Literature is not born autonomously but literature is always surrounded by the history of its time. The focus of this research is Milkman, a historical novel written by Anna Burns. This research aims to analyze the political history in the novel Milkman by Anna Burns. Descriptive qualitative method is used in this study. This research using the New Historicism approach developed by Brannigan. The researcher found several literary facts that paralleled to the historical facts of Northern Ireland. The results of this study indicates that the novel is based on Northern Ireland in 1970 historical event. Several factual events related in the novel to sectarian conflicts became the root of the problem presented in the novel. Sectarianism causes instability in that area and led to separation into several group. This condition led to different views and eventually to prolonged difficult conflict among Northern Ireland. Some sectarian forms in the novel are giving restricted names, regional restricted names, regional restrictions for traveling and many government spies roaming around. The representation of sectarian conflict found in the novel Milkman by Anna Burns include: bombings, legal inequality and curve restriction.

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

A. Background

Literary works are here to offer a fictional reality built by the author as a result of interaction with the community and their environment. The reality that is built in fiction is the result of the reaction of various realities that occur. In literature, the language used is certainly different from the language used in everyday life. Language has an intensity function to unite various stories. This is a link between form and content to unite the two, because form is the same as content when the intensity of the language used is very strong in literary works. (Aminudin, 2013:5)

In this study, the novel Milkman by Anna Burns became the object of research. This novel describes the conflict which is the main plot of the story. The conflict that is told is because of a religious sectarian conflict that turned into a regional sectarian. As a result of these sectarian conflicts, there are differences in views and opinions as well as, giving rise to the political structure of each group. Not only that, the impact of this sectarian conflict led to violence.

Northern Ireland was in a state of conflict at the heart of the conflict lies Northern Ireland's constitutional status. The conflict that occurred in Northern Ireland was a very sadistic and violent battle in terms of politics for 30 years. The main goal of the Society and the Protestants was to remain part of the British Empire. The goal of Ireland being a nationalist and republican, almost exclusively Catholic, was for the part of the Republic. (Dorney, 2015)

In Northern Ireland there was a conflict commonly called The Trouble, namely the sectarian conflict in 1968 - 1998 between loyalists (Protestants) who wanted the province to remain part of Britain, and nationalists (Roman Catholics) who wanted Northern Ireland to become part of the Republic of Ireland. There are several parties who took part in the conflict The Trouble is the British Army, the Royal Ulster Constabulary (RUC) and the Ulster Defense Regiment (UDR) in 1992 called the Royal Irish Regiment. Their goal is to play the role of peacekeeper. The outcome of this peace game was marked by street fighting, bombings everywhere, and cessation without trial. This conflict resulted in an estimated 3,600 deaths and more than 30,000 injuries. The involvement of the British and Irish governments led to an effective partition arrangement in 1998 in the Northern Ireland Assembly in Stormont. (Wallenfeldt, 2020)

This sectarian conflict resulted in a split between Catholics and Protestants in Northern Ireland. However, there are no theological differences but rather the politics that exist there. Political history is the narrative and analysis of events, ideas, movements, government organs, voters, parties and political leaders. In general, political history focuses on events related to states and formal political processes. Many things have been removed, both customs and education regarding the Republic of Northern Ireland, include Irish language is not taught in schools in Northern Ireland, everything that is illegal when flying the Republic of Ireland flag in Northern Ireland, also Republicanism is banned in Northern Ireland. Catholics generally considered themselves to be Irish in general and sought the incorporation of Northern Ireland into the Republic of Ireland. However, the Protestants saw themselves as British and they feared they would lose their culture and privileges if the Irish Republic could defeat the North.

The importance of studying history and making it a lesson as mentioned in the Qur'an. Q.S. Yusuf: 111:

لَقَدْ كَانَ فِي قَصَصِهِمْ عِبْرَةٌ لِأُولِي الْأَلْبَابِ ^{قل} مَا كَانَ حَدِيثًا يُفْتَرَىٰ وَلَكِن تَصَدِيقَ

الَّذِي بَيْنَ يَدَيْهِ وَتَفْصِيلَ كُلِّ شَيْءٍ وَهُدًى وَرَحْمَةً لِّقَوْمٍ يُؤْمِنُونَ (يوسف/12: 111)

Meaning: "Verily in their stories, there is a teaching for those who have a reason. The Qur'an is not a fabricated story, but confirms the previous (books) and explains everything, and as a guide and mercy for the believers."

Allah again reminded that in the stories of the prophets and apostles, including the story of the prophet Yusuf, there are messages to be learned and lived by humans. Indeed, in their stories there is a teaching for those who have reason. The stories in the Qur'an are not made up stories or mere tales of consolation, but they confirm the content of the previous books, namely the Torah, Zabur, and Gospel, which explain everything about the principles of the Qur'an. principles of values needed by humans in order to achieve happiness in this world and the hereafter, and as a guide to the straight path and a blessing full of grace for those who believe. Surah Yusuf begins with the statement that the Qur'an is verses from a real book. The Qur'an tells the best stories throughout the history of humanity. This sura then closes with a verse that reaffirms the lessons in these stories for people of sense. This is proof of the harmony and coherence of the content of the Qur'an. Alif laam miim raa'. Only Allah knows the meaning of this expression. These are the verses of the Qur'an that Allah revealed to the prophet Muhammad. It contains instructions and teachings for mankind. And know that the Book which has been revealed to you, O Prophet Muhammad, from your Lord is true from Him, the All-Knowing Lord; But most people don't believe in Him. Listening to and studying the history of the nations certainly leads us to self-awareness, fostering motivation and mental strength to always obey and obey the commands of Allah mandated by the Apostles. History is a mirror of past life so that it can be a lesson and an example for the generations to come. (Kemenag RI)

Several studies related to the object of the Milkman novel have been carried out by several other researchers. First, the paper discusses Anna Burns's Milkman, Awarded the Man Booker Prize in 2018, the winner of Ireland's first fictional contest that tells the story of loneliness and the lives of women in trouble. Many Irish writers have written about the lives of many Irish women and reminiscing about the past. Burns denounces violence in the second community and does not describe the devastating impact it had. This analysis draws on Hayden White's notion of scandal which is written in a stylistic way to show the life of the North when it is troubled. The author develops an extraordinary writing that combines seemingly contradictory elements include logorrhea and silence and to argue that Burns develops a form of traumatic realism effectively portraying the mechanisms of insidious trauma. (Piątek, 2020)

Second, the researchers argues that the novel Milkman by Anna Burns refuses to forget and continues its efforts towards gender justice without voting for its campaign. The Milkman novel laments problems with the public, treaty trials and so on. With the narrator and protagonist in the novel by Burns tells how the narrator escapes the reality of violence by “reading while walking”. Researchers after seeing and reading Milkman can conclude that this is a response to forced forgetfulness. In this research, the researcher will analyze the political history in the novel by Anna Burns entitled “Milkman”.

Milkman is a novel about the history of the absence of the names with the surrounded political history of Northern Ireland. An unnamed town in Northern Ireland in the 1970s that is split down sectarian lines, runs on its own skewed and corrupted structures of power and has its own tightly controlled conventions and rules. This is a society in which reading a 19th-century novel is seen as more subversive than carrying a gun, and in which your forename or choice of vocabulary instantly marks you out as coming from “over the road”, “over the border” or even “over the water”.

There has been no previous research that discusses the object of this research with the theory of New Historicism, so it can be said that this research is truly original and up-to-date, especially the political history in the Novel Milkman by Anna Burns. Through this comprehensive exploration of the New Historicism study (the political history of Northern Ireland), The Trouble or Political Sectarian conflict in Anna Burns' novel Milkman against political assertion throughout the history of Northern Ireland will be described and examined. In addition, this study will explain how to represent the political history of Northern Ireland through a new historicism approach using parallel reading between literary and non-literary texts. In this regard, this research will provide new insights into the representation of political history through literary texts, especially for students majoring in literature.

