gets outta hand...Justyce: It’s already outta hand, Manny. Your boy Blake is a racist...Blake: What is it with you people and the god damn race card, huh? (P.63/D.22)

From the quotation above Blake always offends the advantages of Justyce and is associated with race because Justyce is black people. The frames of minimization are shown when Justyce feels fretful and angry, and Blake again says that black people are sensitive people and always play their race card. This is a joke that is often uttered by whites against blacks and describes the actions of color-blind racism in the form of minimization.

“When we saw this black lady and with four kids, and this fool called her Shaniqua and make joke about baby daddies, I couldn’t take anymore, Jus. I called him on it, and he rolled his eyes. Told me to ‘stop being so fucking sensitive.’” (P.75/D.23)

The quotation above when Justyce feels weird to Jared and his friends. Justyce went to his room and met with Manny, and Manny told about Jared being racist on a Saturday night at the festival. Jared with ease threw jokes at black people again and made Manny angry and annoyed. So Jared told him not to be a sensitive black person. This explains that Jared’s actions describe a frame of minimization racism because the racist attitude from Jared offends to black people.

For a good three minutes, it was dead silent. Then Mr. Julian sighed. “I wanna talk to you boys,” he said.

I gulped , and glanced at Manny behind Mr. Julian’s head. He looked hella nervous too, “uhh,...sure, Dad.”

Mr. Julin nodded, “Today I overheard an employee refer to me by a racial slur.” (P.77/D.24)

From the quotation above when Mr. Julian, Manny’s father, walks into Manny’s room and tells his experience in the office when white people called him racial slur. This shows the act of minimization racism against black people.

“Man, please. This is my car,” Manny says. “I’m done bending over backwards to appease white people.” He pushes a button on the steering wheel, and the music gets louder. “YOU WORTHLESS NIGGER

SONS OF BITCHES!” the guy shouts. “I know that motherfucker didn’t just say what I think he did,” Manny says. (P.82/D.25)

From the quotation above when Manny and Justyce are driving Manny’s car. Manny was mad because his parents had just learned that Jared’s father is suing Manny for the physical confrontation they had earlier in the week. They were playing loud music, and when they stopped at a red light, a white man in a Suburban disturbed them. Because Manny and Justyce refuse to turn down their music, he becomes increasingly angry. Manny against the attack from the white man and Jus becomes increasingly uncomfortable. The man shouting to Manny and making Manny angry and shouting back to a man, this showed that the swearing of Manny as a black person makes him not accept being treated like that. Because the views of whites are always right and always blame blacks.

B. Discussion

In this part, the researcher identified the data which were taken from the novel Dear Martin by Nic Stone. Based on the above analysis, the researcher found some data based on the problems raised.

The researcher found an act of racism, namely color-blind racism which refers to the four central frames of color-blind racism. The data got from the novel “Dear Martin” by Nic Stone shows several actions related to the problem of racism that occurred. There are four central frames of color-blind racism, they are:

1. Abstract Liberalism

The act of racism that shows the nature of abstract liberalism by the majority to the minority is quite clear from the two ideological principles of Equal Opportunity and Meritocracy. Where this is shown that the majority oppose affirmative action to also get racial equality and privileges given to minorities.

The six data from abstract liberalism is clear. The two data explain that the Equal Opportunity action is against affirmative action when Jared, who is a white teenager, opposes that Justyce a black teenager, was accepted at Yale earlier because they only saw Justyce's intelligence and talent. According to Jared, equality provided by the minorities can only harm the majorities.

From the ideology of Meritocracy based on the four data taken in the novel where the act of color-blind racism is shown by the majority that privilege is only owned by white people. This is back against affirmative action in racial equality, when racial equality is only given to minorities.

The data obtained explains that white people should also have any place opportunity, this is against affirmative action to protect privileges of white people. Jared blames the advantages and opportunities received by the majority group, and wants to justify equality in order to get the justice he deserves.

Then it is proven that there are abstract actions in the principle of meritocracy which explain that white people, especially the police, only defend and serve their own benefits. This includes where white people protect their privileges.

From the six data obtained in the form of color-blind racism, it proves that there is an abstract act that occurs in the novel and creates an act of color-blind racism that is accepted by the African-American community.

