Effective communication between speakers and listeners should fulfill the maxims in order to prevent misunderstandings. Practically, the rule of cooperative principle are occasionally flouted that can not only be found in everyday life but in movies as well. This research aims to analyze of types of flouting maxim in Thor Love and Thunder and the reason of using flouting maxim. It was designed descriptive qualitative research. In collecting data, the researcher watched, transcribed dialog, read, identified and classified the data. The techniques used to analyze the data are data reduction, data display, and conclusion drawing/verification. The research showed four types of flouting maxim, there were 56 types of flouting maxim found in Thor Love and Thunder movie script, comprises; 17 utterances of flouting maxim of quantity, 14 utterances of flouting maxim of manner, 13 utterances flouting maxim of quality and 12 utterances flouting maxim of relation. The flouting maxim of quantity becomes the most type of flouting maxims performed by characters in which they intend to make the interlocutor understand clearly by giving more or less information. Secondly, the reason of flouting maxim used by the characters in Thor Love and Thunder Movie based Leech (1983) theory. The reason mostly performed by characters was collaborative reason. Then, followed by competitive reason, convivial reason and the last is conflictive reason.

Keywords: Flouting Maxim, Pragmatic, Thor Love and Thunder.

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

A. Background

Communication is an essential component of language that is unable to be apart from humans. Humans are social beings who need interaction each other. People can communicate through oral and written communication. Communication have an essential role in the process of speakers and interlocutors in a conversation transferring ideas, information, plans, opinions, feelings, thoughts, and so on. Conversation, according to Levinson (1983), is a dominant type of communication in which a group of people freely take turns speaking outside of institutional settings such as religious ceremonies, courts, and classrooms, among others. Therefore, a communication can be said to be successful if the speaker and the interlocutor who are carrying out the conversation understand each other and build good communication. When building good communication, the speaker and the interlocutor who are carrying out Communication can be achieved by knowing and avoiding ignorance of the speaker's intent that is the study of Pragmatics.

Pragmatics focuses more on the speaker's meaning in speech that pragmatics tries to connect meaning with the context of speech and also pragmatics requires the meaning of utterances. Based on the conversation or speech of the speaker gives assumptions and expectations that how much more will always be communicated than what is said. In pragmatics to make good communication, speakers and interlocutors follow to a set of norms referred to as the cooperative principle.

Grice (1991), cooperative principle that each participant in the discussion interacts as needed dependent on the stage of the conversation and the common goal or aim of the conversation in which participants are engaged. Basically, cooperative principle that speakers communicate to listeners or interlocutors must convey well which means that in interaction and conveying a message, information must be correct, clear, coherent and relevant to the conversation or context. When communicating with others, there are basically four conversational maxims that must be followed: quality, quantity, relation, and manner.

The maxims of quantity provide excessive information from the offered question or statement. While, maxims of quality provides that each participant is speaking facts, truth, and sincerity. The relation maxim permits each member to make a contribution that is relevant to the conversation's situation. The maxim of manners used by the speaker tries to present the meaning clearly, concisely, briefly, and avoiding ambiguity.

Therefore, following the Quran, a person must say the right things in conducting communication. Allah states in Surah Al-Ahzab: 70-71:

يَا أَيُّهَا الَّذِينَ آمَنُوا اتَّقُوا اللَّهَ وَقُولُوا قَوْلًا سَدِيدًا ۚ ٧٠ يُصْلِحْ لَكُمْ أَعْمَالَكُمْ وَيَغْفِرْ لَكُمْ ذُنُوبَكُمْ وَمَنْ

يُطِيعِ اللَّهَ وَرَسُولَهُ فَقَدْ فَازَ فَوْزًا عَظِيمًا ٧١

Meaning: “O, you who believe! fear Allah and speak a word that is right. He will make right for you your deeds and forgive you your sins. And whoever obeys Allah and His Messenger has surely succeeded in the great success.”

In relation to the verse, we have to offer the suitable words in response to the passage. We must be truthful and avoid dishonesty in our conversation because a believer is always truthful and does not lie, even while joking. In their contacts and talks, they should also utilize positive words.

However, the principles of the conversation do not always have to be followed, some do not follow the maxims in having a conversation. Sometimes speaker chooses to violate the cooperative principle, namely in a conversation participant states and gives wrong, dishonest, incorrect and unclear information to other participants. People also say or answer something that is not relevant to the context in communicating. There is ambiguity or expressions that are not understood in communication so that other participants find it difficult to know what is being said. Therefore, if this phenomenon occurs, it can be said that the participant is doing flouting of maxim. There are a total of four types of flouting maxims: number, quality, relation, and manner maxims. In relation to a flouting maxim, it has the intended implications or reasons for the speaker to achieve the speaker's goal, such as praising, mocking, diverting the conversation, or clarifying information.

Flouting maxims can be found not only in everyday talk, but also in a work of literature. Literary work is a term used to describe imaginative works that describe human social life that can be enjoyed, understood, and can also be utilized by society. It has several works that include literary works such as novels, scripts, dramas, movies, and so on, but this research only focuses on movies. The reason why researchers chose a movie is that it is one of the mass media that has many enthusiasts, is presented with various concept ideas, and has a moral message conveyed. Other reason is interesting and unique to be presented with audio visuals that viewers can observe images, characterizations, atmosphere, flow, and sound such as sound effects and speech that is expressed. Therefore, in a movie, many things can be examined from either internal or external elements as research references. However, in this study, researchers will only examine the conversations made by the actors in the motion picture.

This portion of the research concentrate on analyzing the movie Thor: Love and Thunder. The movie tells about Thor's adventures with his ex-girlfriend, Jane Foster, as Mighty Thor who fights Gorr, who has the ambition to take revenge by killing all the gods. The Thor love and thunder is also packed with comedy so that the audience has fun watching it.

This research investigate into the kinds of flouting maxims used by characters in the Thor love and thunder movie and also the reasons for employing flouting maxims in discussion. The researchers only take utterances that include flouting maxims in the movies. Therefore, the research will examine the flouting maxim in the movie by using a pragmatic approach, which is entitled "Flouting Maxim Used by Characters in Thor: Love and Thunder Movie".

B. Problem Statement

Based on the background, the researcher formulated the problem statement as follows:

1. What are the types flouting maxims used by the characters in the Thor Love and Thunder movie?
2. What are the reasons of using flouting maxims by the characters in Thor Love and Thunder movie?

C. Objective of the Research

Based on the research question the objective of the research formulated as follows:

1. To find out the types flouting maxims used by the characters in the Thor Love and Thunder.
2. To find out the reasons of using flouting maxims by the characters in Thor Love and Thunder movie.

D. Significance of the Research

The Researcher wishes to provide knowledge of the findings that flouting maxims obtained by the researcher based on objective of the Research, namely:

- a. Knowing types of flouting maxims done by the characters in Thor Love and Thunder movie and their reasons for flouting maxims in an exchange of information.
- b. The researcher also desires to increase awareness that a flouting maxim may be found out in a movie conversation and to learn more about pragmatics in linguistics, particularly the flouting maxim.

- c. Finally, in relation to this, the researcher expects to be able to contribute as a reference for further research on flouting maxims, and can do more in-intensity and better research in the future, whether theoretically or practically, regarding the relevance of the title and content of this research.

E. Scope of the Research

In the current research, researchers take data from the conversations expressed by the characters in the Thor Love and Thunder movie, such as utterances. Researchers selected the movie as the target of study since it contained some expressions related to flouting maxims and there are many interesting and unique things that make many fans of it until the fourth season. It describes the superhero produced by Marvel Studio. Taika Waititi and Jennifer Kaytin Robinson wrote the screenplay for Thor: Love and Thunder. The movie's genres are fantasy, humor, action, and adventure, and it came out on July 8, 2022. While the release date on Disney's streaming platform is September 8, 2022. The theory used Grice and Leech's theory.