Brannigan (1999) asserts that the theory of new historicism is an approach that connects text and context to the important content of the border political dimension related to literary interpretation. In the view of new historicism, all type of texts are political 'language of instruction', therefore texts mediate social, political and cultural. Barry defines New Historicism as a method of study based on the parallel reading of literary and non-literary texts, usually from the same historical period. Where literary texts is novel by Anna Burns entitled "Milkman" and non-literary texts (journal, articles, megazine, newspaper and news) (Artika, 2015). New Historicism will study the history contained in a novel by juxtaposing historical texts that contain the same facts as those in the novel. Aspect of the political history can be analyzed using the study of New Historicism. Political history that examines the problem of government, state (including political parties) and power. So many history textbooks contain a series of events about kings, states, nations, governments and so on related to politics, so that the phrase “history is past politics” arises. Politics is present history” which clearly shows the relationship between politics and history (Kendle, 1990). In Milkman, everyday behavior, even non-political ones, is politized like presence of the flag and paramilitary.

The word New Historicism was first used by Stephan Greenblat in an introductory journal edition of the genre in 1982, to offer a new perspective on renaissance studies. New Historicism examines a literary work not only in terms of literary works as a whole, but the theory of New Historicism juxtaposes non-literary texts with literary texts. History seen through the study of New Historicism will be seen through history at that time which is found in literary works and then juxtaposed with non-literary texts as a reference. New Historicism gives an equal share of literary and non-literary texts.

B. Research Question

Based on the introduction above, the writer develops the research question as follow:

What the political history facts are contained in the Milkman Novel by Anna Burns?

C. Research Purposes

By following of the problem above, the objective of the study can be decided as:

To find out the political history facts are contained in the Milkman Novel by Anna Burns.

D. Significance of the Research

This research has theoretically and practically significance. Theoretically, this research can be used as a contribution to the development of literary science and is expected to motivate to know about history and especially novels with the historical genre, this can be investigated with New historicism theory to see the political conditions at that time. In practically, The Researchers hope this research can useful and learn more about political history with New Historicism theory. Specially, English and Literature Department can understand about the theory and how to apply in another literary works or object. This research can be used as a reference in further research.

E. Scope of the research

This study includes the words and sentences contains in the novel Milkman by Anna Burns which can explain parts of the history of the conflict namely the trouble in Northern Ireland which is analyzes the sentences which in it there is a fact of political history that occurs around the main character in the novel. This study uses a new historicism approach by Brannigan (1999).

CHAPTER II

LITERATURE REVIEW

A. Review of Related Literature

The existing articles related to the object have been published by several recent publications.

First, Laura Miller (2018) in her magazine “A Novel About Coming of Age Amid the Troubles in Anna Burns’s “Milkman,” political terror and sexual surveillance compound the claustrophobia of adolescence” says that the novel Milkman by Anna Burns is about a form of totalitarian control, but still charming. “Milkman” is an interesting storyline implicating the main character, a forty-one-year-old married local man who is well-known as a people who work in the paramilitary group. He started appearing when the sisters were walking (and reading) or running into the Park. He offers her a ride, displaying detailed knowledge of her routine. This novel tells of problems in Northern Ireland in the 1970s when there is an urban war. Laura Miller explained that this novel is told in a way that is not convoluted and contains a rough impression. This article also discusses a little about the background of the author of the novel Milkman who was born and raised in Belfast, Northern Ireland, and the use of obscure pseudonyms in the novel include “Deniers” and “opposite religions” and others.

Laura Miller argues that the novel Milkman shows how the narrator perceives his environment that he adheres to eighteenth- and nineteenth-century literature. Paramilitary who has turned into a quasi-gang at the time of Balaclava and Halloween all the belongings of the population were seized for the good and defense of the area. much-discussed about patriarchy, the power of men who feel superiority, will not be tolerated when it is considered not to be subservient to men or can be said to “do not recognize the superiority of men”.

Second, Aoileann Ní Éigearthaigh (2020) an article entitled ‘This was the “I’m male and you’re female” territory’: Inserting Gender into the Historical-Political Binary in Anna Burns’s Milkman”. This essay analyzes the tactics used by Anna Burns and how she describes the exercise of authority and control over naming and past historical myths and how gender identity has been submerged through historical hegemony through the novel’s protagonist. Anna Burns demands the kind necessary to challenge political conflict, deconstruct linguistic constructs in exposing women’s collusion and silence. The lack of definite names gives an edited feel to the text as if the characters are hiding their true identities to protect themselves from scrutiny. That is because names tend to be closely related to political affiliation in Northern Ireland.

Third, Lauane Campos Souza (2019) an article entitled “The Absence of Names and The Lost Individuality is Milkman by Anna Burns”. From this paper, the researcher finds that Anna Burns uses the flow of consciousness technique that uses the narrator as a protagonist by remembering and telling her past related to the milkman. The secrecy or absence of the names of the characters in the novel and only using nicknames based on relationships and functions, the author brings out the characters and explores the thoughts of the protagonists then creates a sense of distrust and an atmosphere of conflict. This is an aspect that is present in the novel as Anna Burns has said in several interviews include the problem of the conflict in Belfast, Northern Ireland. However, for those who have often heard and read about the history of Northern Ireland, they are familiar with socio-political and religious matters. Although it's happening in Northern Ireland but it's also been in a few other countries so, that's very likely to mean universally about civil war, terror and bombing.

Fourth, Ingvild Rytter (2020) discusses "Moments in the Middle (Narrating a Self Under the Shroud of Social Control in Anna Burns' Milkman)". The thesis explores how social control mechanisms can influence self-development and how this is reflected in the narrative voice of Anna Burns' Milkman. It looks at the stylistic choices that reveal the narrator's experience and the cognitive self in the context of a universe in which supervision and scrutiny from a limited space for that self. The complex historical and political context is largely left to focus on the individual, but the theoretical framework draws on multiple fields in an attempt to see the middle sister in a greater cross-disciplinary understanding. This thesis will explore the wider context of social control and self-concept in Anna Burns' Milkman by dissecting the narrative voice of the middle sister. It will show how the middle brother's narrative functions as a manifestation of the complex social world in which he is forced to function. The researcher get the point about narrative form deepens our understanding of middle sister's position of submission and nonsubmission to the outside subjugation and expectation, her position of being an unwilling centre stage, leaving her lost in a vacuous middle, searching for her being. In her continuous circumfusion and circumvention in and out of the story of her, the narrative remains circular between society and self, but always ultimately returning to that self.

Fifth, Holly Wielechowski (2021) an article entitled "Invented Histories: Gossip as Archival Practice in Anna Burns' Milkman." The article says archiving practices are evident in Anna Burns' novel Milkman. This novel depicts the complex power dynamics that prevail in the Catholic community. The authors argue that contemporary archival interior structures described by Burns are preserved through gossip as an oral form of archiving, demanding community conformity demands conformity from local communities through threats. retaliation in response to non-normative behavior. Because of the gossip's ability to operate on the emotional climate of society, such conformity is achieved through rendering private feelings a public influence, or what might be called social circulation and the exchange of private emotions; because of the high social value of this currency, gossip carries with it the threat of exclusion and the filing of those who do not comply with the implied norms of society.

The literature review above contains a discussion of the object of research, namely the novel Milkman by Anna Burns. Researchers try to find out more about the object to be studied. All the literature reviews that have been written are interrelated with each other, discussing the history associated with the Northern Ireland conflict, social conditions including the pressure felt by the narrator due to environmental factors, and also very complicated political problems. All of these discussions are included in the New Historicism Study introduced by Stephen Greenblatt.

