ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Alhamdulillah Rabbil Alamin, the researcher praise to Allah SWT for his blessing, mercy, opportunity, health and everything that He gives, thus the researcher finally can complete this thesis with a thankful heart. Then, the researcher also addresses peace and salutation for our beloved prophet Muhammad SAW, who always be a guide in this life. Furthermore, through this section, the researcher wants to express and share her big thanks sincerely to the people who supported, helped, prayed and gave their motivation to the researcher. Therefore, the researcher would like to express her deepest gratitude following:

1. The researcher's special gratitude for her beloved parents, Abdul Kadir and Bahariah who have patiently given their pray, support and eternally affection to the one and only during her study. Billion thanks even more for all things that they have given for the researcher's education even for the researcher's life will not be equal with every worth things in this life. The researcher would like to say that she love them so much and thanks for everything although the researcher cannot say it directly to them. But, the researcher is grateful for having them as her family with a full of affection.

2. The researcher's thanks due to the Rector of UIN Alauddin Makassar, Prof. Hamdan Juhannis M.A, Ph.D., The Dean of Adab and Humanities Faculty, Dr. Hasyim Haddade, S.Ag., M.Ag., The Head of English and Literature Department, Dr. Jumharis Djamereng, M.Hum., the secretary Syahrani Junaid, S.S., M.Pd. and the staff of Adab and Humanities Faculty as whole for their administrative supports, and facilities during the period of times that the researcher studied in the University.
3. The deepest thanks and gratitude to the honourable supervisors, Syahrani Junaid, S.S. M.Pd. and Ahmad.,S.S.,M.Litt. for their time, guidance, suggestion, revision and motivation during to complete this thesis.
4. The researcher also wants to address her deepest thanks to the two examiners Sandra Dewi Dahlan, S.pd., MA. And Nirwana, S.Pd.,M.pd. who have given their comments, suggestion and advices to the researcher in completing this thesis for being an additional knowledge to the readers.
5. The researcher also keeps in mind to address and express her deepest thanks for all of the lectures who have given their knowledge and enlightenment during the researcher's period of time in studying at Adab and Humanities Faculty.
6. The Researcher also thanks to her big Family who has a very important role to help and support from the beginning of entering college to the completion stage Arifuddin, Ritawati, Hasnah ,Okeng ,Unding, Marhumi, Umma, Wahyudi, Marhumi, Arsyad, Rosmini, Rosmiati, Mariam, and Diana.

7. The Research also Thanks to her sister, bother, and cousin who has always ready to bother and support Faiz, Inna, Alif, Rani Ari and Akbar.
8. The researcher also thanks to her friends in batch 2016 Ulysess from AG 1-6 especially from the researcher's classmates AG 3-4 . the researcher also express deepest thanks to Khaerunisa, Siti Zakiah, Faldiah Ulfa Baharu, Nabilah Dahlan, Murdanil, Wahyu Ramadhan, Nur Adzilah Zahra, Siska Arini, Harfiah, Rabiatal Adawiah, Dzul Hulaifah , Riska Aini Mulananda, Andi Nurmala Azis, Winda Lestari, Muhammad Ashabul Yamin and Muhammad Idhil for having them as best and good friends who have been shared supports,experiences, motivation, helps and knowledge together in the same class.

In the deepest heart, the researcher realizes that this thesis is imperfect and still need suggestion and criticisms. Despite of its imperfection, she hopes that this thesis will be useful for the students, the lectures and the readers in general who need it. May Allah SWT bless us in every single thing we do.

ABSTRACT

Identity is a self-reflection that comes from family, gender, culture, ethnicity and socialization process. Identity basically refers to the reflection of ourselves and other people’s perceptions of us. This study was describing the identity of character in the novel. This study was using the Theory of Structuralism by Aristotle and Identity from Amartya Sen. The researcher was using a qualitative descriptive method, the researcher used the novel Little Women as data. From the result of this study there are four main characters who experience violence identities, namely Jo, Meg, Amy and Beth. Where the main character is the March family who comes from a poor family who experiences feelings of discrimination, insecurity and feels neglected identity as a poor person.

Keywords: Identity , Structuralism, Characterization. Little Women.

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

A. Background

One of the main elements in the novel is character. The Character serves as a driving force for the plot. Stories can begin and then end due to the presence of characters. Characters, particularly the main character, have the ability to influence the plot, create conflict, and even solve problems. Meanwhile, extra characters, even if their roles are minor, must be included for the plot to progress according to the author's wishes (Nurgiyantoro, 2018).

In literary works, each character plays a very important role in shaping the development of the story, conflicts in the story can be resolved or not end badly or well, all thanks to the role of the characters. or this reason, character is the most important element that must exist in a literary work.

In addition the character functioning as the driving force for the story, the Character must also be attractive and have a clear identity. According to As Laksana, there are several important things that must exist in a character including: actions, motives, and past. (Laksana, 2020)

Action is an act that someone does achieve a certain goal. These actions are usually based on certain motives or reasons for someone to do so. And these motives are usually the accumulation of past problems of the character past, namely things (experience, education, reading, spectacle) that shape character traits and behavior in the future.

Furthermore, Laksana explained the importance of character stereotype, namely, according to KBBI. The conception of the characteristics of a group is based on subjective prejudice. For example stereotypes about work, gender, age, roles in the family, religion, education, political, views, and ideology adhered to.

All of the above are prerequisite for creating attractive character that is interesting and has a clear identity. Therefore in the novel, identity is one of the most important thing in a character.

In line with the Muslim holy book, the Qur'an also explains the issue of human identity. According to Ilya Mustawa, humans as God's creatures have two dimensions. The first dimension is strengths, majesty and virtues of humans, the second dimension is the weakness and shortcomings of humans.

According to the Al-Qur'an humans are divided into two: First as religious beings as mentioned in surah Ar-Ruum verse 30;

فَأَقِمْ وَجْهَكَ لِلدِّينِ حَنِيفًا فِطْرَتَ اللَّهِ الَّتِي فَطَرَ النَّاسَ عَلَيْهَا لَا تَبْدِيلَ لِخَلْقِ اللَّهِ ذَٰلِكَ الدِّينُ الْقَيِّمُ وَلَكِنَّ أَكْثَرَ النَّاسِ لَا يَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٣٠﴾

It means:

Then face it your straight to the religion of Allah; (stay on) the fitrah of Allah who has created humans according to that fitrah. There is no change in the nature of God, (that is) the straight religion; but most people don't know.

The paragraph above is surah Ar-Rum verse 30 with Latin Arabic text and its meaning translation. The following is the interesting content of this verse. Explained by Al-Mukhtashar/ Markaz Tafsir Riyadh, di bawah pengawasan Syaikh Dr. Shalih bin Abdullah bin Humaid, Imam Masjidil Haram as follows:

30. So straighten up – O Messenger – your face and those of those who are with you – by abandoning all other religions – namely the religion of Islam in which Allah created humans according to nature, there is no change in Allah’s creation. That is a straight religion that is not crooked, but most people do not know that the true religion is this religion.