2. Naturalization Racism

The existence of racist acts in the frame of naturalization which means that racism is something that just happens based on natural and historical events that happened before. This makes the majority act racist and ignore racist issues that occur. This form illustrates that racism in the United States is an event that supports the existence of racial groups. From some of the data taken in this novel, the attitude of the majority sees racism just happening around them, they even commit racist acts.

From the four data it is clear that the majority ignored racist events that happened after Jared ignored the issues of inequality. Then where Trey assumes that white people still see black people as Negro people and Doc's experience of his life face racist acts because it can not be separated from history.

In this frame it can be defined that even though there is racial equality, inequality will never disappear and will continue to occur. This action shown here is where the view of white people to black people is always wrong, because racism is a natural occurrence and present from birth.

3. Cultural Racism

Cultural racism is a frame of color-blind racism that supports racial differences in cultural practice that can be seen from the lives of racial groups. The act of racism shown in these frames is seen based on the social and cultural life of the minority. Poverty is the main thing that created racist actions that are accepted by minorities. The data obtained from the novel, it is clear that white people view to black people as a group who live in poverty because of their laziness.

Some data obtained from the novel show that color-blind racism is clearly visible, especially in this frame. Based on the six data in this frame it is clearly a color-blind event in the United States today, and every person born there has their own rights, especially in claiming injustice based on race.

Then explains about the social life of the American people who have implemented the color-blind system. The view that white people do not see the struggle of black people in achieving equality because they live in small groups.

The data clearly show that where the majority blame the poverty culture of the minority in achieving racial equality and where Jared blames Justyce's life, which has a poor background and is associated with the nature of African-American descent who is quite harsh and sensitive.

From the explanation of the data above, it can be seen that the frame of cultural racism shown in the novel and how white people view to black people without looking at skin color but rather the background of life and culture.

4. Minimization Racism

The most visible racism shown in this novel is a frame of minimization racism. This frame really shows that the majority no longer see skin color but racial equality implemented in the United States makes racism happen, so they see only people not skin color. The racist jokes often played by black people intentionally make black people play their race card and mention the equality that each has. From the data found in the novel, it is clear that this act of racism seems to have occurred invisibly.

The nine data explain that the majority always offend race and relate it to the mistakes and actions of minorities, so they feel angry and not to accept the view of white people to them. It is clear that blacks always make jokes related to race and offend black people and think they always play the race card and are known as sensitive people.

Based on the data obtained, the existence of a system that is applied in African-American life is a matter of ignoring racist actions or issues. So that white people took it as normal, and made black people feel like they still accepted injustice.

From the four central frames of color-blind racism above, the frame of minimization racism is shown more in the novel, because minimization racism is a problem that most blacks experience in color-blind racism. After America implemented a system of racial equality, where now the minorities already have the same position as the majorities. They have been given a place, rights, and freedom in their lives, but the dark history that has been experienced by minorities (blacks) for racist acts will never be separated from their lives.

The frame of minimization racism shows that white people have never considered racism as a serious problem in their United States, so this tends to lead to a color-blind attitude towards racist issues.

This frame is also an attempt by white people to simplify all forms of discrimination that occur around them, because color-blind racism is an ideology where white people no longer see color but only people, then the frame of minimization is also a racism problem for the form of indifference and also the ignorance of white people about how dark history affects a black people's life today.

After determining the problem of racist in the novel and related to real life, the frames of minimization racism is one of the most racist problems that often happen, because this frames make the white people act racist invisible and think it is a normal issue by throwing racist joke to a black people.

From the discussion above color-blind racism shows the sociological issue based on the problem of human life that are described in two groups, between the minority (black people) and the majority (white people). The both group cause the problem in protecting their rights and equality that they have. The existence of racial equality as explained in color-blind racism ideology shows that racist still exists and the actions are different from the past racist. This is described in the four central frames of color-blind racism which explain how the minorities experience racist acts shown by the majority in defending their rights.

This research analyzed the conflict of racist in the novel Dear Martin used the theory of color-blind racism by Bonilla Silva, this theory is a new issue in the problem of racism. Based on the four thesis taken as previous findings also analyzed the issue of racist with the different conflict and literary work as an object. Third of fourth are the previous findings that used race theory to analyzed the issue of racist in all aspects, such as; political, economic, institutional, interpersonal, life, and community between majority and minority. Then, one of previous finding from Suryani's thesis (2021) which also analyzed the conflict of racism used theory color-blind racism by Bonilla Silva and the novel Dear Martin by Nic Stone as an object, this thesis only analyzed the three central frames of color-blind racism, such as; cultural racism, minimization racism, and abstract liberalism.