According to Barry (Taufiq 2010:204) there are three layers that can be done in an effort to explain historical phenomena through the text. First, through ideology, which is an academic phase to unmask the ideology behind the text. Text doesn't just exist. As a construction that records historical events through its language network, the text accommodates and reflects the ideology behind it. According to Gallagher (1999:434) In fact, the ideological dimension is the most dominant thing in the study of new historicism. Second, through discursive practices that occur in their own time; that is, an attempt to explain discursive practices that have occurred. Through the text, the discursive practice can be read, disassembled, and adequately explained. Third, through the current discursive practice, namely when the text is already in the struggle and struggle of discourse in the present context, because only through current discursive practice, substantial and fundamental things in the dimensions of human life can only be stated to be related to historical past even. (Andri Wicaksono, 2018:14)

B. Conceptual Framework

There are several aspects in the idea of New historicism that need to be known so that it becomes a basis and guide so that the focal point is clearer.

1. History

The term history has changed from an ancient Greek verb meaning “to know,” says Philip Durkin of the Oxford English Dictionary. The word “history” which comes from Greek originally means investigation, the act of seeking knowledge. through the search process it becomes a short jump to the stories of events that may be collected and we usually call stories.

History is the have a look at of the past – especially the people, societies, events, and problems of the past – as well as our tries to understand them. It’s miles a pursuit commonplace to all human societies. records can take the shape of outstanding tale, a rolling narrative filled with extraordinary personalities and stories of turmoil and triumph. Every technology adds its chapters to history whilst reinterpreting and finding new things in the ones chapters already written.

Traditionally, the study of history has been considered a part of the humanities, alongside a subject includeliterature. The object of concern that is studied in history will be very broad, both in terms of time and events. Apart from being an event, history is also the name of the branch of science that studies historical events. As a science, history is tasked with studying various important humanitarian events that occurred in the past. The results of historical studies conducted by historians are in the form of narratives which are widely known as histography. Several things must be considered related to history so that it does not, namely, Historical events, the events that have occurred will not occur at another time or in another place or called once occurs or einmalig, Historians, are people today who try to reconstruct historical events. Historians cannot find all the facts but only some of the historical events and Historiography is the work of historians to reconstruct historical events or the technical term historical reconstruction.

Further to being an interesting topic of take a look at in its personal proper, historians regularly declare that the observe of history teaches valuable instructions approximately past successes and disasters of leaders, economic systems, types of government, and different ordinary issues inside the human story. One may also examine from ancient elements that result in the rise and fall of nation-states or civilizations, motivations for political moves, the effects of social philosophies, and perspectives on lifestyle and technology.

2. New Historicism

The time period new historicism was first used by Stephen Greenblatt in an advent to the 1982 version of the journal genre, to provide new views in the take a look at renaissance, emphasizing the relevance of literary texts with diverse social, financial, and political forces that surround it (I Wayan Artika, 2015:51). In beginning theory, A complete advent to Literary and Cultural idea, a translation of Peter Barry's work, the terms "New Historicism" are used in Indonesian.

Begining Theory, A Comprehensive Introduction to Literary and Cultural Theory by Peter Barry introduced New Historicysm which in Indonesian is termed 'new history' and 'new history'. The term 'new historicism' was translated by Ismayasari who took it from Michael Ryan's translation. The term 'new history' which contains two things, namely understanding literature through history and knowing culture, history, and thought through literary texts (I Wayan Artika, 51: 2015). Therefore, New Historicism does not distinguish between literary and non-literary texts, include the Old History view (history as the background of literary works) or New Criticism (autonomous literature or a history). Specifically, the study of new historicism tries to interpret and re-examine the construction of power and the network it has formed through adequate reading of existing literary texts. The literary text is parsed in such a way in order to reveal the discursive practice that develops and operates in it. Therefore, in the context of the study of new historicism, it is the same as trying to open the veil of power praxis that runs through literary texts.

Historical events are suspected of having underlying underlying contents include ideology, politics, and socio-culture. Therefore, according to new historicism, the most important thing is to look at the phenomena behind these historical events to dismantle the ideological, political and socio-cultural dimensions. The main work of new historicism is to read, disassemble, and re-examine these historical events in the ideological, political and socio-cultural contexts.

New historicism consists of things, particularly (1) understanding literature via history and (2) understanding the subculture, records, and thought through literature. consequently, new historicism does now not distinguish literary texts from non-literary ones, which includes the view of antique history (history as the history of literary works) or new grievance (autonomous or ancient literature). New historicism applies the intertext working technique via analyzing numerous texts in parallel (parallel studying) because all texts are products of the times and are interconnected. The utility of the new historicism method, reading literature “in a series of files”. (Peter Barry, 2009:166)

New historicism does not value cultural products (high-low, literary-nonliterary, serious-popular) but rather shows how a various variety of texts related to the problem of the era because literature and history have a relation. New Historicism holds that there is no objective, coherent, and accurate history. All history is written by people and can always be rewritten. Therefore, history always contains the subjective bias of the author. It is this subjective bias that influences their interpretation of the past. Based on this view, they put forward their belief that history is only one of many discourses used to interpret and understand the events experienced by mankind. In this new perspective, history is on a par with sociology, political science, or the sciences other similar.

3. Politics

Politics is a phenomenon that is closely related to the life of social beings. Etymologically, the word “Politik” comes from the Dutch language “politiek” and the English language “politics” I, both of which come from the Greek word “Politika” which means from, for, or related to citizens. In general, politics is a process of forming and distributing power in a society in which the form is a decision-making process, especially within the state.

The term history has changed from an ancient Greek verb meaning “to know,” says Philip Durkin of the Oxford English Dictionary. The word “history” which comes from Greek originally means investigation, the act of seeking knowledge. through the search process it becomes a short jump to the stories of events that may be collected and we usually call stories.

In public life, the term “politics” was originally introduced by Plato in his book entitled “politeia” which is also known as “the Republic” and later developed through Aristotle’s work, known as “politica” (Deliar Noer, 1982: 11-12). The works of Plato and Aristotle are seen as the starting point of political thought in the history of their development, where it can be seen that “polity” is a term used as a concept of organizing society because both works discuss issues related to issues of how the government is implemented to create a political community group or a good state organization.

Thus, the concept contains various elements, include institutions that carry out government activities, community groups as interested parties, policies, and laws that become the means of regulating society and the ideals to be achieved. Maurice Duverger says the definition of politics is power, the strength of the entire network of institutions that are related to authority, in this case, the atmosphere is dominated by some people over others. And According to Andrew Heywood, the definition of politics is the activity of a country that goals to create, preserve, and amend all preferred policies that govern its life, which means that it cannot be separated from the symptoms of war and cooperation.

The term politics evolved in such a way that it was absorbed into our language (Indonesia) with 3 (three) meanings regarding the government of one country against another, deceit or cunning, and is also used as a name for a discipline “knowledge namely political science” (WJS Poerwadarminta, 183: 763). There are 2 views on politics, namely:

1. The view that links politics with the existence of a state, namely: central and regional government affairs
2. Views that relate to issue of power, authority and/ or with conflict.

Dr. Kartini Kartono (1989: 5) sees the definition of politics from two aspects, namely: from the structure and institutions, politics can be interpreted as follows:

1. Everything that has to do with government (regulations, government actions, laws, laws, policies), beleid and others;
2. Regulation and control by the state;
3. How to govern a certain territory;

4. The organization, arrangement, and actions of the state or government to control the state in a constitutional and formal juridical manner.