Second: human as social beings. In surah Al Imran verse 110;

كُنْتُمْ خَيْرَ أُمَّةٍ أُخْرِجَتْ لِلنَّاسِ تَأْمُرُونَ بِالْمَعْرُوفِ وَتَنْهَوْنَ عَنِ الْمُنْكَرِ وَتُؤْمِنُونَ بِاللَّهِ
وَلَوْ ءَامَنَ أَهْلُ الْكِتَابِ لَكَانَ خَيْرًا لَهُمْ مِّنْهُمْ الْمُؤْمِنُونَ وَأَكْثَرُهُمُ الْفَاسِقُونَ ﴿١١٠﴾

It means:

“You are the best people who were born for humans, commanded the good, and prevented from being wrong, and believed in Allah. If the people of the Book believed, surely it would be better for them, among them there are those who believe, and most they are wicked people. “

The paragraph above is surah Ali-Imran verse 110 with Latin Arabic text and its meaning. In this verse there is an interesting lesson explained by the scholar of interpretation Tafsir by Ash-Shaghir/ Fayiz bin Sayyaf As-Sariih, dimuraja’ah by Syaikh Prof. Dr. Abdullah bin Aziz al-‘Awaji, professor tafsir University Islamic interpreter of the Islamic University of Medina regarding the contents of Ali Imran’s letter verse 110 listed.:

110. You are the best people born to humans, you teach what is right, prevent what is wrong, and believe in Allah. If the people of the Book had believed, it would have been better for them. Among them there are those who believe and most of them are wicked people

The researcher is interested in examining the identity of the characters in this novel because identity is the main problem or the main conflict is the main problem in the novel. Identity becomes the main factor in shaping the character and behavior of the main characters in the novel.

The identity referred to in this novel is the characteristics of that distinguish one character from another. It is this identity that makes the characters unique and as if they live like humans in general.

This issue of identity is the main conflict in May Alcott's novel Little Women. The main character in this novel, Jo March, Meg March, and Amy March. —a woman who was born into a simple family and has to deal with the society's perception of her identity as a poor family.

It is this complicated problem that researchers process as a problem formulation. The researcher wanted to know the impact of identity on the attitude and behavior of the main characters in the novel, and how they responded to the conflict. The researcher uses Structuralism theory, especially about the plot in the novel using concepts from Aristotle and Identity theory from Amartya Sen to analyze the main problems in the novel.

B. Research Question

Regarding the background above, the researcher formulated the problem research as follow.

1. What are public perceptions the identity of the main characters in the novel Little Women?

C. Objective of the Research

1. The objective of this research is to find out public perceptions the identity of the main characters in the novel Little Women.

D. Significance of the Research

By doing this research, it is hoped that the research can provide benefits to the readers as follows.

1. Theoretically, this research is expected to help and contribute to library research, to provide information about society perception of one's identity and how an individual responds to that perception in the novel, as well as information about the use of structuralism and identity theory.
2. Practically, this research can provide references and knowledge for readers and students, especially English literature students who will conduct research on identity conflict with a structuralism and identity theory approach.

E. Scope of the Research

1. The scope of is research be focus on analyzing the public perceptions identity conflict in the novel Little Woman by May Alcott using structuralism by Aristoteles and identity theory by Amartya Sen

CHAPTER II

REVIEW OF RELATED LITERATURE

In this discussion, the researcher cites and explains several studies related to this research. Briefly discuss other studies, to provide the knowledge that underlies this research.

A. Previous Study

Little Women is a novel written by an American female author. Louisa May Alcott. After being published in 1869, this novel immediately achieved commercial success as well as positive reviews from critics. The novel's popularity then increased after director Greta Gerwig made a film with the same title. Unmitigated, several actors and actresses, such as Saoirse Ronan, Emma Watson, and Timothee Chalamet also starred in this film. Many research journals have reviewed this novel. Some of them:

The first study was written by Jannah (2018) with her research entitled "The Struggle For Family Existence An Analysis of Little women A Novel by Louisa May Alcott". Which aims to analyze the personality of the main characters in Little Woman by using a qualitative descriptive method and using the psychological theory by Robert McCrae and the result from this research is there are 6 scenes which describe about existence of a family that can be found in this film, namely sharing with others, forgiving each other, giving advice to children, being willing to sacrifice for the family, maintaining health in the family, togetherness and harmony in the family..

The second research from Mardani (2020) with his research entitled, “Character Development of Margaret March in Louisa May Alcott’s Little Women.” The purpose of this research is to explain the development of Margaret March’s character in the novel Little Women and to study more deeply the factors that influence Margaret March’s character development. The theory used to analyze this novel is the intrinsic approach by Rene Wellek and Austin. The result of this research show that Margaret March experiences development in her character throughout her life; she grows up from a young teenager in her adolescence to finally become a woman who accepts her living condition and embrace motherhood. This paper also discovers the character development of Margaret March is affected by some factors namely her family, her friends, the society during her time, and her relationship with John Brooke.

Third research is from Hidayat (2021), with his research entitled, “An Analysis Of The Main Character In The Little Women Novel By Louisa May Alcott, A Feminist Approach.” This study aims to determine the feminist in the novel Little Women and analyze the attitude and dialogue between the characters in the novel with feminist theory. This study uses a qualitative descriptive method. The result of this research is there are 3 types of Feminism found in the novel, that is Liberal Feminism, Marxist Feminism and Radical Feminism.

The last, research from Erlis (2008), “ The Influence Of Josephine’s Emotion Toward Her Relationship with Family Members In Louisa May Alcott’s Little Women. This research aims to know Josephine’s emotion in the novel and to find out the effect Josephine's emotion with her family member in the novel. This research employed the library study and descriptive qualitative method. The approach of this research use psychological approach. There are two finding in this research. The first finding reveals Josephine's emotion which is divided into two aspects. They are positive emotion includes love and enjoyment, while, the second aspects is negative emotion includes anger, sadness, and fear. Furthermore, the second finding reveals how Josephine's emotion influences the relationship positively and negatively with her family members. It shows that having a good relationship is influenced by love and enjoyment. The way of Josephine in showing her positive emotions sometimes makes people around her feel uncomfortable with her attitude. On the other hand, the negative effect is caused by anger that makes someone feel regret. Her negative emotions affect negative impact to people around her. It influences Jo and her family have different argument.

There are similiarity and the different from this research, among them using objective the research similar, that is novel's Little Women, researching the main character or character's who have the impact in development including using the same research object, namely the novel little women, examines the main characters or fiures who have an influence on the development of the story, and two of them, research from Erlina (2008) and Jannah (2018) use psychological theory in analyzing the novel.