LITERATURE REVIEW

A. Previous Study

Researchers identified several previous research studies regarding the flouting maxim. Some of the following research are cited as references by researchers in conducting this research:

First, Winarta, Suastini, & Jayantini (2022) yang entitled "Flouting Maxim as Shown By Characters In A Novel Entitled Buffalo Bill, The Border King". The cause of this research is to discover the styles of flouting maxims contained in Buffalo bill's paintings, as well as the motives why the characters flout the maxims. The researcher carried out Grice's (1975) principle to decide the kinds of maxims in Buffalo bill's novel, and cutting's (2002) idea to decide how characters in Buffalo bill's novel ruin those maxims. in step with the exam of observe facts, the characters in the novel Buffalo bill dedicated 4 varieties of violate maxim. The maxim of quantity is flouted 10 times (47.7%), the maxim of quality is flouted 0 times (0%), the maxim of relevance is flouted 9 times (forty seven.7%), and the maxim of manner is flouted once (4.6%).

Second, Marlisa&Hidayat (2020) wrote a study paper named The Analysis of Flouting Maxims in Good Morning America (GMA) Talk Show. The motive of this look at is to discover approximately flouting maxims and the motives why hosts and visitors use them. The transcript of the speech from the video serves because the research instrument. The effects found out that a variety of flouting maxims have been employed, along with flouting ideas of quality, quantity, relevance, and manner, while quantity and manner having the finest flouting maxims. in accordance to investigate, the look at also reveals the reasons at the back of the flouting maxims, which had been beneficial for constructing exciting communication and tricky more reasons.

Third, Kurniati&Hanidar (2018) wrote The Flouting of Gricean Maxims in the Films Insidious and Insidious 2. The motive of this become to become aware of the feature of characters flouting maxims while speaking with different characters, and Grice's concept was carried out. The strategies used to investigate the data are qualitative and quantitative. The study's findings display that data, insidious characters flouting a spread a maxims, that 23 times of flouting. Flouting maxim of quality is three cases (13.1%), the flouting maxims of quantity is 9 cases (39.1%), the flouting of relation is 6 cases (26.1%), and the flouting of manner is 5 cases (21.7%). The characters in Insidious 2 handiest flout maxims: the maxim of quantity (42.8%) with three cases and the maxim of relation (57.2%) with four cases. consequently there are a total of seven cases. The results imply the characters in Insidious and Insidious 2 flout maxims for a spread of motives, the most crucial of which might be to avoid upsetting the principle character, supply comprehensive reasons, convince listeners, and criticize one's movements.

Fourth, Tasyarasita&Wibowo (2022) wrote Flouting of Conversational Maxims Analysis of Characters and Social Contexts in "All The Bright Places" Movie. This studies is achieved to look at the sorts of flouting of maxims, the techniques used by the characters. additionally aimed to expose the motives behind the execution of the flouting maxims. This research is employed qualitative studies. The statistics deliver of this studies is furnished within the form of terms, terms, and sentences containing flouting of the maxims received from the characters' utterances in the film. The facts were analyzed the use of Grice's cooperative principle principle, reducing's idea of techniques to flout the maxims, Leech's idea of illocutionary abilities of politeness, and Brown and Levinson's idea of social context. The studies findings concluded that 4 kinds of flouting maxims are discovered within the characters' utterances. best three reasons for flouting the maxims have been decided.

The similarity among the previous study and this research is that it examines flouting maxim, the usage of Grice's principle to look at the types of flouting maxim carried out by characters in a literary paintings. As for the distinction, there may be the item of research where the preceding observe used novels and communicate shows. there is also a distinction in the focus of the problem below have a look at wherein this have a look at besides finding the styles of flouting maxims, the researcher additionally examines the reason for the man or woman to flouting maxim. And this research is different from preceding studies because it is to find out whether within the superhero style from marvel studio there is flouting maxim performed by means of the characters within the film aside from horror style or from novels or talk indicates. Further, there also are variations in phrases of data analysis strategies and information presentation as are the methods that have been used wherein this research makes use of descriptive qualitative.

B. Review of Literature

The researcher explains the theories relate to flouting maxims in an utterance when communicating with one another. The coverage of the theories such as the definition of pragmatics, implicature, cooperative principle, flouting maxims, reasons of flouting maxims and movie.

1. Pragmatics

A definition provided by Levinson (1983), pragmatics is the study of language use, or the relationship between language and context, which is necessary for comprehending language. While Mey (2001: 24) noted that pragmatics is connected to the context of society when interacting through the language they use.

Yule (1993:3) introduced Pragmatics as a discipline of linguistics that investigates the intentions of speakers. It relates to the investigation of the message conveyed by the speaker and interpreted by the listener. He describes the boundaries in pragmatics, such as: 1) The speaker's meaning. This research focuses on the speaker's intended meaning rather than the grammatical meaning of a speech. 2) Contextual meaning. This research entails interpreting what individuals mean in a certain setting and determining the context for expressing something. 3) Intended interpretation. This research focuses on the listener's interpretation of the speaker's utterance. 4) The expression of relative distance. This study is focuses the relationship and social distance affecting the length or shortness of a conversation between speakers and listeners.

In other words, pragmatics is a study that connects language and context that tries to understand what speakers mean and then conclude or connect based on the context in a particular situation. To understand an utterance in communication, the speaker must consider their surroundings, both physically and socially. Pragmatics, as stated by Leech (1993: 8), is the study of meaning in connection to speech contexts. Speakers may identify other situations or meanings that are not obvious in the utterance. Therefore, to understand an utterance, speech participants must pay attention to situations around them; thus, understanding the situation is called context. According to Grundy (2000), the context could assist a speech community in finding the meaning of an utterance, and the evolving context may have an effect on how a conversational event participant finds out the meaning of an utterance.

Context is essential in communication because it allows us to grasp what words or language mean. According to Leech (1983:13), context also includes taking into account the previous knowledge that both the speaker and the hearer are assumed to have, which contributes to the hearer's judgment of what the speaker meant by the given utterance.

Pragmatics can be characterized as the study of meaning in context with an emphasis to how the speaker corresponds to what is being said, when, where, and under what conditions the conversation is carried out, and that it is necessary for speakers and interlocutors to understand each other in communicating. Based on all the theoretical above, the theory related to research is Yule's theory, which focuses or emphasizes the meaning of utterances given by the speaker and interpreted by other parties or interlocutors.

2. Implicature

As stated by Grice (1975), implicature is meant to explain the words that the speaker interprets, suggests, and intends, which differ from what the speaker says. Levinson (1983:97) defines implicature and provides an explicit explanation of how it may mean more than what is actually uttered.

Implicature happens when the listener assumes the speaker's utterance and something other than what the phrases mean, Yule (1996:3). Grice distinguishes two kinds of implicature in his book Logic and Conversation: conventional implicature and conversational implicature.

Yule (2003) defines conventional implicature as a condition in conversation in the meaning of a speech is independent of the context. The conventional significance of the words employed determines what is assumed, this is referred to as implicature. In other words, it is part of a word's or construction's meaning but not its real condition. It is linked to specific words, resulting in additional meanings given when those words are used.

When someone speaks with additional meaning, this is referred to as conversational implicature Yule (2003). According to Grice (1975), conversational implicature is the pragmatic meaning of an utterance that is distinct (opposite, additional, and so on) from the literal meaning conveyed by the utterance. The basic idea in conversational implicature is to follow the cooperative principle or maxims, which is the difference between what the speaker says and the meaning inferred in the speech given by the speaker to the interlocutor. Thus, part of pragmatic problem arises as a result of flouting the principle in a conversation.

3. Cooperative principle

A definition by Grice (1975: 45), the cooperative principle is to provide your conversational contribution depending on by the acknowledged purpose or direction of the conversational exchange during which you are engaged.

Conversational maxims are concepts of cooperation in conversation, requiring speakers to talk properly, honestly, relevantly, and on a regular basis, helping the conversation to flow smoothly. If a person fulfills the cooperative principles of the four sorts of conversational maxims, they are said to communicate successfully. Grice (1975) categorizes them as follows:

1) Maxim of quantity

Participants, according to Grice (1975), should offer as much information as feasible. He declares that your comments should be only as informative as is required for the current topic and should not contain any further information. Thus, it requires speakers to achieve good communication goals without exaggerating when providing information.

An example from Thomas (1995:64):

Husband: Where are the car keys?

Wife: They are on the table in the hall.