Gabriel A. Almond argues that there are six political institutions in a political system: interest groups, political parties, the legislature, the executive branch, the bureaucracy, and the judiciary. The political structure proposed by Almond is not only relevant to the political system in modern countries but also traditional countries.

Looking at the definition of politics above, it can be concluded that politics is not only related to the state, because certain conflicts, provisions, regulations, symptoms, and social problems can also be political or can be turned into political problems. Politics if it does not work properly, there will be politicization in it. In this case, Deutsch says Dr. Kartini Kartono in M.H. Ahmad Sadzali (2018): "Politicization is making things politica" (politicization is making everything into politics). It is inevitable in people's lives that a problem will turn into a political problem when the government is involved in solving it or engages itself in solving it, and these solving social problems are referred to as political activity and on the other hand, thwarting government efforts to interfere in solving a social problem is also called political activity.

C. Milkman

1. Synopsis

In Milkman, the name is lacking. people, as well as locations, are all referred to as by nickname; on this experience, the reader need to get used to the truth that the main man or woman is handiest “middle sister”, and the country she lives in is only “our facet” and “this side of the street”.

Middle sister is telling her tale in the destiny, remembering when she was eighteen years antique and she met a milkman. “He is no longer our milkman. I don’t suppose he belongs to anyone. He failed to take milk orders. No milk about him” (Burns, 2018: 2). This man showed as much as her on a weekday, on the end of his shift, drove slowly via her aspect, and presented her a trip home. middle sister was analyzing Ivanhoe on her manner home, this addiction, as we shall see, gave people something to speak approximately, and opened up possibilities for the milkman’s approach and she or he turned down the journey due to the fact she did not know this man, who knew his complete family, and his exercises. and even “possibly her boyfriend”.

The milkman seemed over and over, throughout his run within the parks and reservoirs, after his French training downtown, and so forth. He spoke in a non-threatening way, so he did not realize a way to address situations that didn’t pose any bodily chance. It brings studying to the town where he lives: civil war and sectarian war. it is a country marked by way of mistrust, violence, and strife; the primary difference is faith, and people live in separate locations consistent with their ideals.

What the milkman did turned into mental abuse and he understood that he desired it. The network she lives in starts speaking approximately this meeting and that they determine that the sister is having an affair with this a great deal older married man. Of course, he did it after paintings. The middle sister is attempting the whole thing to avoid the following meeting due to the fact she is afraid of him and his threats to his lady friend.

Although it appears that there is no first-rate plot twist in this tale, the narrative receives the reader captive. Through the story, the middle sister grew more conscious of what's being performed to her and is appearing extra actively. She receives the factor of subsequently talking to people approximately the rumors, to understand how this escalated so quick and how no person sees her because the victim she is.

A lady, named the woman, is famous for poisoning other people's drinks; considered one of her sufferers happens to be a center sister and after this incident, the girl is killed. This reasons a shift within the community's thoughts since the simplest affordable rationalization is that the milkman brought on this murder for the safety of the middle sister. The associates begin to keep away from her via fear and stand watching every move she makes in public.

Not long after that, the milkman is assassinated. This turned into earlier warned at the very first line of the book: "The day anyone Somebody placed a gun to my breast and called me a cat and threatened to shoot me turned into the same day the milkman died" (Burns, 2018: 1).

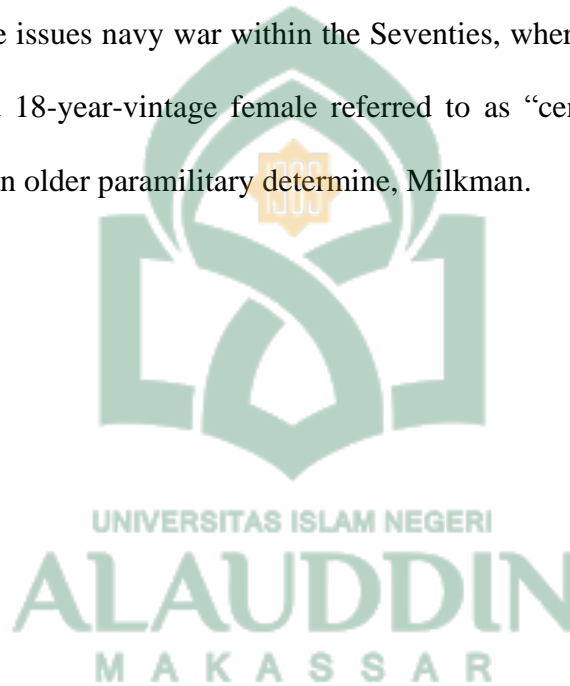

2. Biography of Anna Burns

Anna Burns (born 1962 in Belfast, Northern Ireland) is an author from Northern Ireland. She was born in Belfast and raised within the working-class Catholic district of Ardoyne. She attended St. Center College, Gemma. In 1987, she moved to London. In 2014, she moved into a dwelling in East Sussex, at the south coast of England. Her novel Milkman won the 2018 Man Booker Prize, the 2019 Orwell Prize for political fiction, and the 2020 International Dublin Literary Award.

Her first novel, No Bones, is an account of a lady's life growing up in Belfast in the course of the Troubles. The dysfunctional circle of relatives in the novel symbolizes the Northern Ireland political situation. No Bones gained the 2001 Winifred Holtby Memorial Prize presented by the Royal Society of Literature for the best first-class novel of the 12 months inside the United Kingdom and Ireland. Some of the novels that depict the problems inside the literature of Northern Ireland, No Bones is considered a critical work and has been compared to Dubliners by using James Joyce for showing the Belfast population's everyday language.

Her 2nd novel, Little Structures, was published in 2007 via Fourth Property (an imprint of HarperCollins). It's a darkly comic and ironic tale focused on a woman from a tightly-knit circle of relatives of criminals on a task of retribution.

In 2018, Burns gained the man Booker Prize for her third novel Milkman, making her the first Northern Irish author to win the award. After the rite, Graywolf Press introduced that it might submit “Milkman” within the U.S. on 11 December 2018. Milkman is an experimental novel set all through. The issues navy war within the Seventies, wherein the narrator is an unnamed 18-year-vintage female referred to as “center sister” who’s stalked via an older paramilitary determine, Milkman.

CHAPTER III

RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

A. Method of The Research

The research method used in this research is descriptive qualitative. A descriptive qualitative method, namely research that intends to understand the phenomena of what the research subject is experiencing as a whole, and using descriptions, the data collected takes the form of words or pictures. The results of written research contain quotations from the data to illustrate and provide evidence of presentation. (Emzir, 2012: 3)

The novel research entitled Milkman by Anna Burns uses qualitative descriptive research methods. Done by describing the facts followed by analysis, but not only describing but also providing sufficient understanding and explanation. (Ratna, 2013: 53)

B. Resources of Data

In this research, the researcher has two data sources. There are primary and secondary data. The primary data of this research is taken from a novel, namely “Milkman” by Anna Burns. First published by Faber & Faber in 2018 with a total of 368 pages and this novel is a historical novel genre. and secondary data of this research are taken from book, articles, news, magazine:

1. Book:

- a) Northern Ireland Since 1969 (Paul Dixon, Eamonm, and O’Kane: 2011)
- b) Representing the Troubles in Irish Short Fiction (Michael L. Storey: 2004)
- c) Religion, Identity, and Politics in Northern Ireland: Boundaries of Belonging and Belief (Claire Michell: 2006)
- d) Historical Dictionaries of Northern Ireland (Gordon Gillespie:2008)
- e) Armed Struggle (The History of the IRA) (Rogelio Alonso: 2006)
- f) The Longest War Northern Ireland’s troubled history (Marc Mulholland:2002)

2. Article

- a) How Did the Shankill Road Become Northern Ireland’s Most Notorious Street? (Niall McGrade: 2017)
- b) Flags and Emblems (Display) Act (Northern Ireland) (Martin Melaugh:1954)
- c) Only Women Bleed by Alice Cooper. (Songfacts.com)

3. News

- a) Car Bomb Kills Airey Neave (BBC On this Day | 30 | 1979)
- b) The Trouble (Jeff Wallendfeld: 2020)
- c) “Match of the Day Begins” (BBC.com)

4. Magazine

- a) Words and Music (Billboard Publication:1975)

C. Instrument of Research

In collecting data, the researcher using note-taking as an instrument of the research. Note-taking is recording information that needs to be noted when reading or getting a reference. After reading it, the researcher concludes each chapter of the novel Milkman and other important supporting references.