Meanwhile, the difference between the four studies above and this latest research, among others, is that the researcher focuses on analyzing the public perception of identity of the characters in the novel . beside that, the researcher uses the theory of Structuralism and identity in analyzing the novel Little Women.

B. Literature Background

1. Structuralism

The word structure derives from the Latin Structura, from the root words Struo and tura, which mean form or building, as defined in the novel. Structuralism is essentially a way of thinking about the world that is related to structural responses and descriptions. In this perspective, literary works are assumed to be phenomena with interconnected structures. When connected to other structures, the structure's nature will become meaningful. According to Endrawarsa (2004:49), because the structure has complex parts, the meaning must be directed to the relationship between the elements as a whole.(Endrawarsa (2004:49))

Structuralism's approach is an intrinsic approach, namely discussing works about the elements that build literary works from within. In other words, it focuses on the intrinsic elements of literary works as the center of judgment in an effort to understand the meaning of literature. the structuralism approach will be put aside, it will be revealed through a literary work, while theory is the main thing to analyze.

Structuralism is a literary approach that investigates the relationship between the elements that comprise literature. According Aristotle, narrative structure consists of storylines (plots), characters, dialogues, ideas or themes, as well as beauty or style of language. According to him, plot is the main component that forms the structure of a literary work. The plot must have a clear beginning. Besides that he also emphasized the importance of character. Characters who have consistent motivational habits and goals (Aristotle, (384 SM)).

This research should focused on the plot of the novel Little Women. this research was focusing to a plot in the novel Little Women. The story plot will take the researcher to meet the beginning, middle and end of the identity conflict experienced by Jo March, Meg and Amy.

1.1. Plot

Plot is a story's sequence of events. Typically, the term plot refers to the events of a story. The term plot is typically used to refer to events that have an impact on other events and cannot be ignored because they will affect the entire work. According to Stanton's (2012: 28) definition of plot, plot is the backbone of the story. A story can never be fully understood unless the events that connect the plot, causality, and their effects are understood. There should be a beginning, middle, and end to the plot. The beginning of the story introduces events that cause the reader to learn important information about things that occur later in the story. The middle section depicts the conflict that.

Conflict and climax are two crucial elements in the progression of a storyline. The conflict that appears in the story leads to the climax, which is when the conflict reaches its apex and cannot be avoided. According to Stanton's (2012:32) explanation, the climax truly determines the development of the plot:

' Conflict' and 'climax' are the two basic plot elements. The main conflict is always inextricably linked to the story's theme. Climax is the point at which the conflict becomes so intense that the conclusion is unavoidable. The main climax is frequently represented by a single less spectacular event.

Meanwhile, according to Aminuddin (2002: 83), the plot is a series of stories formed by the stages of events in order to establish a story that is presented by the actors in a story. According to the definition above, the writer believes that the plot is an important element in the construction of a story because it can be compared to a guide in the development of the entire series of stories.

1.1.1. Plot concept by Aristoteles

Aristotle argued that plot is the most important element as well as determining the success of a literary work.

In the plot, the series of events must be logically related and cause consequences or the effect in the plot. He said that every action in the plot must be convincingly linked and give the audience or reader a sense of tension and satisfaction. Aristotle said that a good plot must have “unity of action”, meaning that each scene or event must contribute to the development of the overall storyline.

Overall, Aristotle considered plot as a solid foundation for creating good literary works. He believed that a good plot, with an organized structure and interrelated events, could produce a satisfying aesthetics experience for the viewer or reader. His thoughts on the importance of plot in literature have been a major influence on the study of literature and drama throughout history. (Aristotle 384 SM).

characterization s painting a clear picture of a character of rejection can also be called characterization, the characters are displayed with certain characters and behaviors in the story, such as in novels, short stories, and dramas (Nurgiyantoro, 2013)

a. How to describe a character

According to Albertine Minderope there are two ways that are usually used to describe the characters in the story, namely directly and indirectly.

1. Direct Method

Direct method is the exposure of the character's which is carried out directly by the narrator. In this method, the narrator usually mentions the names of the characters and explains the characteristics of the characters, such as beautiful, ugly, good, evil, dark-skinned, lazy, selfish, and so on.

The author also describes how to dress and accessories used by the character. Characterization through the narrator's statement gives the author flexibility in the determining the story he is writing

The author does not only draw the reader's attention to the character of the character, but also shapes the reader's perception or view of the character.

The weakness of this method is that it shrinks the imagination of the readers and their interpretation of the character and behavior of the characters. While the weakness is, the reader can immediately understand the character of the character without need to drain the brain to imagine and contemplate how the character's true nature is.(Minderop,2005)

2. Indirect method

In the indirect method, the characters in the literary work seem to present themselves directly without any derivatives or statements from the narrator.

The character's inferred from the thoughts, words, dialogue and behavior of the characters. Character traits can also be inferred through the speech of a character, about other characters in the literary work.

Six characteristics of how to describe the character (Minderope, 2005):

1. Characterization through dialogue
2. Location and conversation situation
3. Identity of the character addressed by the speaker
4. The mental qualities of the characters known through the strains and flow of speech when the characters converse
5. Tone of voice dialect pressure and vocabulary
6. Through the actions of the characters

The depiction of the character's and its uniqueness cannot be separated from the background and environment that shape the characters'. It is the background of the character can be in the form of religious background, gender, ideology, location the geographical location of the character, the tradition that shapes the character's view, education (both from the family, school and other educational institutions). It is this identity that shapes the character and behavior of the characters in literary work.

2. Identity

According to Stella Ting Toomey, identity is a self-reflection that comes from family, gender, culture, ethnicity and socialization process. Identity basically refers to the reflection of ourselves and other people's perceptions of us. (Toomey, 2012).

Referring to the definition above, self-reflection allows a person to think and behave according to the identity he believes in. Unfortunately, this way of thinking and behaving is more influenced (controlled) by society.

Furthermore, people's perceptions of identity can have a negative impact on individuals. This is what worries the author of a book on violence and identity, by Amartya Sen.

2.1. Identity concept by Amartya Sen

In his famous work, "identity and violence: the Illusion of Destiny", Amartya Sen discuss the complexity of human identity and its relation to violence. He opposed the view that human identity must be reduced to a single dimension, such as religion, ethnicity, or nationality. According to his, identifying someone based on only one aspect of identity can ignore the diversity and complexity of the individual.

Amartya Sen (2006) proposed that each individual has various each other overlap identities. For example, a person can be a citizen of a country that has a particular religion, special culture, profession, and personal preferences, he argues that when human identity is simplified to a single dimensional stay, it can lead to conflict and violence.

Sen also highlighted the important role of dialogue and mutual understanding in preventing violence arising from conflicting identities. He stressed the importance of communication and understanding among different groups to overcome differences and build peace.

According to Amartya Sen (2006), public perception of identity can be a double-edged sword. First, someone with an identity can feel pride and happiness, as well as growing strength, confidence, and the feeling of being recognized as part of a community group.