In the example above, the wife gave an answer that followed the maxim of quantity by giving the requested answer without adding or subtracting the required information by answering the husband's answer informatively as requested.

2) Maxim of quality

The quality maxim compels speakers to offer information that is factual and supported by evidence. Grice (1975) does not assert something without evidence or something you think to be false. The maxim of quality, according to Cutting (2002:35), compels speakers to be truthful and precise in their statements.

An example:

A: I will ring you tomorrow afternoon then.

B: ermm, I shall be there as soon as I know, and in the meantime have a word with mum and dad if they are free. Right, bye-bye then sweetheart.

A: Bye-bye

In the example, B gives information that makes it clear that he does not know for sure by saying "as fast as I know," so that B avoids the accusation that he is lying about the certainty of something.

3) Maxim of relation

Maxim of relation means "be relevant" in contributing to a conversation. Therefore, speakers try to convey their utterances based on the context discussed to avoid misunderstanding, and speech partners can achieve the desired goal of the conversation. Based on Grice (as stated in Yule 1996:37), in order to fulfill the maxim of relevance, both speakers and listeners must be relevant to the topic being discussed. An example based on Leech (2011:144)

A: Where's my box of chocolates?

B: It's in my room

In the example, B complies with the relevance maxims by providing a response that is relevant to the topic of conversation by telling A the location of his box of chocolates.

4) Maxim of manner

Levinson (1983:102) argues specify what participants should do in order to communicate in an efficient, reasonable, and cooperative way. When conveying information, speakers should avoid insincerity, irrelevance, and ambiguity. According to Grice (quoted in Yule, 1996), speakers are perspicuous, brief, and ordered in order to prevent ambiguity and vagueness of speech. An Example based on Paltridge (2006);

A: Where did your mom go?

B: She went on vacation.

The example contains the maxims of manner since it clearly replies where his mother went, avoiding ambiguity for the questioner by stating that his mother went on vacation.

4. Flouting maxims

In accordance with Grice (1975), an individual may flout a maxim when he fails to accomplish it not with the goal of lying or misleading his interlocutor, but because the speaker wants his interlocutor to understand a different meaning in the discourse in addition to expressing the real meaning. When a speaker plainly fails to satisfy a maxims, this frequently leads to conversational implicature, which signals that one of the maxims is being exploited.

Simply expressed, a situation in which the speaker openly flout a maxim in order to convey a meaning distinct from what the speaker said, and where the intentional create of the implicature is not intended to deceive or mislead. As stated by Cutting (2002:37), speakers who flouting the maxim want their listeners to understand the indicated meaning, yet they do not obey the maxims. This occurs when speakers deliberately the flout cooperation principle in order for the listener to have a literal interpretation or conclusion regarding the hidden meaning of what the speaker stated.

Flouting maxims are classified into four types: flouting maxim quality, flouting maxims quantity, flouting maxims relation, and flouting maxims manner.

a) Flouting maxims of quantity

Flouting maxims of quantity by delivering too little or too much information, resulting in an uninformative speech. According to Thomas (2013), a flouting of the quantity maxim occurs when the speaker offers more or less information than the context requires.

An example based on Yule (1996:40);

Charlene: I hope I brought the bread and the cheese.

Dexter: ah, I brought the bread.

In the example conversation above, Dexter flouting the maxim of quantity because he does not provide the required information. Charlene asked about bread and cheese, but Dexter only gave an answer that mentioned bread and not cheese "brought the bread and the cheese".

b) Flouting maxims of quality

Thomas (1995), flouting the quality maxim occurs when the speaker states she or he says something blatantly untrue or lacks adequate evidence. Speakers say something that is not true by not saying honestly and representing what they think. According to Cutting (2002) speakers frequently say something that is unclear and does not accurately express their thoughts.

The maxim of quality, there are also several ways of flouting maxims, namely by using metaphors to make two analogies of two different things by comparing objects or actions with having characteristics to what is referring. Irony is used to subtly mock by making favorable claims while expressing negative things. In other words, the expression is pleasant and welcoming, but is offensive otherwise there is also the use of negative or unfavorable statements to express positive statements. Hyperbole is used to express utterances that sound like they are exaggerating something. Sarcasm is an aggressive form of irony, but it is harsher because it is used to hurt the speaker or listener.

An example flouting maxims of quality:

Ellie: Ough. Winter has come.

Sam: Right. My house is a refrigerator right now.

In the example above, Sam flouting the quality maxim because he spoke something wrong and believed something incorrect; after all, how could a house be a refrigerator? Furthermore, there is a hidden connotation in Sam's speech that he wishes to express, which is that his residence is quite cold.

c) Flouting maxims of relation

According to Thomas (1995) is abused by responding or making observations that are blatantly irrelevant to the topic at hand. Speakers avoid talking about the same topic by shifting the subject of the conversation in order to hide or avoid it.

An example based on Cutting (2008: 38)

Annie: Betty, the phone is ringing.

Betty: I'm in the bath.

Betty violates the flouting principle of relevance in the example since her answers are not on matter, therefore the conversation becomes irrelevant. She had an implicit meaning in her words where Betty signaled Annie to pick up the phone or just say hello that she couldn't pick up the phone because she was taking a bath.

d) Flouting maxims of manner

Flouting maxims of manner, the emergence of figurative meanings, and vague and ambiguous words in conversation. When speakers give unclear and ambiguous speech that can make listeners feel confused, it means they are flouting maxims of manner. According to Cutting (2002) states occur when a speaker does not talk clearly, appears transparent, or is ambiguous.

An example based on Levinson (1983)

A: I hear you went to the opera last night; how was the lead singer?

B: The singer produced a series of sounds corresponding closely to the score of an aria from 'Rigoletto'.

The example provided involves a flouting maxim of the manners, implying that the singer is not very good.

5. Reasons for flouting the maxim

The speaker is trying to make a relevant, efficient, and effective contribution to the interlocutor's understanding of the purpose and intent of the utterance, but there is a reason that makes the speaker flout Maxim. The objective aims to allow the listener to figure out the underlying meaning of the speaker's words. Additionally, speakers flouting maxims since there are occasions when speakers speak incoherently or fraudulently, signaling that they do not follow maxims. According to Mey (2001: 79), flouting maxim can be caused by a variety of reasons.

Leech (1983:104) proposes many illocutionary function of saying something with some hidden meanings in order to act politely in front of the others. Illocutionary function becomes the reasons for flouting maxim, they are competitive, convivial, collaborative, and conflictive. There is an example in (Fatmawati, 2015);

1) Competitive

These reasons are related to illocutionary goals that competes with social goals, such as commanding, requesting, demanding, and begging (Leech, 1983: 104). The following an example of Cutting (2008: 38);

Annie : Betty, the phone is ringing.

Betty : I'm in the bath.

In the scenario described, Betty's illocutionary goal and her social goal compete. Her social goal is to assist Annie with answering the phone, while her illocutionary goal is to finish her own duty. When Annie asks Betty to pick up the phone, she recognizes her current condition. Then she deliberately breaks the relevant principle by refusing to answer the phone by stating, "I'm in the shower." Betty breaks the relevance maxim in the dialogue for competitive reasons. Betty's illocutionary goal finally takes precedence over her social goal.

2) Convivial

Offering, inviting, greeting, thanking, and congratulating are examples of situations where the illocutionary goal coincides the social goal (Leech, 1983: 104).

Samira : I can't imagine for sure. Perfect score for your grammar.

Julie : It's also you in charge.

The conversation's social goal is for Julie to receive the complement, and its illocutionary purpose is for Julie to thank the compliment. There is no competition here, only a lovely convergence of goals. Julie breaks the relevance criterion by thanking Samira for her assistance in teaching Julie grammar. Julie is more concerned with fulfilling her commitment to thank Samira than she is with her compliment. The rationale for breaching this rule is a friendly one, because both parties want to feel satisfied in the conversation.

3) Collaborative

Leech (1983: 104) defines collaborative as when the illocutionary goal is indifferent to the social goal. This rationale applies to a wide variety of reason, including; asserting, reporting, announcing, and instructing. Here are some examples based on Yule (1996);

Charlene : I hope you brought the bread and the cheese.