D. The Procedure of Data Analysis

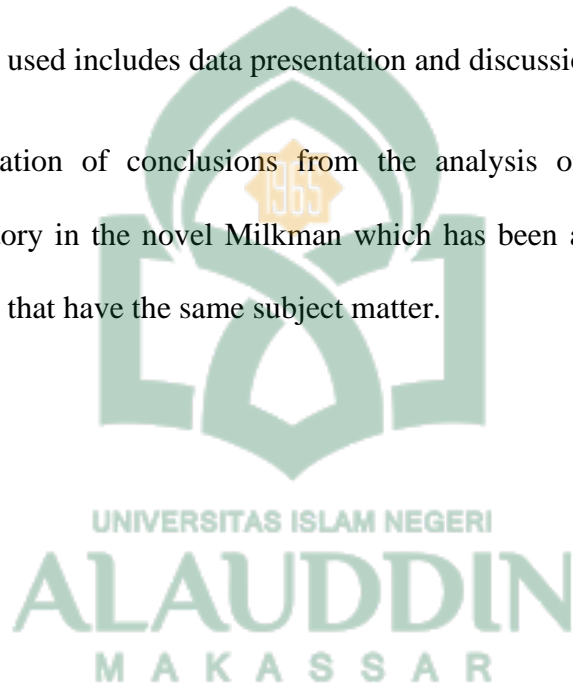

The steps taken to obtain data are:

1. Read the novel Milkman,
2. The researcher choose the sentences about the political history that related to the study from the text novel.
3. The researcher mark and note the work or sentence from the text which having the relation with this study.
4. The researcher make the representation based on the data that have been mark before.
5. The researcher started to analyze the data. Analyzed data which contained the fact of the political history by using descriptive qualitative method.
6. Last, the researcher made the conclusion and suggestion of this study.

E. The Technique of Data Analysis

In this study, data analysis technique utilize non-literary texts as an effort to integrate the literary texts to be analyzed. This study procedure includes:

- a. Parallel reading technique, which is a technique that is carried out by reading literary texts (novels) with non-literary texts in the form of history books, articles, scientific journals, magazine and information from the internet related to the 1960s tragedy in Northern Ireland;
- b. The analysis used includes data presentation and discussion; and
- c. The presentation of conclusions from the analysis of facts regarding political-history in the novel Milkman which has been aligned with non-literary texts that have the same subject matter.

CHAPTER IV

FINDING AND DISCUSSION

This chapter consists of two parts. The first part is the findings that will answer the research question, namely the aspect of related history found in the novel. The second part is the discussion which will present the arguments related to political history in Anna Burns' novel.

A. Finding

After analyzing and closely reading the novel, this research found several factual events related to the events in the novel. It can be said their novel tells about the history of Northern Ireland in the conflict "the trouble" in the 1970s.

The historical events in the novel Milkman by Anna Burns lead to violent conflicts, as seen in the texts in the novel, which clearly present the history of the 1968 tragedy. This presentation covers the historical events of Northern Ireland in 1968 and the existence of political conflicts in history that started from sectarian conflict.

1. Time of Occurrence

History cannot be separated by space and time or is often referred to as setting in a literary work because time is one of the elements of history. History is always related to chronology and uniqueness. Every historical event has a uniqueness that is always different from time to time. In Milkman's novel there is no place and time information. So, the first thing to look for is to find out the time of the events discussed in Milkman's novel first by looking for the facts in the novel and then juxtaposing it with information obtained from various sources. There are several data found related to the time of occurrence. There are several data in Milkman's novel that show the timeline:

“This would be a nineteenth-century book because I did not like the twentieth century”. (BURNS, 2018: 10)

The sentence hints that the story takes place in the 19th century. When explaining the story at that time he was 18 years old. Next:

“I didn’t own this territory so that meant he was allowed to run in it just as much as I was allowed to run in it, just as much as children in the Seventies felt entitled to drink their alcohol in it, just as slightly older children would later in the Eighties feel justified sniffing their glue in it, just as older people again in the Nineties would come to inject themselves with heroin in it, just as at present the state forces were hiding in it to photograph renouncers of-the-state.” (BURNS, 2018: 11)

In the data above, middle sister is talking about the 70's and 90's when parks and reservoirs became a gathering place for children who felt they had the right to drink alcohol, it was justified to inhale glue there, even parents came to inject heroin there as a substitute for alcohol. known that the narrator (middle sister). In the book it can be said that he has memory and is older in seeing how to tell stories which gives him the right to describe the series of activities carried out by children. So, it can be assumed that the event occurred after the 1970s. Music is also a way of knowing the timeline of events, here's the data:

“This was when I began to wonder, again, if maybe-boyfriend should be going to sunsets, if he should be owning coffee pots, if he should like football whilst giving the impression of not liking football, no matter I myself didn’t like football but my not liking football, apart from that Match of the Day music, wasn't the point.” (BURNS,2018: 61)

Match of the day (MOTD) is a program with analysis and highlights of the football genre. MOTD also has a dedicated channel for Northern Ireland which is produced and broadcast by BBC Northern Ireland. The program was first broadcast in the 1980s. (“Match of the Day Begins” BBC). Next:

“Again this confused me for was I saying then, that I was ashamed of him, that mainstream boys, the ones who did fit in, the ones who wanted to beat up Julie Covington for singing ‘Only Women Bleed’ which they thought was a song about periods when it wasn't a song about periods I felt uneasy.” (BURNS, 2018: 61)

The song "only women Bleed" is included in the best song category because many people are enthusiastic about interpreting the meaning of this song as seen in the sentence above. It is an Alice Cooper single released in April 1970. (Songfacts.com)

“Considering alone his avowals of devotion towards women, his mission of idolatry, his supreme glorification and deification and view that on earth in women was the life of things, the breadth of things, the cyclicity, essential nature, higher aspect, the best, most archetypal and utmost mystery of everything – keeping in mind too, this was the NineteenSeventies – there was no way, under normal circumstances, he would not have been placed in the category of our district's beyond-the-pales. The reason he wasn't was because of his popularity, but as for this knowing nothing of our political situation, and especially given his current criticism of me, I latched immediately into that.” (BURNS, 2018: 50)

Judging from the entire data above, it can be concluded that the events that occurred in the novel were in the 1970s and there was a political conflict that occurred. So, researchers have found some clues that point to the time depicted in Anna Burns' novel Milkman. Here the country or place of residence is not clearly stated. However, it is clearly illustrated in the novel about the bombing incident, the presence of religious people, sectarian conflicts to the emotional flag symbol. This incident is very descriptive of what happened in Northern Ireland in the 1970s. Actually, the problem of Northern Ireland has existed since the 12th century. However, this study will only discuss the Northern Ireland conflict known as The Trouble in the period 1968-1998. This data is consistent with the data found by (Holly Wielechowski, 2021: 2) namely Milkman's novel set in the climax of the Northern Ireland Troubles of the 1970s where sectarian and political violence dominates the local Catholic community, the novel tells a disturbing story of stalking and subsequent social exclusion. Against an 18-year-old girl by local paramilitary figures.