Both effects are actually bad for the individual. A strong sense the individual. A strong of attachment to a group may contain perceptions of distance and separation from other groups. Group solidarity can trigger the growth of disputes between groups, and of course this can be bad for the individual. (Sen, 2006).

The following are some topics that discuss the impact of public perceptions of identity on the attitudes and behavior of an individual:

1. Restrictions and Stereotypes:

The limited perceptions or stereotyped of individual identity can limit society's perceptions and expectations of them. This can lead to restrictions in their life opportunities and choices. For example, if society has a perception that a person with a certain identity is not suitable for a leadership position. Individuals with this identity may face obstacles in achieving their career goals.

2. Discrimination and Marginalization:

Negative perception or refraction to individual identity can lead to discrimination and marginalization. Individuals may face unfair treatment or neglect in various aspects of their lives, such as education, employment, or public services. The impact can be detrimental to individuals emotionally, socially, and economically.

3. Influence on Self-Confidence:

Negative perception from society to individual identity can affect Self-Confidence. If a person is consistently treated or judged to be undervalued based on their identity, they may experience self-doubt, feel worthless, or have difficulty fulfilling their full potential.

4. Multiple Identity or Identity Conflict

Societal perceptions that reinforce a single identity or ignore the complexities of individual identities can also lead to identity conflict or identity dilemmas. Individuals may feel trapped between the expectations or norms associated with their identity and their personal aspirations. This can cause confusion, tension, or difficulty navigating their lives.

5. Social and Enviromental Influences

Societal perceptions to individual identity can also influence social interactions and Environment around the individual. If individual identity often viewed negatively or seen as illegitimate, individuals may face social isolation or difficulty forming healthy and supportive relationships.

2.2. Types of Identity

1. Multiple Identity

Amartya Sen believes that identity is absolutely plural. Someone can claim to be a religious person, atheist, gay lesbian, communist, and so on, but that doesn't necessarily mean that they can be labeled as one identity. No one has a single identity because humans are inherently complex creatures. One person can have many identities (Sen, 2006). According to him, a person, for example, is at the same time a British citizen, of Malaysian descent, with racial characteristics of Chinese, a stockbroker, a non-vegetarian, an asthmatic, a linguist, a poet, and an opponent of abortion. Another example, in the depiction of fictional characters, for example, multiple identities are given great attention the novel Bumi Manusia, the character Minke is not only described as a native (as one single identity), but also as a young man, an Indonesian citizen, heterosexual, writer, bookworm, has intelligence dreams, open-mindedness, determination, and spirit against colonialism (Toer, 1980). Therefore, it is very surprising if someone is only seen through one identity.

2. Single Identity

In one of his poems, the 17th century English poet John Donne, said “no one is wholly independent as an island apart.” Unfortunately, humans often view themselves as completely independent, the fact that a person's identity is never singular is often ignored (Sen, 2006).

The bad effect is this view is often used as a weapon by sectarian activists to persecute other groups for someone who is considered to have a deviant ideology or identity, for example religious conflict, racial hatred, conflict between regions, hatred towards people who are considered have a deviant sexual orientation.

3. Synopsis Of Little Women

Little Woman is an American classic novel, one of the works of Louisa May Alcott which was published in two volumes in 1868 and 1869. It is based on the story of Alcott's life experiences with his three sisters. It describes the life story of four siblings living with their mother, while their father was on the battlefield for quite a long time. They have different characters, namely Margaret who is fondly called Meg who is the eldest daughter aged 16 who is elegant and feminine, the second daughter, Jo, who is 15 years old with a thin body that is very tall and has brown skin, has a passionate personality, temperamental and tomboyish. The third is Elizabeth or Beth, who is shy, quiet and calm. Finally, Amy is the youngest daughter.

They grew up in the Concord area, United States in the 19th century, about the journey of life with four siblings from childhood to adulthood, who grew up and grew up in a poor family, living simply. Various forms of problems they went through, sadness, strife, but they still compact and never stop loving and become a harmonious and happy family. Apart from having different characters, they also have different dreams, but they still support each other and don't belittle one another.

This novel is set in the 1850s, where at that time education for women was very difficult to fight for, not all women had the opportunity to study in public schools. Among these four siblings, only Amy is lucky who has the opportunity to get an education in a public school where all the students are rich girls, but she feels uncomfortable having to be side by side with arrogant girls who are always bullied by their friends. At that time their financial situation was still very difficult, so that in the end their two siblings, who were not yet seventeen years old, were forced to work to.

It is natural for women to dream of a comfortable life, having a luxurious house, beautiful dresses, and other pleasures that make women feel comfortable and happy by marrying a rich man. but Jo is different from other women, she will feel satisfied and happy when she gets all her dreams with her own efforts and hard work.

4. Authors

Louisa May Alcott is a well-known author of the American Classical Novel. Author Woman American in the late nineteenth century lava on November 29, 1832 in Germantown, Pennsylvania of the couple Bronson Alcott and Abigail Abba May on November 29, 1832 her father was an educator who believed that children are like Tabular Razes or blank sheets of paper waiting to be filled. Unfortunately, her beliefs cause misery for Bronson, who sees her as a perfect figure or, on occasion, an angel. Anyone who disagrees with her will be considered a criminal, and Louisa is the only one who dares to disagree with her father. Louis has many emotional conflicts with her when she is under such duress. At the age of seven, one of the ways he expressed himself was through writing.

Louisa began by keeping diaries, and as she grew older, she began writing short stories, fairy tales, and novels. She wishes to meet the family's financial needs. Louisa felt responsible for her family's finances as the second daughter. Little Woman, published in 1868 and set in Concord, Massachusetts, was loosely based on Alcott's childhood experiences with his three sisters. The novel was well received and has since become a popular children's novel.

CHAPTER III

RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

The research method is a way to understand something through investigation or through efforts to find evidence that arises in connection with the problem, which is carried out carefully so that a solution is obtained.

A. Research Method

In this study, researchers used descriptive qualitative methods. This method is a method that is carried out by collecting, describing, and analyzing data. The researcher used qualitative descriptive in this study to see the structuralism and Identity concept in the American novel "Little Women by Louisa May Alcott".

B. Source of Data

The research data will be taken from an American novel entitled Little Woman. This book is published by Gramedia Pustaka Utama, consisting of 376 pages which a size of 20 cm. The writer will analyze how Identity in the main Character is described in the Little Women.

C. Instrument of the Research

The research instrument is a tool used to collect data (Parahoo, 1997 p. 52). in this study, researchers played an important role in data collection. Researchers are very influential and have responsibility in the research process and results. Researchers use note-taking techniques as a method of data collection. This note-taking technique is a way of collecting data by analyzing, marking and recording data related to research problems. The instruments used in data collection were 1) Laptops and cellphones as media for processing data, 2) notebooks, highlighters, and pens to mark data.