Dexter : Ah, I brought the bread.

In this case, Dexter breaks the quantity maxim since he wants to tell Charlene that he didn't bring any cheese. Dexter's illocutionary goal is to report on his actions. The context in this situation supports Dexter's remark, so Charlene understands Dexter's purpose.

4) Conflictive

Threatening, accusing, cursing, and reprimanding are instances of illocutionary goals that conflictive with the social goals (Leech, 1983:104).

Anne : How about your meal?

Willy : Yum, this is a lovely undercooked egg you've given me here, as usual.

Willy is attempting to harm Anne and thus flouting maxims of quality. The social goal is to compliment or counsel Anne on her flaws. The illocutionary goal, on the other hand, is to express himself without regard for the feelings of others. In the following dialogue, the word 'lovely' becomes a conflict word. The food was not lovely, so Willy wanted to reprimand Anne but Willy said the opposite, so in this case, the reason for the maxim flouting was conflictive.

6. Movie

Movies have their charm so that they attract the interest of the audience to watch them. Alan (1983: 148) a film is a story or event that is captured by a camera as a series of moving images and exhibited as moving pictures in theaters or on television. While watching a movie, the audience is presented with the setting, dialog, plot, and characters in the film in order to gain knowledge or inspiration from it. Action films, horror films, thrillers, romance, comedy, adventure, fantasy, musicals, and many other kind of films exist. In parts of the world, someone watches movies for various purposes, some of which make the audience feel entertained, saddened, scared, or have fun, and so on.

Thor Love and Thunder is the story of Thor, who is in the middle of his retirement, trying to find peace within himself, when an incident forces him back into action to fight and stop Gorr, who has sworn to destroy all the Gods in the universe because on one occasion Gorr carried his daughter named Love walking in the desert who looked sick while praying to the gods to heal his daughter, but the god, Rapu, did not listen to him and his daughter died. Necrosword, the god of murder, summoned Gorr to Rapu's green country. Rapu made fun of Gorr while disregarding his misery, and Gorr felt betrayed, thus he decided to abandon Rapu as his deity. Rapu strangled him but at the same time Gorr took the All-Black Necrosword and stabbed Rapu in the neck and vowed to eliminate all gods in the universe.

Thor enlists the help of former Asgard warriors Valkyrie (Tessa Thompson), Korg (Taika Waititi), and his ex-lover Jane Foster (Natalie Portman) to fight Gorr. Here the adventure story begins where Thor joins the Guardians of the Galaxy, and with the help of Star Lord and others, Thor finds himself again after wandering aimlessly and without direction. Thor's reunion with Jane Foster, Thor's old lover who was diagnosed with cancer, Valkyrie, the leader of New Asgard, Korg, Zeus, the king of the gods who refused to help Thor and others, believing that the gods would be secure if they hid in Omnipotence City, is the plot of the film.

At the end of the story after the fight Thor and Jane destroy the Necrosword, freeing Gorr from its influence, but the three are brought into Eternity's realm. Gorr wanted to make a wish but Thor told him that he did not want to fight but he chose love because he loved Jane very much, at that time Jane died in Thor's arms. Seeing that Gorr was moved and asked to revive Love and was granted. The last of Gorr's life, he asked Thor to take care of his daughter.

After they returned to New Asgard, Valkyrie and Sif trained the children to defend themselves and a monument in Jane's honor was built while Korg got his body back and made friends of his species. Thor looks after Love and joins him in heroism; they face a threat from Korg, who claims that they are called Love and Thunder. In another scene, Zeus is still alive and wants revenge through his son Hercules, while Jane arrives at Valhalla's gates, where Heimdall greets her.

CHAPTER III

METHODOLOGY OF RESEARCH

A. Research Design

The researchers used a descriptive qualitative method. The data taken from the script of the Thor Love and Thunder movie, and it not be in the form of numbers or records. According to Creswell (2018), qualitative studies is a means for exploring and know-how the meaning individuals or organizations ascribe to a social or human trouble. As stated by using Sudaryanto (2015) makes a speciality of the information inside the varieties of an outline or written phrase. Gay (2012) explains that in qualitative studies, the statistics is accrued in a descriptive manner to gain insights and answer questions on the phenomena which are being studied. Based totally on this, the researcher raises studies related to phenomena taking place in social existence and movies as a representation of them. In collecting data from the Thor: Love and Thunder movie concerning conversations which are covered within the flouting maxim, the researcher try to become aware of the reasons why the characters chose to flout the maxim inside the Thor: Love and Thunder movie.

B. Data Sources

The data sources from utterances spoken by the characters, including flouting maxims in the Thor Love and Thunder movie, and transcripts of recorded conversations. Furthermore, researchers investigated reason by the characters flout their maxims. The characters in Thor Love and Thunder are Thor, Jane Foster, King Valkyrie, GorrThe God Butcher, and Korg. In this case, the researcher transcribed conversation from the 1 hour, 59-minute movie Thor: Love and Thunder.

C. Instrument

In the words of Gerring (2007), Descriptive qualitative research employs a natural setting as a direct data source, with the researcher serving as the key instrument. Furthermore, Meleong (2001), the human instrument is the main instrument in research is the researcher herself. Researchers are required to have adequate abilities in matters relating to the research under study, which means that researchers conducted research based on knowledge of pragmatics studies, where researchers play a role from the planning stage, data collection, analysis, and data interpretation, to reporting research results.

D. Procedures in Collecting data

The data collection procedure had several steps, follows:

- 1) The researcher watched Thor Love and Thunder movies by listening and paying attention to every conversation and Transcribing the movie. It should be done repeatedly to ensure that there are no errors in inputting utterances in the conversation.
- 2) The researcher Read the transcript while matching the script with the one in the movie, after accurate, the researcher sorts the data.
- 3) The researcher identified data that includes flouting maxims from the script.
- 4) Finally, classified the data obtained, which included the types of flouting maxim, and then analyzed it in terms of context, types, and reasons for flouting maxim.

E. Technique in Data Analysis

Miles and Huberman (1994) states that data analysis had three fundamental components: data reduction, data display, and conclusion drawing/verification.

a. Data reduction

Data reduction, according to Miles and Huberman (1994), is the selection, concentrating, simplification, abstraction, and transformation of data. The goal is to eliminate irrelevant data. The researcher then detected flouting maxim utterances and deleted data that did not include flouting maxim. As a result, the researcher gathers the data into flouting maxim categories and provides a brief description of the data.

b. Data display

Miles and Huberman (1994), a display is an organized set of information that allows users to draw conclusions and take action. It is concerned with data organization, compression, and collection. As a result, the researcher collected information to analyze in the form of narratives about the different types of flouting maxims and the reasons why the characters flout certain maxims.

c. Conclusion drawing

Based on Miles and Huberman (1994) state conclusion drawing is also verified as the analysis proceeds. The researcher draw conclusions based on the data display and discussion after analyzing the data.

CHAPTER IV

FINDINGS AND DISCUSSIONS

Findings and Discussions

In this research the source of data comes from the script Thor Love and Thunder movie. Researchers found flouting maxims performed by characters in movie scripts. It is to classify utterances into types of flouting maxims and reasons of flouting maxims. According to Grice (1975), the speaker deliberately and blatantly fails to fulfill certain maxims because the speaker wants to express the implicit meaning hidden behind the literal meaning. Meanwhile proposed by leech (1983) on the reason flouting maxim related to illocutionary function. The researcher collects data by watched, transcribed, analyzed, identified and classified the data. In analyzed the data used the theory of Miles and Huberman (1994) that contains data reduction, data display and verification.

Researchers reduced data from movie dialogue transcripts that did not include types of flouting maxims, after data reduction found 56 data that included types reasons of flouting maxims from Thor love and Thunder movie dialogues. Then the researchers display the data found to be used as an example or explanation related to types and reason flouting maxim. Data in the form of a table to make it easier to classify the data encountered, with the table showing the types and reason flouting maxim of the characters.