His novel is replete with threats of violence at every turn and, in a community still under the control of the British colonial state. The sentence above also describes gloomy times, both threats from interested parties and how the political situation dominated those times. The threats include sectarian conflict, bombings, curfew restrictions and injustice.

2. Sectarian Conflict as the Root of Political Conflict

Sectarianism is bigotry, discrimination or hatred that arises due to differences between a group, include differences in religious denominations or political factions. The sectarian conflict seen in the novel is a conflict between a group and another. The problem that is generally brought up in this regard is the unfair treatment of allegations of discrimination against one race which makes the Republic of Ireland eager to get Northern Ireland to join the Republic of Ireland. However, Protestants refused and chose to remain loyal to England. In the end the conflict expanded because of this difference, so this conflict developed into a battle that took many victims.

The Northern Ireland conflict, or what is known as The Troubles, originated from differences in the perspective of ethnicity, which then shifted towards religious sentiments and led to political and social segregation between Catholic and Protestant communities in Ireland. The issue of ethnicity between Nationalists and Unionists emerged in the 16th century when there were differences in the views of their ancestors.

First, the sectarian conflicts that exist in the novel, the Narrator describes them through texts that touch on the inter-religious area, which is the problem of differences between them. When he was picked up by his girlfriend, and when he found out, his girlfriend complained about the complicated meeting rules. This can be seen in the data below:

“This sad and lonely road ran between the religions, and I would meet him there, not because he was the opposite religion, for he wasn’t, but because it was easier to do that than to have him call for me at my door.” (Burns, 2018:59)

As seen in the data above discusses the area between religions that are included in the form of regional sectarianism. This sectarian conflict makes one know that her boyfriend can’t pick her up right in front of her house, which makes it complicated and dangerous even to the point of lying that there is nowhere to go in the area, but that’s not true.

From the data above, there are sentences that describe the existence of religious-based sectarian conflicts. Northern Ireland conflict or known as The Troubles, started from differences in ethnic perspectives, which then shifted towards religious sentiments and causes. Segregation of political and social relations between the Catholic and Protestant communities in Ireland. Nationalists and Unionists emerged in the 16th century when there were differences in the views of their ancestors. Nationalists who are Catholic believe their ancestors were Celtic, while Unionists, who are mostly Protestant, claim that their ancestors were Cruthin. (Dixon, Eamonn, O’Kane2011)

This debate then shifted towards who the first inhabitants of the Irish land were. Then this territorial issue continued to become a political debate and friction between Unionists and Nationalists. Finally, there was discrimination against the division of territory.

In addition, the majority of Irish people are Catholic, and the majority of people in England and Scotland are Protestant. Today, Northern Irish society is divided into two main poles: Republicans and Loyalists. Republicans want Northern Ireland to be separated from Britain and merged into the Catholic Republic of Ireland, while Loyalists want Northern Ireland to remain part of Britain, which is predominantly Protestant. Domestic conflicts had occurred before Great Britain and Scotland merged into the United Kingdom of Great Britain.

Narrator describes the time and place that was so harsh in terms of violence that occurred between a group and another, this part can be seen in the data below:

“At this time, in this place, when it came to the political problems, which included bombs and guns and death and maiming, ordinary people said ‘their side did it’ or ‘our side did it,’ or ‘their religion did it’ or ‘our religion did it’ or ‘they did it’ or ‘we did it when what was really meant was ‘defenders-of-the-state did it’ or ‘renouncers-of-the-state did it’ or ‘the state did it.’” (Burns, 2018: 22)

This data shows that the time and place of events narrated by the Narrator are filled with dangerous activities. Injuries to death have become commonplace, and sometimes the culprit is unknown. The narrator’s expression of this is consistent with the account that In the late 1960s tensions, which had simmered for nearly half a century, came to a head, though initially over civil rights issues in Northern Ireland rather than over the unification of north and south. These events sparked riots in Derry and Belfast, and soon Catholic and Protestant neighborhoods in both cities turned into virtual forts, “no-go” areas where other sects dared not enter. (Storey, 2004: 129)

Second, in the novel, it is implicitly described about the tension that is surrounded by political sensations experienced by middle sisters. This can be seen from the data below:

“An audible ‘click’ sounded as the milkman and I ran by a bush and this was a bush I’d run by lots of times without clicks coming out of it. I knew it had happened this time because of the milkman and his involvement, and by ‘involvement’ I mean connected, and by

‘connected’ I mean active rebellion, and by ‘active rebellion’ I mean state-enemy renouncer owing to the political problems that existed in this place. So now I was to be on file somewhere, in a photograph somewhere, as a once unknown, but now certainly known associate.” Burns (2018: 11)

From the data above, a clicking sound came from the nearby bushes. Stalking in this detailed way is not something untrained there was something strong in the scene that caused the Middle Sister to feel uncomfortable and threatening. Milkman as a security force provides surveillance and possibly others in the community who may be watching. This is one example of how the seemingly mundane in this novel is conjured up to convey the complex affective atmosphere of city life. Shaped by conflict, surveillance and sectarian divisions. Milkman is considered a threatening government person as can be seen in the data below:

“The day Somebody McSomebody put a gun to my breast and called me a cat and threatened to shoot me was the same day the milkman died. He had been shot by one of the state hit squads and I did not care about the shooting of this man. Others did care though, and some were those who, in the parlance, ‘knew me to see but not to speak to” Burns (2018:1)

McSomebody, who threatened to shoot the narrator in the opening line of the novel, suddenly switched to the first person plural while threatening him. then there are these groups reflected as a united group, not as people united in an honorable and just cause, but as gangs enjoying violence.

A conflict is based on many factors include ethnicity and inequality as well as religion which is one of the central dimensions of heterogeneous social life. These overlapping factors also affect political significance.

Several sources that have influenced the political significance of the Northern Ireland conflict, namely: first, religion is integrally tied to the strength of the relationship between the church and politicians who then work together to represent Unionists and Nationalists in Northern Ireland. Second, religion is the limiter and basis for the spread of segregation, just as religion shows various sources (books of teachings) to separate groups from one another, including religious rituals that build solidarity in the community both practically and cognitively for Protestants and Catholics. Third, religious ideology does originate from religion, but not theologically, and also does not inform the identification of community groups, especially Protestants, so that theology and doctrine help formulate the definition of identity and political groups for Protestants. (Mitchell, 2006: 1)

Then, this conflict is not only related to differences but this conflict surrounded by political activity are also contained in it. It can be seen when middle sister talks with his brother-in-law, who discusses political conflicts where life at that time was all political while the main character does not understand what his brother-in-law meant. Then, an issue they discussed was the question of the two groups or communities that caused political problems. This can be seen in the data below:

“Then it was I learned two things. One was that that long-term rumor of a third brother-in-law being in la-la-land as regards the political problems were incorrect because he was in touch with what was happening politically. In two ways, the community, maybe both communities, maybe even the land ‘over the water’ and the land ‘over the border,’ had moved things on to the tune of the political problems here being referred to now as the sorrows, the losses and those other things he had just said they were. ‘Seems I know more about the political situation,’ he then said, ‘thank you.’ (Burns, 2018:50)

Based on the data from Milkman’s novel above, the daily life of the characters in the novel cannot be separated from the political problems that haunt them. Daily politics are based on rumors that someone can be considered to take part in political activity. Besides that, the two communities that are across the water and the border have exacerbated the situation and made the political situation more perfect and have become suffering from losses. Northern Ireland is a country that, in its development, is full of conflicts, one of which is a prolonged conflict due to differences in interests between groups which has claimed more than 3000 lives.