D. Procedure of Data Collection

- 1) Reading the American novel to understand the main problem in the novel.
- 2) Analyzing the novel as a whole by using a Structuralism approach
- 3) Identifying the Identity the main Character depicted in novel Little Woman by Louisa May Alcott
- 4) Classifying the data that has been found based on Amartya Sen Theory.

E. Technique of Data Analysis

In this study, the researchers used structuralism approach by Aristoteles and Identity Theory by Amartya Sen. The techniques used in analyzing the data in this study are reading, marking, analyzing and collecting data, and classifying data.

CHAPTER IV

FINDING AND DISCUSSION

This chapter consists of two parts, the first part is findings that will answer the research questions and the second part is discussion that will present the argument related to The Influence of Identity to Character's Attitudes and Behavior in American Novel "Little Women" By Louisa May Alcott.

A. Findings

This part consist of the data analysis from the The Influence of Identity to Characters's Attitudes and Behavior in American Novel "Little Women" By Louisa May Alcott. The purpose of the analysis is to find out identity affect the way the main characters act and behave in the novel Little Women. This research used Identity theory by Amartya Sen.

The identity of the main characters of the novel Little Women come from poor families. Their identity as poor family shapes other people's perceptions of them.

1. Josephine March (Jo)

1. Multiple Identity or Identity Conflict

a. Boyish

"Really, girls, you are both to be blamed," said Meg, beginning to lecture in her elder-sisterly fashion. "You are old enough to leave off boyish tricks, and to behave better, Josephine. It didn't matter so much when you were a little girl, but now you are so tall, and turn up your hair, you should remember that you are a young lady." (Ch. 3 : p 4)

"I'm not! And if turning up my hair makes me one, I'll wear it in two tails till I'm twenty," cried Jo, pulling off her net, and shaking down a chestnut mane. "I hate to think I've got to grow up, and be Miss March, and wear long gowns, and look as prim as a China Aster! It's bad enough to be a girl, anyway, when I like boy's games and work and manners! I can't get over my disappointment in not being a boy. And it's worse than ever now, for I'm dying to go and fight with Papa. And I can only stay home and knit, like a poky old woman!". (Ch. 4 :p 4-)

And Jo shook the blue army sock till the needles rattled like castanets, and her ball bounded across the room. (Ch. 1 : p 5)

The narrative above shows Meg's advice to her sister, Josephine. Meg said would be best for Jo' to leave her tomboyish ways behind. This shows that the behavior of compartmentalizing one's identity is not directed at strangers or strangers. Such treatment can actually occur within the family environment, as seen in the paragraph above. This made Jo uncomfortable and protested her brother's advice. Jo rejects most of the stereotypes and values attached to a woman.

2. Restrictions and Streotypes

a. Family Poor

"There is something more, I think." And Mrs. March smoothed the soft cheek, which suddenly grew rosy as Meg answered slowly..

"Yes. It's very silly, but I want to tell it, because I hate to have people say and think such things about us and Laurie."

Then she told the various bits of gossip she had heard at the Moffats', and as she spoke, Jo saw her mother fold her lips tightly, as if ill pleased that such ideas should be put into Meg's innocent mind.

"Well, if that isn't the greatest rubbish I ever heard," cried Jo indignantly. "Why didn't you pop out and tell them so on the spot?"
"I couldn't, it was so embarrassing for me. I couldn't help hearing at first, and then I was so angry and ashamed, I didn't remember that I ought to go away."

"Just wait till I see Annie Moffat, and I'll show you how to settle such ridiculous stuff. The idea of having 'plans' and being kind to Laurie because he's rich and may marry us by-and-by! Won't he shout when I tell him what those silly things say about us poor children?" And Jo laughed, as if on second thoughts the thing struck her as a good joke. (Ch. 6 :p 107)

The Narrative above is Jo's angry reaction to the Moffat family's humiliation (page of 97). Jo' did not accept the view that their family had a relationship with Laurie solely because she came from a wealthy family. The label given to the poor as in the case above shows that the poor are only seen as one identity, namely through their poverty that is the basis of Jo's annoyance.

3. Female

"Jo, dear, what is it? Are you crying about father?"

"No, not now."

"What then?"

"My... My hair!" burst out poor Jo, trying vainly to smother her emotion in the pillow. (Ch. 4: p 188).

Jo's cry above is a form of expression of sadness after she cut her hair short. That expression of sadness is a form of Jo's closeness to his identity with long hair. This explains that the identity of long hair in women is very attached to Jo, expressions sadness is what he shows when he tells his sister, Meg.

4. Novel Writer

"Why not?"

"I burned it up."

"What! My little book I was so fond of, and worked over, and meant to finish before Father got home? Have you really burned it?" said Jo, turning very pale, while her eyes kindled and her hands clutched Amy nervously.

"Yes, I did! I told you I'd make you pay for being so cross yesterday, and I have, so..."

"Amy got no farther, for Jo's hot temper mastered her, and she shook Amy till her teeth chattered in her head, crying in a passion of grief and anger..."

"You wicked, wicked girl! I never can write it again, and I'll never forgive you as long as I live."

Meg flew to rescue Amy, and Beth to pacify Jo, but Jo was quite beside herself, and with a parting box on her sister's ear, she rushed out of the room up to the old sofa in the garret, and finished her fight alone.

The narrative above shows the conversation between Jo and Amy because Amy had burned the pages of Jo's writings because Jo did not allow Amy to go to an event with Jo, Meg and Laurence, thus making Amy feel annoyed and making Amy decide to make Jo feel sorry for her did not allow Amy to come with him. This is clearly seen from Amy's childish nature about what she wants she doesn't get, which makes her act reckless. Likewise with Jo, it is clear that Jo is very angry, made angry by Amy and cannot control her anger because the most valuable treasure for her was burned by Amy.

5. Novel Writer

Jo was very busy in the garret, for the October days began to grow chilly, and the afternoons were short. For two or three hours the sun lay warmly in the high window, showing Jo seated on the old sofa, writing busily, with her papers spread out upon a trunk before her, while Scrabble, the pet rat, promenaded the beams overhead, accompanied by his oldest son, a fine young fellow, who was evidently very proud of his whiskers. Quite absorbed in her work, Jo scribbled away till the last page was filled, when she signed her name with a flourish and threw down her pen, exclaiming.(Ch. 69:p 1) the narrative above shows that Jo is a hardworking woman who never gives up on her Identity as a writer where she works very hard to complete her writing with enthusiasm and neve gives up so that she is able to produce better writing and can prove to the public that she can prove to the public that she can become a writer. Great and famous writer.