In the presented of findings and discussion in the thesis, the researcher explained that of 56 data found, only 24 data were presented as representatives of types of flouting maxim and reason for flouting maxim. Data 1 to data 12 focuses on discussing the types of flouting maxim where only three data represent each type of flouting maxim. Data 13 to Data 24 focused on explaining the reason for flouting maxim whereas only three data represent to describe each reason of the characters. The characters consist of Thor, Jane, Valkyrie, Gorr and Korg.

1. Types of Flouting Maxim

Table 4.1 shows 56 utterances that include type of the flouting maxim. It shows all types of maxims in the utterances uttered by the characters the Thor Love and Thunder movie flouting. The most dominant type of flouting maxims performed is flouting maxim of quantity 17 utterances by giving too little or too much information than needed then followed by flouting maxim of manner there are utterances which there is ambiguity and not briefly, flouting maxim of quality where there are 13 utterances which provide incorrect information or lack of evidence and the last is maxim of relation 12 utterances which conveys not relevance information.

Table 4.1 Types of flouting maxim

No.	Flouting Maxim	Frequency
1.	Quantity	17
2.	Quality	13
3.	Relation	12
4.	Manner	14
Total		56

Researchers found the data after collected data from the dialogue spoken by the characters in the Thor Love and Thunder movie based on Grice's (1975) theory of cooperative principle focuses on flouting maxims which are classified into four types, namely flouting maxims of quality, quantity, relation and manner. In this study, researchers found that the characters in Thor Love and Thunder discovered all types of flouting maxim. The following is a description of the data from the utterances of the characters including flouting maxim.

a. Flouting maxim of quantity

Flouting maxim of quantity, the characters in ThorLove and Thunder identified the flouting maxim by speaker conveys less or more information than what is needed. The characters are not as informative as what is needed in a dialogue. According Grice (1975) that Also, sometimes they give information that is not important where it is not related to the topic at hand.

The first example occurs in a conversation between King Yakan and Thor, where Thor flouting maxim of quantity. Here's the characters dialogue that contains flouting the maxim of quantity:

Datum 1

Thor	: King Yakan, thank you so much. Listen, um, about the temple...
King Yakan	: I don't wanna talk about the temple.
Thor	: I know, but if we were to talk about it, I think it's important...
King Yakan	: It's making me sad.
Thor	: ...to life and material objects...
King Yakan	: And mad.

Thor : Okay, I'll stop talking.

Minutes: 00:22:20

The dialogue took place after Thor wins the battle against Habooska who took over the unguarded sacred temple due to the gods of the dead oasis being killed. Therefore, King Yakan asks Thor and his team for help to save the oasis and of course the sacred temple because he feels tarnished when Habooska rules and the end they win the battle. Therefore, King Yakan gave him gift.

In this conversation Thor flouts the maxim of quantity where Thor gives more information than what is needed, it is relevant with Grice (1975) stated participants should contribute as informative as possible. He should only thank King Yakan for gifting Goat as his gratitude for saving oasis and defeating him despite the sacred temple being damaged during the battle. However, Thor even discussed also about the damaged temple which is King Yakan did not want to discuss it because he felt sad. The temple that had been sanctified to be damaged due to battle. Thor should have expressed his gratitude without having discussed the temple. In order to explain something that happened beyond his control so that there would be no misunderstanding him and King Yakan.

Jane : What's it been? Like, three, four years?

Thor : Eight years, seven months, and six days. I haven't forgotten the last time I saw you, or didn't see you, because you left.

Minutes: 00:38:00

This conversation took place between Thor and Jane who met again after years of not seeing each other after they broke off their relationship. After years of not seeing each other, they were finally reunited where Jane became Mighty Thor who helped Asgard fight the villain. The situation Jane and Thor had a brief conversation after a battle against The God Butcher, in the battle The God Butcher did not succeed in defeating Thor so he kidnapped the children of Asgard. Thor showed his surprise at seeing Jane and couldn't forget his memories with Jane when they were still together, even the time and place the day Jane left him he still remembered it.

The conversation above shows that Thor flouting the maxim of quantity where Jane just says hello about how long they have not met. However, Thor's response gives an answer from the portion requested by Jane by providing too much information. Thor replied "Eight years, seven months, and six days. I haven't forgotten the last time I saw you, or didn't see you, because you left." Who should have simply replied with "Eight years, seven months, and six days." Without having to express how he was or how he felt when she left him. His response was due to his deep sadness and longing for Jane after not seeing her for so long. Thor is supposed to answer informatively by not adding more information than what was asked it is relevant with Thomas (2013) theory.

Datum 3

Thor : So, you still rollerblading?
Jane : No. No. You?
Thor : Oh, yeah. Every weekend. Once you blade, you never fade. Right, Korg?
Korg : Skate mates for life!

Minutes: 00:50:00

Jane and Thor traveled to Omnipotence City where they are on foot consisting of Korg, Valkyrie, Thor and Jane. They walk where Thor and Jane walk side by side while Korg and Valkyrie walk side by side behind them. On the way, Thor and Jane asked each other about their activities after not seeing each other for a long time due to lost contact, the conversation seemed awkward.

Therefore, it can be seen that the conversation between Thor and Jane, Thor is flouting the maxim of quality because it not provides information from what is needed or asked. It has been seen that Jane only asked back the question given by Thor about whether she is still rollerblading or not, Jane has given a short answer by saying "No" Thor should also simply answer Jane's question with "yeah" or "no" no need to add "Every weekend. Once you blade, you never fade. Right, Korg?." It also seems that Thor did not provide informative information because he has added about when he did it and the statement that rollerblading never blades on him. In addition, he also asked Korg for validation that the statement he made was true and that he really did it while they were no longer together with Jane. This is to keep their conversation going effectively and reduce the awkwardness between them.

This result was in line with Winarta et al. (2022), Marlisa&Hidayat (2020), Kurniati&Hanidar (2018) and Tasyarasita&Wibowo (2022) who have found the type of flouting maxim of quantity in novels, talk shows and movies. In these studies, there are findings that found flouting maxim of quantity to be the most flouted maxim that often occurred by the characters by providing excessive information than what is needed, namely Winarta et al. (2022) found 20 cases and Kurniati&Hanidar (2018) found 10 cases.

b. Maxim of Quality

The speaker flouted the maxim of quality by giving untruth information that does not match what they think or say something false and saying information which lack of evidence or tell a lie is mostly done to hide something, Grice (1975). It can be hyperbole, irony, sarcasm, or metaphor.

In Thor Love and thunder, there was 13 flouting maxims of quality. As for some utterances in conversations between characters that contains flouting the maxim of quality as followed.

Datum 4

Darcy	: Have you told anyone else besides me?
Jane	: When people find out, they start acting weird. They're just different. I don't need that in my life right now. Anyway, it's not that serious.
Darcy	: Jane, it's Stage Four.

Minutes: 00:15:50

This dialog occurs after Jane does a health check on the cancer she has had for some time. Jane has stage four cancer which is dangerous for her and difficult to cure related to this, so Jane does not tell about the disease she has suffered so far to many people in this case only Darcy as Jane's friend and Jane's doctor who knows it. She has her own reasons for not telling it to others. In this conversation Darcy chats with Jane about her illness and asks how Jane is doing, which constantly seems ignorant of her illness.

Jane indicated flouting the maxim of quality in the conversation by saying something that is not in accordance with reality, this is relevant to Grice's theory (1975) that occurs when the speaker's utterance does not represent the reality or when the speaker deliberately says something which is untrue. He said "When people find out, they start acting weird. They're just different" Jane says this is lack of evidence because how can Jane say that someone will act weird when they find out it hurts and say someone will act different than usual, the statement is just Jane's unfounded perceptions. In addition, Jane says untruth information from the utterance "Anyway, it's not that serious" this utterance identifies that stage four cancer is not dangerous but in fact stage four cancer is dangerous. Therefore, Jane flouted the maxim of quality by saying the lack of evidence and not telling the truth or saying false things.

Datum 5

Thor : Oh, I hate to break it to you, but for a warrior to get into Valhalla, you have to die in the battle. You survived.
Sif : Oh, shit.
Thor : Maybe your arm is in Valhalla.