As a result of the political monopoly carried out by the Protestant community, both the Catholic and Protestant communities carried out violent acts under the pretext of defending themselves from threats to each other. Below are the impacts that arise as a result of this identity conflict:

3. Bombing Exploitation in 1970

The early to mid-1970s was one of the bloodiest eras. This Northern Irish sectarianism has made people accustomed to the sound of bombs. Below are some data found related to the bombing that occurred in the novel, include with data below:

“After that was the police barracks followed by the house were always there was the smell of baking bread. After the bread house came the holy women’s house where often they could be heard practicing hymns, not once ‘Ave Maria.’ After the holy house came the parks & reservoirs through which, even if still light, at this time of night, never would I deviate and shortcut through. Instead, I’d go a long way round and come to the street and the tiny house of the third sister and third brother-in-law. This was the last of my personal landmarks because then came the few short residential roads which led to my street and my own front door. At present, I was on the rim of entering the ten-minute area, which of late had been disturbed within its own disturbance by a bomb going off in the center of it. Because of this bomb, one of the three churches was no longer there.” (Burns, 2018:65)

From the description above, the Narrator tells the story and shows the characteristics of the road he sees when he walks to his home, which he calls the 10-minute area. He gave the name 10 minutes because it took him about 10 minutes to pass through the road when he rushed because the road looked small and gloomy. Furthermore, the Narrator also describes the characteristics of the road he walks, and it turns out that there are many similarities with the Shankill road. Shankill Road is one of the main roads leading to west Belfast in Northern Ireland. It runs through the working class, especially loyalists, in the area known as Shankill. The street runs west about 1.5 miles (2.4 km) from central Belfast and is lined with shops. Residents live on many roads that branch off from the main road (McGrade, 2017).

The area along Shankill Road is part of the Court’s constituent district. Shankill Road is one of the most famous roads in Belfast, Northern Ireland. The road has a history; Shankill road witnessed Belfast during The Trouble, including the bombings. The Irish Seanchill, which means ‘old church,' there has been a settlement in Shankill land for at least a long time where it is known as "St Patrick's Church of the White Ford." Then, May 7, 1966, was the first modern UVF attack when a group of men with gasoline bombed a Catholic pub, and there were no casualties.

"After my second meeting in the parks & reservoirs with the Milkman, nosey first brother-in-law, who of course had sniffed it out, told his wife, my first sister, to tell our mother to come and have a talk with me. This was specially recommended after my eldest sister's earlier chat with me hadn't gone as planned. So she came round to see ma, and this was the sister who didn't love her husband because still, she was in grief over her ex-boyfriend. No longer was she in grief, however, because he'd cheated on her and taken up with a new woman. Now she was in grief because he was dead. He'd been killed in a car bomb at work because he'd been the wrong religion in the wrong place, and that was another thing that happened. He was dead. And sister? My sister. She hadn't been able to get over him when he was living, so I didn't know how she'd do that now he was" (Burns, 2018:40)

In this regard, the data below clarifies the chronology of the bombings that occurred:

"Not really cars either. Did I know which ones were acceptably 'over the water' and which were a no-no? As for the Blower Bentley, even I had come to feel that that vehicle definitely suggested some kind of nation-defining emblem – but could it not be possible, I wondered – as maybe-boyfriend's gentle, diplomatic neighbor earlier had wondered – for it to qualify as one of those permissible crossover exceptions? The angry rumor currently circulating in maybe-boyfriend's area seemed to suggest not. No neutral bits, therefore. All traitorous bits, therefore."

'A car bomb blows up and out.' (Burns, 2018: 85)

In the data above, Milkman tells the middle sister that there is a device stuck to the exhaust. Then the sister thinks again that the car bomb was planted while she was in the factory parking lot and was planted by a colleague of a different religion. There were victims who died in the bombing incident; as we know that a car bomb is an explosive that is placed in a car or truck to be detonated. Bombs of this type are a favorite weapon of terrorists, insurgents, and assassins because cars can transport large-capacity explosives without arousing suspicion.

As reported in the BBC stated that Neave was killed by a car bomb while leaving the parking lot of the House of Commons. The bomb, which is said to be highly sophisticated, exploded as Neave started driving the car on the exit just before 15:00 GMT. The 63-year-old Conservative MP, known for his hardline on anti-IRA security, was taken to Westminster Hospital, where he died of his injuries. It is not yet known when the bomb was placed in his car, but investigators believe a timer and vibrator - which detonated the bomb through motion - were used to confirm the bomb exploded as Neave left the Commons (1979: Car bomb kills Airey Neave, 2005).

It is common knowledge that Northern Ireland is one of the countries where bombings, either car bombs or truck bombs, are still frequent. The trouble is the most critical period because the bombing action is also touted as a bombing act in the event that resulted in the most casualties during The Troubles. This bombing not only resulted in many casualties but also resulted in the death of 3 important state figures.

4. Legal Equality

Law is an inseparable part of a country that regulates and provides sanctions for a problem. Therefore the law is very important and needed, but when the legal system is not carried out according to procedures, it will have a negative impact. In this regard, there are several quotations in Milkman's novel that talk about legal inequality, and the Narrator clearly talks about the legal situation that prevails there, which can be categorized as kangaroo law. This can be seen in the following data:

“There was also that day-to-day business of dirty laundry in public, and of the district renouncers laying down their law, their prescripts, their ordinances plus punishments for any perceived infringements of them. There were beatings, brandings, tar and featherings, disappearances, black-eyed, multi-bruised people walking about with missing digits who most certainly had those digits only the day before. There were two, the impromptu courts held in the district's hutments, also in other disused buildings and houses especially friendly to the renouncers.” (Burns, 2018: 92)

In the data above, the author tries to convey and inform the reader about the applicable law at that time which is commonly called the kangaroo law. In the novel, John and Mary try to live a civil life as calmly as possible but eventually become restless and no longer believe in moral truth. When the public first became aware of the legal situation at that time, in 1976 a number of Republican Party sympathizers were arrested and imprisoned without any trial. As part of the British Empire, Northern Ireland had the privilege of establishing its own parliament that favored Protestantism over Catholicism in areas include employment, rights of expression, education, and voting rights (Wallenfeldt, 2020).

Furthermore, the data below also discusses the kangaroo law in the novel when someone violates the emblem rules of a region:

“It’s that I’m bewildered,” he stressed, “that anyone from “our side of the road” would let their proclivity for car bits override what should be an instinctual recoil from the other side’s symbolism and badges. And if the local boys should get to hear’ – here he meant the renouncers, which meant they would get to hear because he was going to make it his duty to tell them – ‘the one who brought that flag in might find himself facing some hefty street justice. And what of the dead people – all those killed so far in these political problems? Is it to be the case then that all of them died in vain?” (Burns, 2018:27)

From the data above, the sister is talking about the dangers of an emblem, include a flag entering an area that can result in someone being punished. In the data above, the legal process referred to is a court process that ignores the principles of law, justice, and legal procedures. According to the text of the Northern Ireland parliament, the law or regulation has been in existence since 1954 and is part of (Melaugh, n.d.). However, this did not become a strong legal basis at the time of The Trouble 1970. Injuries and damage were very detrimental to everyone, Looking at Milkman’s text and the context that existed at that time, the violence and methods of kangaroo law described in Milkman’s novel parallel the history of the trouble in the 1980s, explaining the consequences of a lot of violence and the kangaroo law leading to hunger strike protests that occurred at that time.