2. Margaret March (Meg)

1. Influence On Self-Confidence

a. Female

She tried not to be envious or discontented, but it was very natural that the young girl should long for pretty things, gay friends, accomplishments, and a happy life. At the Kings' she daily saw all she wanted, for the children's older sisters were just out, and Meg caught frequent glimpses of dainty ball dresses and bouquets, heard lively gossip about theaters, concerts, sleighing parties, and merrymakings of all kinds, and saw money lavished on trifles which would have been so precious to her. Poor Meg seldom complained, but a sense of injustice made her feel bitter toward everyone sometimes, for she had not yet learned to know how rich she was in the blessings which alone can make life happy. (Ch. 4:p 41)

The narrative above shows Meg's efforts not to feel jealous and to remain grateful for what she has. Even so, she realizes that she is only someone who has sensitive feelings and desires, such as having a beautiful dance dress. Poverty seemed so miserable to Meg. He finds it hard to let go of his feelings for other people's identities, especially for rich people.

"It isn't low-necked, and it doesn't sweep enough, but it will have to do. My blue housedress looks so well, turned and freshly trimmed, that I feel as if I'd got a new one. My silk sacque isn't a bit the fashion, and my bonnet doesn't look like Sallie's. I didn't like to say anything, but I was sadly disappointed in my umbrella. I told Mother black with a white handle, but she forgot and bought a green one with a yellowish handle. It's strong and neat, so I ought not to complain, but I know I shall feel ashamed of it beside Annie's silk one with a gold top," sighed Meg, surveying the little umbrella with great disfavor.

"Change it," advised Jo.(Ch. 9:p 6-7)

"I won't be so silly, or hurt Marmee's feelings, when she took so much pains to get my things. It's a nonsensical notion of mine, and I'm not going to give up.(ch 9:p6)

The narration above shows Meg's reaction to the clothes Marmee gave her, who is very concerned about her appearance and feels insecure to be with Annie's silk parasol, then she tries to put aside her prestige for the sake of appearance for what Marmee has given it to her and don't want to disappoint Marmee.

"Now don't forget to keep the bad breadth out of sight, Jo. Is my sash right? And does my hair look very bad?" said Meg, as she turned from the glass in Mrs. Gardiner's dressing room after a prolonged prink.(Ch. 8 : p 29)

The narrative above shows how Meg, her identity as a feminism and elegant, really thinks about her appearance in public, tries to look good and advises her sister Jo to hide her ugly clothes.

b. Margaret 16 years old

"If I only had a silk!" Sighed Meg. "Mother says I may when I'm eighteen perhaps, but two years is an everlasting time to wait."

"I'm sure our pops look like silk, and they are nice enough for us. Yours is as good as new, but I forgot the burn and the tear in mine. Whatever shall I do? The burn shows badly, and I can't take any out."

"You must sit still all you can and keep your back out of sight. The front is all right. I shall have a new ribbon for my hair, and Marmee will lend me her little pearl pin, and my new slippers are lovely, and my gloves will do, though they aren't as nice as I'd like."

"Mine are spoiled with lemonade, and I can't get any new ones, so I shall have to go without," said Jo, who never troubled herself much about dress. (Ch. 1-4:p, 27).

The narrative above is a series of complaints about Meg's cheap dress and wished to have a luxurious silk dress. Meg was so worried about what people would think of her clothes. This really affected Meg's self-confidence, as evidenced by Meg's order to Jo to stay calm so that the back of her dress which had burnt marks was not visible. While Jo is even more relaxed and doesn't really care about appearances.

c. Family Poor

"Oh, Jo, you are not going to wear that awful hat? It's too absurd! You shall not make a guy of yourself," remonstrated Meg, as Jo tied down with a red ribbon the broad-brimmed, old-fashioned leghorn Laurie had sent for a joke.(Ch.5 :p 140)

The narrative above again shows Meg's sense of insecurity as a poor person. He protested against the hat worn by Jo, which he found ugly. The identity of poverty greatly influences Meg's character.

2. Christianity

"Nobody spoke for a minute; then Meg said in an altered tone, "You know the reason Mother proposed not having any presents this Christmas was because it is going to be a hard winter for everyone; and she thinks we ought not to spend money for pleasure, when our men are suffering so in the army. We can't do much, but we can make our little sacrifices, and ought to do it gladly. But I am afraid I don't," and Meg shook her head, as she thought regretfully of all the pretty things she wanted.(Ch 1 p:3)

Its clear from the narrative that Margaret and her brother are girls who identity as a Christians, how she tried to remind her brother not to use his money for unimportant things at this year's Chritmas even just for fun.

3. Poor Family

"You're a blighted being, and decidedly cross today because you can't sit in the lap of luxury all the time. Poor dear, just wait till I make my fortune, and you shall revel in carriages and ice cream and high-heeled slippers, and posies, and red-headed boys to dance with (Ch.7 p: 40) .

The narration above shows Jo's ramblings to Meg. He looked cynical as he told Meg that the only thing his sister wanted was a life of luxury. This paragraph shows how depressed Meg is with her poor life.

4. Social and Environmental Influences

Keeping that warning carefully in mind, Margaret got safely down stairs and sailed into the drawing rooms where the Moffats and a few early guests were assembled. She very soon discovered that there is a charm about fine clothes which attracts a certain class of people and secures their respect. Several young ladies, who had taken no notice of her before, were very affectionate all of a sudden. Several young gentlemen, who had only stared at her at the other party, now not only stared, but asked to be introduced, and said all manner of foolish but agreeable things to her, and several old ladies, who sat on the sofas, and criticized the rest of the party, inquired who she was with an air of interest. She heard Mrs. Moffat reply to one of them...(Ch. 3 : p 101)

The narrative above describes Meg's mood and thoughts regarding the luxurious dress she is wearing. He thought that by becoming a rich man he would have fine clothes which had a special allure. Clothing that could attract people of different classes, as well as gain respect they. Someone who has an identity as a rich person, for Meg is a privilege.

3. Elizabeth March (Beth)

- 1. But Beth, though yearning for the grand piano, could not pluck up courage to go to the 'Mansion of Bliss', as Meg called it. She went once with Jo, but the old gentleman, not being aware of her infirmity, stared at her so hard from under his heavy eyebrows, and said "Hey!" so loud, that he frightened her so much her 'feet chattered on the floor', she never told her mother, and she ran away, declaring she would never go there any more, not even for the dear piano.(Ch. 65:p 3)*

The narrative above shows how afraid Beth is of Mr. Laurence, because of his identity as a shy girl, he is surprised by Mr. Laurence's reaction when he sees Beth and he says that he will not come back to the house even for his favorite piano.