In the thesis from Suryani (2021) explained that there are only three central frames of color-blind racism reflected in the novel Dear Martin from some of the data found, and then Suryani also focused on the color-blind racism conflict which is reflected in the novel used literary elements. Then for the result, Suryani found that there are still racist conflicts that occur in the novel, especially in the conflict of color-blind racism which is reflected in the three frames of color-blind racism experienced by black people. While, this research analyzed the conflict of racist used the four central frames of color-blind racism in the novel Dear Martin, such as; Abstract liberalism, naturalization racism, cultural racism, and minimization racism with some new data found as the conflict of color-blind racism. For the result from the four central frames of color-blind racism, the researcher found the dominant frames of color-blind racism, namely minimization racism as the conflict that appears frequently in the novel Dear Martin, the conflict between black people and white people.

The issues and racists act in this research based on the theory from Bonilla Silva, namely color-blind racism. Where this ideology tries to forget about racism by giving rights and freedom to minority, however, the majority still show racist attitudes for the interests in protecting their privilege. After seeing this conflict, the islamic view about racism is an act that is not accordance with the Fitrah of humans. Explained on Surah Ar-Rum verse 22 that racism is an act forbidden in the religion;

وَمِنْ آيَاتِهِ خَلْقَ السَّمَوَاتِ وَالْأَرْضِ وَأَخْتَلَفُ الْأَلْوَانِ
وَالْوَنُكْمُ إِنَّ فِي ذَلِكَ لَآيَاتٍ لِّلْعَالَمِينَ

Based on the verse of holy Qur'an above, where every Muslim is forbidden to commit racists act, Allah SWT. created different people to know each other not to mock each other. In the novel "Dear Martin" by Nic Stone reflected the racist act carried out by the majority against the minority which makes life in society divided and breaks the kinship. One of the religions that are present in this world is Islam as the basis of human beings in carrying out the real life and offering the concept of justice without any difference.

Humans have been equipped with the purity of soul in the sense that they have not sin, and also equipped with the morals and mindset that underlie them in carrying out their lives. So that the presence of Fitrah makes humans show an attitude of devotion and can see positive values in life. If humans have damaged Fitrah then it will affect their mindset and behavior and be carried away in human life, one of the racist acts that changes the mindset of humans and causes damage to the order of life, harms other people, and divides the kinship.

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSIONS AND SUGGESTIONS

In this chapter, the researcher presented conclusions and suggestions, after analyzed the novel “Dear Martin” by Nic Stone, the researcher give conclusions and suggestions to the readers

A. Conclusions

After analyzed the data, the researcher concluded based on the findings and discussion in the previous chapter, they are:

1. In the problem of the research, the researcher concluded that there is an action of color-blind racism based on the found twenty-five quotations as data from the novel “Dear Martin” that are related with the four central frames of color-blind racism, such us; Abstract liberalism which have two principles ideologies; Equal Opportunity and Meritocracy, Naturalization racism, Cultural racism, and Minimization racism.
2. Among the four central frames of color-blind racism, the researcher found a frame that is more dominant and as becomes matter in the issues of racism that occurs in the novel that is the minimization racism, because white people want to simplify all forms of racism with a color-blind racism system that is applied in African-American life. As an effort to ignore the racist actions that occur, this frames show that racist is an invisible thing in African-American life and various racist acts are no longer a serious problem.

B. Suggestions

The novel “Dear Martin” is interesting to be read. Since it is related to the real life of racist act against African-American. This research also raised a new topic about racism that is color-blind racism. Based on the analysis and conclusions before, the researcher would like to give some suggestions, they are:

1. The readers and the learners can understand and get more knowledge after reading this research, especially the topic raised about acts of racism in the form of color-blind racism and the four central frames of color-blind racism.
2. We, as a community, can understand racism related to race, how other racists act, and especially for students of the English and Literature Department can analyze other literary works with the same issue about racism.
3. The next researcher can analyze color-blind racism with the other works in the issue of racism.

Growing up with a wide range of cultures, religion, and backgrounds, Stone strives to bring these diverse voices and stories to her work.

Dear Martin, her debut novel is loosely based on a series of true events involving unarmed African-American teenagers being shot and killed.