5. Curfew restrictions

There are several datums in the novel Milkman where the data about curfew restrictions is capitalized as if it were urgent:

“Women always broke the curfews. That would be the traditional women because until recently, there hadn’t been any newfangled branch of sisterhood women. This breaking of the curfews, too, would be because the traditional women’s patience would have been stretched far enough. It would have been over-tried, over-tested, and the subsequent snapping of it would be directed towards any group of men, any religion, any side of the water, setting up rules and regulations, overreaching themselves with their rules and regulations, expecting everyone else too – meaning women – to go along with the preposterousness of the silliness they had concocted as a rationale in their heads.” (Burns, 2018:122)

In the data above, the emergence of women who are engaged in feminist activities. Women and children are not considered dangerous and disturbing by the paramilitary. The arrival of a woman who is known as an issue woman who is known to have broad insight and becomes a facilitator in a group even though she comes from a different district. However, this is not a problem because women are considered weak and have no power. Finally, the women fought with the defectors, then the indigenous women would also violate the curfew because they were sick of being dictated to, and that’s where the war broke out.

“CURFEW’S OVER! EVERYBODY IS TO COME OUT!
CURFEW’S OVER!” (Burns, 2018: 122)

“RETURN TO YOUR HOMES. THIS IS NOT A GAME. THIS IS THE LAST INTIMATION. OBEY THE SIXTEEN HUNDRED HOUR CURFEW. IF YOU ARE NOT OFF THE STREET IN ...”
(Burns, 2018: 123)

In the Northern Ireland conflict that on 3 July 1970, a 36-hour curfew began in the Catholic Lower Falls area of Belfast. The curfew further worsened relations with the British Army. As in the Milkman novel data, the Narrator says that the early arrival of the defectors was considered helpful in dealing with the chaos that ensued; however, it did not last long. (Gillespie, 2008: 81)

There are excerpts of interviews with women mobilizing against the soldiers. The British Army came into the equation. In 1970 British troops stormed our house. They came in the middle of the night and broke down the door. Take people out of bed and search houses destroy the house. So, that's when you start wondering or start wondering. Then it became clear we had a Falls curfew in June 1970. We also had ongoing problems with Loyalty, especially on Springfield Road. I live just off Springfield Road. So we've always had that relationship or bond, if you like, living on peace lines. Later in, another data says many new IRA recruits shared the same view of the British Army before relations with the Catholic community deteriorated as a result of acts includedetention without trial in August 1971 or the Falls Road curfew in July 1970, which resulted in house searches. Massive, seriously. disturbance and death of five people.

B. Discussion

Based on the results of the analysis, it is found that there is a political history that dominates and has a parallel relationship with Northern Ireland's political history documents regarding The Trouble in 1968-1998, includes sectarian conflicts, curfews, bombings, and injustice. Through the parallel reading technique, it will be seen the relationship between literary works (Anna Burns' Milkman) as primary data and secondary data (articles, magazines, news, newspapers, journals) from the same period. The events that occur in Milkman's novel are closely related to politics that describe the political history of Northern Ireland in the 1970s.

Milkman has also been considered by looking at the background of the author who comes from Ireland, previous research believes that this novel tells the history of Ireland, this novel is also a reflection of his era as well as an expression of the author. Looking at the plot of the story in Milkman's novel, the researcher finds that the existence of regional segregation is marked by differences in ethnic-religious groups with other groups which eventually lead to violent sectarian conflicts.

This sectarianism led to the emergence of political camps, namely the nationalists (the Catholic majority) and the Loyalists (the Protestant majority). This was especially evident among Protestants, who for a long time occupied positions of domination. It is this difference that causes the injustice felt by Republicans to trigger bombings, attacks, and territorial sabotage in Ireland. In response to the IRA's rampant actions, the Irish Government issued powers to the police to arrest them without going through a judicial process. This policy brought consequences and pressure for Catholics in Northern Ireland. As part of the British empire, Northern Ireland established its own parliament which adopted policies that tended to favor Protestants and exclude Catholics from voting in elections.

The novel Milkman (2018) is Anna Burns' third work. Her work was awarded the Booker Prize for Fiction in 2018 and made Anna Burns the first Irish writer to receive the award. That same year, Milkman also won the National Book Critics Circle Fiction Award. Meanwhile, in 2019, Anna Burns was shortlisted for the Women's Award for Fiction, and Milkman won the Orwell Prize for Political Fiction. In one of the stories, Burns says that the work was not aimed at Northern Ireland but was shown to the countries where these events had previously taken place. Northern Ireland is one country that has very specific similarities. It is intended to be used as a lesson in the future.

The violence that is almost completely pointless is evident as described in the previous section, some of these events being sectarian conflicts, bombings, imposition of curfews, and injustices that occurred. But it is likely that references to war will color and shape politics for a long time. These memories may infect a new generation with ready-made war traditions, but the same old warriors can direct their energies, with greater effect, into the politics of peace. The echoes of bombs and bullets became more common than their emotional closeness. Looking at some of the events that have occurred to date in some Northern Ireland news, this is a result of the divisions that occurred in the past.

The potential is now in Northern Ireland for experiments that matter in the wider world. Can two national identities and loyalties be accommodated in the same country without repression, rebellion, or violence? That the identities of the different conclusions exist can hardly be doubted, but the test is whether these can be institutionally acknowledged to the satisfaction of both. Furthermore, if Northern Ireland is to escape the debilitating tensions of ongoing communal rivalry, space must be given to the development of a politics and society that is no longer polarized between Protestants and Catholics.

Furthermore, compared to the previous literature review related to the subject matter in chapter two, this study highlights political events in Northern Ireland's history. Suppose the related literature discusses social life and gender roles that are considered to have contributed to political events in Northern Ireland or else emphasizes gossip as a political archive. However, this research is more in-depth in finding the historical facts that Anna Burns is trying to tell and its influence on the new historicism discourse in the juxtaposition of literary and non-literary works.

Milkman, as a historical genre novel, provides an overview of obscure events in Northern Ireland and makes anyone who reads it wonder about the cause and effect of these events. According to the previously mentioned verse of the Qur'an with interpretation, QS. Yusuf: 111 Allah reminds us again that in the stories of the prophets and apostles, including the story of the Prophet Yusuf, there are messages that must be learned and lived by humans. Their stories contain teachings for people of reason. Can reduce our chances of making wrong decisions that will harm us. Al-Qur'an Surah Yusuf: 111 can be interpreted that when you read with full awareness, find out, research, and explore its contents, you will be shown the right path and filled with peace. Like in life, studying history will enrich knowledge and can be used as a form of introspection and anticipating bad things so that they don't happen again.

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

In this chapter, after analyzing the historical politic in the novel Milkman by Anna Burns, the researcher presents several conclusions and suggestions as follows.

A. Conclusions

From the results of the studies, it was found that historical events that occurred in the past had an impact in the future, some were good and some were bad. This historical event then became an ethnic conflict and then became a protracted political conflict so that unwanted violence occurred. Completely pointless violence is evident in some of these incidents, namely sectarian conflicts, bombings, imposition of curfews and injustices that occurred. If a country is to escape the debilitating tensions of ongoing communal rivalry, space must be given to the development of a politics and society that is no longer polarized between Protestants and Catholics.

B. Suggestion

Based on the conclusion above, the researcher has some suggestions about this research:

1. The researcher suggests that the next researcher can examine the novel Milkman by Anna Burns with other research topics because there are still few who have researched this object, besides that this novel is very interesting.

2. The researcher suggests for the students especially the students of English and literature department to analyze this novel by using another theory.
3. The researcher hopes that the readers could give advice and correction to this research.

1979: Car bomb kills Airey Neave

Shadow Northern Ireland Secretary Airey Neave has been killed by a car bomb as he left the House of Commons car park.

The bomb, said to be highly sophisticated, exploded as Mr Neave began driving up the exit ramp shortly before 1500GMT.

Emergency services were on the scene in minutes.

The 63-year-old Conservative MP, known for his tough line on anti-IRA security, was taken to Westminster Hospital where he died from his wounds.