2. Beth was too bashful to go to school. It had been tried, but she suffered so much that it was given up, and she did her lessons at home with her father. Even when he went away, and her mother was called to devote her skill and energy to Soldiers' Aid Societies, Beth went faithfully on by herself and did the best she could. She was a housewifely little creature, and helped Hannah keep home neat and comfortable for the workers, never thinking of any reward but to be loved. Long, quiet days she spent, not lonely nor idle, for her little world was peopled with imaginary friends, and she was by nature a busy bee. There were six dolls to be taken up and dressed every morning, for Beth was a child still and loved her pets as well as ever. Not one whole or handsome one among them, all were outcasts till Beth took them in, for when her sisters outgrew these idols, they passed to her because Amy would have nothing old or ugly. Beth cherished them all the more tenderly for that very reason, and set up a hospital for infirm dolls. No pins were ever stuck into their cotton vitals, no harsh words or blows were ever given them, no neglect ever saddened the heart of the most repulsive, but all were fed and clothed, nursed and caressed with an affection which never failed. One forlorn fragment of dollanity had belonged to Jo and, having led a tempestuous life, was left a wreck in the rag bag, from which dreary poorhouse it was rescued by Beth and taken to her refuge. Having no top to its head, she tied on a neat little cap, and as both arms and legs were gone, she hid these deficiencies by folding it in a blanket and devoting her best bed to this chronic invalid. If anyone had known the care lavished on that dolly, I think it would have touched their hearts, even while they laughed. She brought it bits of bouquets, she read to it, took it out to breathe fresh air, hidden under her coat, she sang it lullabies and never went to bed without kissing its dirty face and whispering tenderly, "I hope you'll have a good night, my poor dear."
3. The narrative above shows that Marmee sent Beth to school but because of her identity as a shy person and unable to socialize outside the home, Marmee decided to let Beth study at home. Beth prefers to spend time at home studying at home and doing homework playing with her favorite doll treating her doll like her own sister with great affection it is clear that Beth is a very loving young girl.

4. Amy March (Amy)

1. Discrimination and Marginalization

a. Educated Woman

"I don't believe any of you suffer as I do," cried Amy, "for you don't have to go to school with impertinent girls, who plague you if you don't know your lessons, and laugh at your dresses, and label your father if he isn't rich, and insult you when your nose isn't nice." (Ch. 8: p 3)

The paragraph above shows Amy's annoyance over the bullying directed at her. Her school friends always laughed at Amy's not-so-fancy clothes and always made fun of her poor father. The narrative shows that Amy is only seen as a single identity, namely as a poor person. As a result, Amy received discrimination and marginalization.

2. Social and Environmental Influences

a. Educated Woman

Next day Amy was rather late at school, but could not resist the temptation of displaying, with pardonable pride, a moist brown-paper parcel, before she consigned it to the inmost recesses of her desk. During the next few minutes the rumor that Amy March had got twenty- four delicious limes (she ate one on the way) and was going to treat circulated through her 'set', and the attentions of her friends became quite overwhelming. Katy Brown invited her to her next party on the spot. Mary Kinglsey insisted on lending her watch till recess, and Jenny Snow, a satirical young lady, who had basely twitted Amy upon her limeless state, promptly buried the hatchet and offered to furnish answers to certain appalling sums. But Amy had not forgotten Miss Snow's cutting remarks about 'some persons whose noses were not too flat to smell other people's limes, and stuck-up people who were not too proud to ask for them', and she instantly crushed 'that Snow girl's' hopes by the withering telegram, "You needn't be so polite all of a sudden, for you won't get any. (Ch 9 : p 73-74).

The narrative above shows how Amy tries to get the attention off her friends bringing 24 delicious limes to school. The paragraph above shows how Amy wants to change the views of her friends about who she is, that is, not a poor girl. Amy wanted to change the discrimination treatment of her friends, and the packed of limes also boosted her confidence. This proves that the influences of public perceptions (Amy's classmates) regarding individual identity greatly influence a person's character and behavior, as seen in Amy's behavior.

3. Influence On Self-Confidence

a. Family Poor

Amy was in a fair way to be spoiled, for everyone petted her, and her small vanities and selfishnesses were growing nicely. One thing, however, rather quenched the vanities. She had to wear her cousin's clothes. Now Florence's mama hadn't a particle of taste, and Amy suffered deeply at having to wear a red instead of a blue bonnet, unbecoming gowns, and fussy aprons that did not fit. Everything was good, well made, and little worn, but Amy's artistic eyes were much afflicted, especially this winter, when her school dress was a dull purple with yellow dots and no trimming. (Ch 1 : p 45).

The narrative above shows Amy's suffering because she has to wear the clothes of her cousins. Even though all of these clothes were decent and of good quality, in Amy's view, they looked bad. Just like Meg, Amy is also suffering from her identity as a poor person.

4. Social and Environmental Influence

"I should not have chosen that way of mending a fault," replied her mother, "but I'm not sure that it won't do you more good than a bolder method. You are getting to be rather conceited, my dear, and it is quite time you set about correcting it. You have a good many little gifts and virtues, but there is no need of parading them, for conceit spoils the finest genius. There is not much danger that real talent or goodness will be overlooked long, even if it is, the consciousness of possessing and using it well should satisfy one, and the great charm of all power is modesty. (Ch. 4 : p 78)

The narrative above is how the mother advises Amy. He warns her that Amy— despite her arrogant and self-important attitude— has many talents and virtues. The paragraph shows that the mother sees Amy as someone who has a complex identity (no single identity). He kind of understands that a person should not be seen from one side only. He saw that everyone has a bad side and a good side.

Similar to the previous narration, the text above describes Amy's suffering because of her identity as a poor person, where she is forced to wear her cousins' clothes. It affects his confidence and makes him miserable.

From the data of the three main characters, Jo, Meg and Amy prove that the most visible identity of the three is their poverty identity. They come from among the poor and that is what helps people's perception of them. they tend to be considered lowly, despicable and only seen as one identity, namely their poverty. The following is the description of each main character in the novel "Little Women by Louisa May Alcott (2020).

B. Discussion

a. Characterization

In this part the research elaborates all the data in findings based on the theory of identity from Amartya Sen which explain that identity is the result of several Attributes that make up a person, such as Religion, Ethnicity, Gender, and many more. According to him, identity is a complex and dynamic concept and influence how we view ourselves and how others view us. The following is a description of each character in the novel Little Women By Louisa May Alcott (2020).

a. Margaret March (Meg)

As the eldest daughter of their family, Meg was described as a girl with a motherly spirit towards her brother and a very round girl with light skin, a pair of wide eyes and thick light brown hair, she has beautiful lips and a pair of white hand which he is proud of Meg is a very beautiful, elegant, polite and feminine girl who really thinks about her appearance. So that he is very obsessed with having very beautiful dresses and things related to luxury. Behind her obsession with luxury but she grew up to be a woman who is not confident in herself. Meg is a gentle older sister who has a motherly soul who is very caring and considerate of her sister, by always advising her younger siblings.

b. Josephine (Jo)

Josephine, also known as Jo, is a boyish character, with a very tall, thin body and tanned skin. Well-defined lip lines, a pair of gray eyes and long, thick hair. Jo is a temperamental girl who easily gets emotional about things. Jo is a hard-working young girl. He loves to write so much that he hopes that one day he will become a famous writer.

c. Elizabeth March (Beth)

Elizabeth with rosy cheeks, straight hair, and a pair of bright eyes, a calm and gentle figure and a very shy character so she spends her days just at home doing some homework. Beth always seemed happy in her own world and never made a fuss about anything. Beth is very in love with music, she is good at playing musical instruments. Beth apart from being a shy character, she is also a girl who is very affectionate not only towards her family but she also really loves the things she has

d. Amy

Amy is the youngest figure among her three sisters and has a childish nature so she has to get what she wants by any means. Amy is an arrogant and selfish little girl. on the other hand Amy is the luckiest of the four siblings because she is a smart and talented educated woman like with a great passion for painting.

b. Identity

After discuss from all of the character's from all dimension of characters, According Minderope (2005), the research then found the identity built according identity as poor family in the story Little Women in the Novel by Louisa May Alcott (2020).