Minutes: 00:27:48

This dialog has been carried out by Thor and Sif (God of the Falligarian) where Thor came for Sif who was doing battle against the enemy but upon arrival at the place where Sif was doing Battle, Thor saw her lying with her missing hand because at that time Thor was late in coming to help after receiving a call for help from Sif earlier. In this situation Sif told Thor that she wanted a warrior to die on the battlefield and then she could claim her place in Valhalla but in fact Sif survived the battle despite having to lose her hand. Valhalla itself is where warriors or heroic lives who fall in battle to continue to live forever and live with Odin located in the realm of Asgard. She thought she would die in the battlefield.

In this case shows Thor flouting maxim of quality which says "Maybe your arm is in Valhalla" he said this not knowing the truth whether Sif's hand is in Valhalla or not and he has no evidence of this. The purpose of Thor is to calm Sif who lost her hand and not be discouraged and requires Thor to say so even though he does not know the truth.

Valkyrie : What's happening there? Where? Am I, uh, sensing feelings?
Thor : Feelings? What, for Jane? Mm-hmm. No, don't be ridiculous. Feelings. The last time we had feelings were long time ago. Long, long gone. I think you... Maybe you have feelings. Right.

Valkyrie : Oh...Mate, relax. I don't know. We're on the same team.

Minutes: 00:51:00

Korg, Valkyrie, Thor and Jane arrived at the place where the gods are, they explore the place on foot where their position Korg and Valkyrie walk side by side while Thor and Jane walk behind the two of them. On the way there was a conversation between Thor and Jane which seemed awkward after all this time finally got the chance to meet again. Jane left Thor because she wanted to see the buildings around the place so Valykrie spoke to Thor about her opinion of seeing and hearing a little conversation between them, she felt something of the feelings that still existed or grew again between Thor and Jane.

Valkyrie in the conversation expresses her opinion on what she sees from the body language and how the conversation between Thor and Jane was awkward "What's happening there? Where? Am I, uh, sensing feelings?" she suspects that Thor still has feelings for Jane as his former lover but Valkyrie's question is refuted by Thor by saying "Feelings? What, for Jane? Mm-hmm. No, don't be ridiculous. Feelings. The last time we had feelings were a long time ago. Long, long gone."Emphasizing that his feelings for Jane are gone. However, in fact it can be clearly seen that Thor still has feelings for Jane thus Thor is not telling the truth about his feelings and there is also the statement "I think you... Maybe you have feelings. Right". He alleges that it is not him who has feelings but Valkyrie. Thus, Thor has been flouting maxim of quality by not telling the truth and accusing with lack of evidence so that Valkyrie does not suspect him. This is also included in the theory presented by Cutting (2002) regarding the theory of several ways to flout the maxim of quality, one of which is sarcasm.

Previous studies, namely Marlisa&Hidayat (2020), Kurniati&Hanidar (2018) and Tasyarasita&Wibowo (2022) have found flouting maxim of quality in various research objects, they do not tell the truth in a conversation and say something that cannot be proven, also found the use of strategy in flouted maxim. However, the research by Winarta et al. (2022) did not find flouting maxim of quality in the novel.

c. Flouting maxim of relation

The speaker is flouting the maxim of relation by saying something that is irrelevant to the topic being discussed. Based on the theory of the cooperative principle proposed by Grice (1975) that between the speaker and the listener who conducts a conversation, each participant should make a relevant contribution. So if someone makes an argument or statement that is not relevant or far to the topic being discussed it can be said she flouted maxim of relation.

In the Thor Love and Thunder movie, there are 12 maxims of relation as for some utterances in conversations between characters that include flouting the maxim of relation as followed.

Datum 7

Quill : Thor. You gonna be okay?
Thor : I admire your commitment to each other. It's a beautiful thing. Alas, it's something I'll never have.

Minutes: 00:24:30

Quill and Thor who bid farewell to each other for a while after being together as a team. They had to separate to carry out rescue actions because there were too many people asking for help. Then Thor and Korg go along with Goat to help Sif while the others go along with for helping others.

The dialogue above shows Thor had flouted the maxim of relation because he gave irrelevant information to him. Quill asks Thor how he feels about being separated from the team to save the world, but he responds, “I admire your commitment to each other. It's a beautiful thing. Alas, it's something I'll never have” by stating his feelings during the Alas. He probably avoided or did not want to answer the Quill question. He hides what's on him whether he's okay or not he did the fight without them with avoided the question.

Datum 8

Jane : Is this guy for real?
Valkyrie : Honestly, I'm not mad at it.
Thor : Yeah, I'm sure he has a point, okay?

Minutes: 00:56:11

They arrived at Omnipotence City which is known to be the home of the gods. They saw many gods there until Zeus arrived to deliver his speech, he was famous as he's the god of lightning. Jane questions Zeus ' authenticity after listening to what Zeus says that seems strange.

The dialogue indicated Thor flouting maxim of relation which Thor does not answer questions from Jane about what happened and to what Zeus said, Zeus said something different from what they expect of Zeus as the man, The myth, The legend and huge source of inspiration. Instead of answering Jane's question, he said that Zeus must have had a point. Thor flouted the maxim of relation because he didn't give a relevant answer to the question being asked. It was done to divert the discussion of between Valkyrie and Jane and keep the focus on Zeus.

Datum 9

Thor : What do you say?
Jane : I have cancer.
Thor : I'm sorry, what?
Jane : I'm sick.
Thor : Wait. What's happening?
Jane : Bye.

Minutes: 01:11:48

Thor and Jane was on a ship that takes them to the shadow realm where children have been kidnapped and they have a mission to save the children who have been kidnapped by the god of butcher. They have a conversation about their life after the breakup where Thor expresses his feelings to Jane that he still loves her and wants to be together forever. But in the conversation Jane does not answer Thor's question but rejects Thor's feelings for her by telling the truth that she cannot get back together again like before because she knows the cancer she has that could take her life. Jane understands Thor's question but chooses to flout the maxim because she wants to tell Thor that she is sick and not allow herself to be with Thor for long or Jane says that, so Thor knows about her illness that she has not told him about before and doubts whether Thor will still be with her when he finds out she is sick. Therefore, Jane flouted the maxim of relation to avoid Thor's question and did not want to discuss such matters.

The result of the previous study in Winarta et al. (2022), Marlisa&Hidayat (2020), Tasyarasita&Wibowo (2022) and Kurniatia and Hanidar (2018) who found flouting maxim of relation done by the characters for when the speaker responds to the hearer by deliberately not giving a relevant response to the topic that is being discussed. This study there are 12 utterances being occurs.

d. Flouting the maxim of manner

The speaker flouting maxim of manner by giving ambiguous information, not order, not brief, giving obscure and giving unclear information. Cutting (2002) stated a speaker does talk clearly or is ambiguous.

Datum 10

Thor : How are we doing, guys?
Drax : Terrible! We're all about to die. You said this planet would be a relaxing holiday.
Thor : I said it was going to be, "Like a relaxing holiday."

Minutes: 00:10:35

Drax conducts a Battle then Thor comes to greet all of them and Drax answers the question in the middle of the battle at the oasis. In the dialogue above Thor is flouting the maxim of manner "Like a relaxing holiday". Stating the vacation they were going on would be a relaxing vacation but it turned out to be terrible they were all almost dead. The statement raises ambiguity and does not briefly explain what Thor means by a holiday like a relaxing holiday. Raises the question of whether be a relaxing holiday meant by Thor is a terrible battle or what kind of relaxing holiday. Therefore dialog includes flouting the maxim of manner because when a speaker deliberately fails to observe the maxim by not being brief, using obscure language, not being orderly or using ambiguity, Grice (1975).

Datum 11

Astrid : What will happen to us?
Thor : Who can tell? I mean, this is a very, very bad situation. You know, the good news is you're Asgardians. So, if you die, you'll end up in Valhalla.
Astrid : Oh, my God. Go away.

Minutes: 00:42:54

Astrid is one of the children kidnapped by Gorr. Thor meets the child in the form of the vision ghost and Thor knew that the kidnapped children are locked up in the shadow realm. He went to the children and told them that they were going to get out of the place. In the data above shows the flouting maxim of manner relevant with theory of Cutting (2002) stated flouts the maxim of relation expects the hearer to understand the meaning behind the utterance.

Thor says the unclear and not brief information to answer Astrid's question. Astrid questions their fate but Thor answers uncertain as to what will happen to them whether they are okay or not. He stated as if in a bad situation it happened to continue then the children would die and would enter Valhalla. He explained that because he was confused about what would happen to their fate if they could not be saved.

Datum 12

- Jane : What does he mean, reach Eternity?
Valkyrie : Oh, shit. Eternity is a very powerful being at the center of the universe. It will grant the desire of the first person who reaches it.
Jane : So, it's like a wishing well?
Valkyrie : What do you think a guy called the God Butcher would wish for?

Minutes: 01:02:00

Thor and Zeus on stage, Thor negotiates with Zeus to help them to raise an army and says that the god butcher is there to finish off all the gods but Zeus refused to help them, instead Zeus advises Thor to remain silent in the Omnipotence City. In this dialogue, Valkyrie flouted the maxim of manner because she didn't give clear information regarding Jane's question "So, it's like a wishing well?", she asks for an explanation of the eternity but instead of answering yes or no he instead answers using a question about what request the god of butcher would ask if it arrived at the eternity. Therefore Valkyrie question raises ambiguity.

Previous study was found that types of maxim flouting of manner in the utterances uttered similar with this study who flouting maxim of manner had 14 utterances and it is the second most common flouting maxim uttered by characters. Moreover in Marlisa&Hidayat (2020) became the most used flouting maxim with the same number of utterances as the flouting maxim of quantity. It flouted caused they usually use many an ambiguous utterances.

2. Reasons for flouting maxim

The theory used to identify the reason the characters for flouting the maxim is leech's theory. According to the Leech (1983) theory is the theory of illocutionary function of saying something with hidden meanings in order to show politeness.

In table 4.2 shows 56 utterances that have reason for flouting maxim based on Leech (1983) theory in Thor Love and Thunder. The most frequently reasons used is collaborative because it is used 20 utterances, while competitive becomes the second most frequently because it is used 17 utterances. Then, convivial became the third frequently used which characters used convivial reason 10 utterances. The last is conflictive which is used 9 utterances.

Table 4.2 reasons for flouting maxim

No.	Reasons for flouting maxim	Frequency
1.	Competitive	17
2.	Convivial	10
3.	Collaborative	20
4.	Conflictive	9
Total		56

There are contained Competitive, convivial, collaborative, and conflictive reasons.

a. Competitive reason

Competitive occurred when the speaker received the goals in a good way. The competitive parts are ordering, demanding, asking and begging

Leech (1983). In competitive reason there are 17 times this reason is used by the characters in the movie. It is a competition between the illocutionary goal and the social goal.

Valkyrie	: You all right?
Jane	: Great.
Valkyrie	: Mm. The sink would say otherwise.

Minutes: 00:47:44

Jane was in the toilet and felt the pain in her body due to cancer and the use of Mjolnir which drained her energy to turn into Mighty Thor. If Jane's continued use of Mjolnir makes her condition worse and in the scene also Jane reminisces about her childhood memories with her mother. then, Valkyrie came to Jane after hearing something in the toilet where Jane was. Based on dialogue Jane violates the flouting maxim of quality because in reality Jane is not okay, with Jane saying “Great” when Valkyrie asks “You all right?” Jane's answer is not correct. Jane during the conversation was experiencing pain due to the effects of cancer in his idleness for some time. Although Jane says Great, Valkyrie realizes that something happened to Jane or lied to her because the sink in the toilet was damaged by Jane's act.

The utterance stated competitive reason based on Leech (1983) theory where there is competition between illocutionary goals and social goals. In terms, this dialogue is competitive reason where there is a competition between illocutionary goal and social goal. Illocutionary goal is demanding to Valkyrie that she is okay to join the adventure to find the missing children even though she has to lie about her real situation while Valkyrie's social goal wants Jane to join the battle even though it looks like Jane has a problem because as a Thor she has to participate in the battle and should die in battle even though it is very painful. So there seems to be a competition between illocutionary goal and social in Jane's answer to the question asked by Valkyrie, she still tries to answer the question asked even though she is very trying to look fine. It is relevant to Leech (1983) explained that the illocutionary goal focuses on personal achievement. Meanwhile, social goal focuses on bringing the advantage to the others.

Thor : So, how did you guys get together? How did this happen?
Jane : I swear I heard Mjolnir call to me.

Minutes: 00:46:19

Thor and Jane over a ship they are about to board to start a adventure. Jane approaches Thor who is looking at Mjolnir and Jane comes to greet Thor. Jane flouted the maxim of quantity because answering the question asked by Thor is not informative as required. Thor questions How Mjolnir is biased with her in detail but Jane only answers briefly. This dialogue includes competitive reason as Jane begs Thor to believe her that it was Mjolnir who called her “I swear I heard Mjolnir call to me”. Illocutionary goal Jane tried to give his answer and not misunderstand her about Mjolnir existing to her and Jane's appearance resembling Thor's appearance, and eventually becoming Jane's. Social goal is Mjolnir, which has been recognized as Thor's hammer in the museum in Asgard, so it is not surprising to question the hammer that has been destroyed and museumized in Jane's hands. Her intention is to beg Thor for Mjolnir to come to her.

Thor : If he seeks the Altar of Eternity, that means he could wipe us out at once. Zeus, we must act now.
Zeus : He's not going to make it. He doesn't have the key.
Thor : Is this the purpose of the gods? To hide away in a golden palace like cowards? Maybe we have lost our way. You know what? We'll stop him ourselves.

Minutes: 01:02:25

Thor and Zeus where Thor talks on stage, Thor asks Zeus for help to save the children but he refused to help because Zeus is afraid that the god butcher will find them. Zeus tells Thor that the god Butcher will not reach eternity, it is place who the first wish that reach it will grant. It was a tense conversation where Thor and Zeus argued with each other.

Based on the context is flouting the maxim of relation because Thor doesn't respond with relevant Zeus statements, Zeus states The God Butcher won't reach Eternity because he doesn't have the key but Thor questions the purpose of the Gods just hiding in the golden palace like a coward, and Thor States he will stop him. Based on this, this dialogue includes a competitive reason because there is a competition between the illocutionary goal and the social goal, Zeus tells Thor that the Butcher will not reach eternity because it does not have a key. The Illocutionary goal is to stop the gods butcher from reaching Eternity and defying the revelation of Zeus and the social goal is for Thor to know of eternity's existence and Gorr's whereabouts and it's not easy to have found eternity before the god of butchers found it first.

b. Convivial reason

Convivial reason this is a reason for maxim flouting where an illogical goal coincides with the social goal as in offering, inviting, greeting, thanking, and congratulating, Leech (1983). That's why the characters in Thor love and Thunder movie flouted maxim. Convivial reason has a frequency of use as much as 10 times out of 56 data. The following is an explanation of the use of convivial reason in the use of flouting maxim by characters, presented as follows.

Datum 16

Thor : Didn't find them.
Korg : Oh, bae, your cape's on fire.
Thor : It's fine. It'll grow back.

Minutes: 00:41:17

Korg and Thor, where Thor tries to found the kidnapped children using the Strom breaker but is unsuccessful in found them. In this dialogue Korg is flouting the maxim of relation, Korg diverts the discussion of Thor returning because he failed to find the kidnapped children. That's why Korg is flouting maxim. This dialogue includes convivial reason where illocutionary goal and social goal coincides with each other Leech (1983). Illocutionary goal is Korg greets Thor for trying to find the children and for Thor to be rewarded. Social goal is Korg shows Thor's efforts to the others that he has tried until his Cape burns down and Thor does not get angry by the others for destroying the buildings in Asgard. In conclusion Korg did convivial reason is he tried so that Thor did not feel disappointed and the others did not protest to Thor for what he had done.

Quill : We must hurry, okay?
Thor : People are dying. See you down there. Hurry up

Minutes: 00:10:00

Quill and Thor, where Quill had come to ask Thor for help to participated in the battle that occur. Quill tells Thor when Thor is meditating or resting so Thor calls Strom breaker. In this dialogue Thor flouts the maxim of manner because there is ambiguity and vagueness in the dialogue, saying "People are dying." How did Thor know that people were dying and how did Thor know where the battle was taking place. In this dialogue includes convivial reason where illocutionary goal and social goal coincide. The Illocutionary goal is that his time is up and ready to help and the social goal is to invite his team to hurry quickly. Both illocutionary goal and social goal realized at the same time or it collaborate with the social goal as in reporting.