1. Margaret March (Meg)

Based on her identity as a poor person, Meg is formed as a woman who is insecure about her differences from other people who really cares about her appearance, such as when she was given a black umbrella from Marmee, which looks nothing like what she hopes then he will not feel confident to be side by side with paying Annie Moffat, also like when she reminded her sister Jo to hide her burnt part of her dress from others at a party. Later she also formed as a woman who was obsessed how she was so obsessed with things related to luxury how she wanted to be rich man so that he can have a beautiful ball gown, bouquets of flowers, hear great gossip about the theater and other fun things.

2. Josephine March (Jo)

Jo is a girl who looks tomboyish and is very temperamental where it is very difficult to control her emotions when someone disturbs her. Jo's identity is formed as a result of her poverty as a poor person where she is seen by society as her poor family grew up to be a hardworking and ambitious woman where she tried to fight for her dream of becoming a famous writer and trying to prove to the public that she could be a writer and change other people's perceptions of her poverty.

3. Amy

Based on the data found, it can be seen that Amy is a little girl who is childish and selfish. The identity that forms within her against her identity is that she comes from a poor family. She is formed into an arrogant and arrogant person, feeling the most important where she gets discriminatory treatment because his friends always make fun of him so he tries to show his prowess against his friends by showing some limes with the aim of getting recognition from his friends.

From all the data above, it can be concluded that many characters in this novel see an individual from only one identity ((single identity), Amartya Sen 2006). This then has an effecton the character and behavior of the characters in this novel, especially the March family, the March girls (Meg, Jo, and Amy) for example the poor label that was put on the March family, greatly influenced Meg's Personality.

She became a girl who was so insecure she didn't believe in her identity as a poor person. It fueled Meg's wish or wish that she would one day be a rich man, to have beautiful dance dresses and bouquets of flowers and to hear exciting gossip about concert theaters sledding events and other fun things. She often takes Meg's feelings of self-doubt on her sister Jo, for example when she often gives advice to groomsmen when they go to formal events, such as dance parties. Once he advised Jo to hide the used parts her dress was on fire which Meg found very ugly and she asked Jo to sit as still as possible and not move too much at the dance party..

Meanwhile the effect that arises on Jo's character and behavior towards her identity as a poor person is a feeling of being discriminated. For example, Jo's annoyance when she heard rumors that her closeness to Laurie's background, which came from a wealthy family. Jo does not accept this arbitrary view. He was so angry that people only saw him from one point of view , namely from the poverty of his family, and Jo assumes that it is not true that the friendship between the poor and the rich is based solely on the desire to gain financial benefits. Jo was so angry and wanted to destroy the stereotype.

The same thing happened to Amy. Her friends at school see Amy only from one side (single identity). Her classmates often made fun of Amy who came from a poor family. This had an effect on Amy's self-confidence, she became so insecure about her identity as a poor person. Also, affects his friendship with his classmates. Because he came from a poor family, his classmates shunned him and kept him at a distance. This insecure feeling triggers Amy to attract the sympathy and attention of her classmates one day one time she brought twenty-four delicious limes to school with the intention of impressing her friends into thinking that Amy actually had money and could buy the things she liked. It then managed to grab the attention of his friends. Katy Brown immediately invited Amy to attend her party, Mary Kingsley insisted that Amy lend her watch until recess and Jenny Snow, the sharp-tongued young girl who had made fun of Amy for not having a bottle of lime immediately put her hostility aside and offered to correct Amy's answers to the difficult addition questions. Tend to be respectful to be polite and to be excessively respectful to someone who is rich and has a position.

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

A. CONCLUSION

From the data found by the researcher Identity every character in the Little women novel consist of Margaret with her identity as a 16 years old young woman, a Christian who comes from a poor family who lives in simplicity, even though sometimes she really wants a luxurious life that has beautiful dresses like what that his friends have so he feels very less confident in adapting to his friends because of his economic limitations. This makes public perceptions look down on him and excommunicated because of his poverty (single Identity), which affects his self-confidence and social and environmental.

The second character is Josephine whose identity a young woman with a boyish attitude with a temperamental nature and her profession as a writer who is very persistent in her dream of becoming a famous writer but public perception her only from her poverty (single identity). Jo was annoyed because rumors stated that her closeness to Laurie's family was only based on the fact that Laurie came from a rich family. The stereotype attached to poor people are very dominant in this novel, this makes Jo very angry and annoyed because these stereotypes are considered untrue and feels disappointed because her family is only seen from one side, namely her situation and finances., it can be concluded that the effects that arise on the character and behavior of the main characters in this novel are feelings of discrimination, feelings of insecurity or lack of confidence, feelings of annoyance, feelings of being ignored, and feelings of humiliation because they are only seen from one side only, namely her situation and finances.

The third character, namely Amy March, is her identity as a young woman and an educated woman. As a poor woman among her school friends, she felt discriminated against, such as when Amy's classmates made fun of Amy because Amy was from a poor family (single identity). This affects Amy's self confidence and social environmental influence.

From the data found by the researcher, it can be concluded that the effects that arise on the character and behavior of the main character in this novel are feelings of discrimination, feelings of insecurity or lack of confidence, feelings of annoyance, feelings of being ignored, and feelings of humiliation because they are only seen from one side. But the various forms of discrimination and humiliation attached to the March family did not make the March girls despair. They stick together hand in hand and strengthen each other's toxic environment without necessarily making the March family depressed and despair instead the character development of the March girls like Meg, Jo, Amy and Beth leads to a better change. This development and change was greatly influenced by the teachings and example of her mother, namely Marmee, Marmee seemed to be a guardian angel for them, the wise Marmee and don't judge other people easily and always look at other people from many sides. And can place themselves wisely in every situation and can always be relied upon by their children

B. SUGGESTION

1. This novel is rich in characters, each with their own uniqueness and background.

The researcher hopes that further research can explore or examine other characters in this novel. There are other figures such as the character Beth, Aunt March's and so on which can be used as research objects.

2. For readers, Little Women is a very complex novel in every aspect. For example the setting of events and the atmosphere of this novel. Readers can study the character and behavior of people who lived in that era. Readers can learn the ways these characters act and take decisions every time there are problems or moments that force these characters to make choice.