Datum 18

Thor : Who's the new guy?
Valkyrie : That guy? You're gonna love that guy.

Minutes: 00:30:38

Thor and Valkyrie, where their condition is in a battle situation between Valkyrie and the God of butcher's Army. During the incident Thor saw Mjolnir, Thor's hammer that had been damaged and he saw a woman who looked the same as him participate in the battle. Thor is curious about the person, besides just seeing that the woman also had Mjolnir.

In the dialogue above Valkyrie was flouting the maxim of manner. Valkyrie did not answer Thor's question briefly and gave an ambiguous statement about someone who looks like him. Valkyrie should have answered correctly that someone was Jane who also became a Thor. So Valkyrie flouted the maxim of manner. The reason Valkyrie has been flouting maxim is convivial reason where there is a coincidence between illocutionary goal and social goal. The Illocutionary goal is that Valkyrie feels Thor would like Jane to join them in Asgard to wage a war and find out Thor and Jane are former lovers. The social goal of this dialogue is congratulating Thor for coming back and meeting Jane again. As the result Valkyrie does a convivial reason for congratulating Thor for meeting Jane.

c. Collaborative Reasons

Collaborative happens when an illocutionary goal is indifferent to the social goal. There are asserting, reporting, announcing, and instructing. Collaborative reason occurred 20 times, becoming the most frequent reason that has been done by the characters in Thor Love and Thunder movie. Here are some examples of collaborative reasoning;

Datum 19

Thor	: Oh, there you are. Okay.
Jane	: What's goin' on out there?
Thor	: Oh, some moron made a fridge without a door. Can you believe it? Not to worry. Got it open and got you all sorts of goodies.

Minutes: 01:25: 34

The dialogue has occurred between Jane and Thor, Jane is in the hospital with an unhealthy condition due to cancer, on the other hand Thor talks to the doctor who treats Jane, he says Jane's condition is a crisis and does not allow him to join the battle, after hearing that Thor is sad and expresses it by punching the hospital refrigerator until it breaks. and the sound of the refrigerator is heard into Jane's hospital room thus making curiosity about what has happened outside.

The linked between the dialog and the context has found Thor flouting the maxim of quality because it seems to hide the true situation of what happened outside the room from Jane. He said “Oh, some moron made a fridge without a door. Can you believe it? Not to worry. Got it open and got you all sorts of goodies” when what actually happened was not the case but he destroyed the refrigerator. Thor would rather tell the untruth than explain what really happened. Thor's reason for doing so includes the reason of collaborative where illocutionary goal and social goal are indifferent. The illocutionary goal is to report to Jane that there is no serious problem happening outside and the loud noise is nothing. So between illocutionary goal support social goal. Thor is reporting that everything is fine with the aim of Jane not feeling worried, he gives required information. Leech (1983) explained that collaborative reason aims to foster understanding between participants.

Datum 20

Korg : Did you ever have a special someone?
Valkyrie : I've had so many special someones. But I don't know...I don't know if I want that again.
Korg : Is that because you lost your girlfriend in battle and never forgave yourself?

Minutes: 01:10:18

The conversation that Korg and Valkyrie had, they shared their life or love story and discussed Thor and Jane's relationship. In the ship they boarded that would take them to the shadow realm, the atmosphere was sad because they discussed Valkyrie's dead love.

In term, Valkyrie has flouted the maxim of quantity by adding more information than what was asked by Korg, Korg only asked if she ever had a special person or not but Valkyrie answered too much information by adding her opinion about her uncertainty about having another special person in her life which Valkyrie should not contribute more than what was asked. Reason flouting maxim is collaborative reason where illocutionary indifferent to social. Where asserting that she used to have a special person in the past and has lost the person she loves so that she is not sure whether to invite him again or not to be a special person.

Datum 21

Jane : Storm breaker just needs a conduit. Anything that can handle space travel.
Thor : I love it when she talks shop.

Minutes: 00:45:20

Jane and Thor where they planed what kind of weapons they will use and can fit for the four of them to go to the shadow realm. This dialogue is flouting the maxim of relation where Jane gives her opinion about storm breaker “Storm breaker just needs a conduit” but Thor instead responds Jane`s opinion, in fact he giving his opinion about Jane's way of speaking that he likes. Reason characters used flouting the maxim of relation, which is collaborative reason. Illocutionary goal expresses his liking for what Jane is talking about and his indifferent social goal respects Jane's opinions and accepts everyone's opinions.

d. Conflictive Reason

It provides a reason if a conversation's illocutionary motive contradicts with its social goal (Leech, 1983: 104). Threatening, accusing, cursing, reprimanding, and other behaviors are examples. Conflictive reason in Thor love and Thunder movie there are 9 times to be the last reason the fourth total use. It illocutionary goals conflict with social goals, where there are conditions between personal goals conflict with social goals. Here are some examples of conflicting reasons;

Datum 22

Thor	: Does anyone here have battle experience?
Kids	: Battle experience?
Thor	: Well, no time to learn like the present.
Kids	: We're not strong like you. We're just kids.
Thor	: Hey, don't forget you're Asgardian kids.

Minutes: 01:30:50

Thor was in the shadow realm to fight the god of butcher because Thor was alone in that place so he asked for help from the children to help him fight Gorr's army. therefore he told the children to join the battle even though they never had previous experience but as Asgardians who are known to be strong they should be able to fight this. in fact the children who were kidnapped were not only from Asgard. The conversation is indicated Thor is flouting the maxim of qualitative saying that all the children there are great Asgardians in battle but regarding Thor's statement it is untruth and lack of evidence because in fact the kidnapped children are not only Asgardian children but there is a Lyman kid, a Midassian kid and Falligarian. Thor flouts the maxim of quantity: conflictive reason, illocutionary goals conflict with social goals. The Illocutionary goal is to remind the Asgardian children that they are strong children and the social goal is that they are only children who are not trained in battle and are not as strong as Thor.

Datum 23

Thor : Hey. Is that the Necrosword? That's cool. I've only ever read about it in stories.
Gorr : Then you know this is going to hurt. Pain.
Thor : What is pain but a construct invented by the weak? Okay, that's very sharp!

Minutes: 00:35:58

The conversation above happened when Thor and Gorr were in battle, Gorr attacked by choking Thor and pointing Necrosword in front of Thor. At that time Gorr wanted to kill Thor because Thor was one of the gods. Gorr did so because he wanted to kill all the gods. It showed that Gorr was flouting maxim of quantity by not giving an informative answer like what Thor wanted. Thor talked about necrosword but Gorr gave too much information that when Necrosword hurt Thor, Thor would feel very painful, Gorr emphasized the word "pain" in the conversation above. For the reason of flouting maxim Thor seems polite by praising Thor's sword but it can endanger many people, especially the gods, therefore it includes a conflictive reason where illocutionary goals and social conflict. Illocutionary goal is so that Gorr can kill Thor with his sword while social goal is Thor's strength is very strong so it is very difficult to defeat Thor.

Datum 24

Gorr : We really have to stop meeting like this. Call the axe.
Thor : I'll call the axe when you call the dentist.
Gorr : Call the axe.
Thor : Tell me where the children are or I'm gonna kill you.
Gorr : Call the axe.

Minutes: 01:17:00

In this dialogue has occurred between Thor and Korg, where Valkyrie, Thor and Jane have arrived at a place that has no color, they think it is where the kidnapped children are. But in fact the place was a trap from Gorr so that he could meet Thor and take Thor's axe to open eternity. moreover, Gorr is flouting the maxim of relation, where the response from Gorr is irrelevant to what Thor stated, Thor asked to tell where he kept the children he kidnapped but Gorr instead told Thor to call the axe. So it is said that they are flouting maxim of relation. So it is said that they are flouting maxim of relation. in addition to the reason for characters flouting the maxim that was conflictive reason where social goal conflicts with illocutionary act. Social goal is that it is not easy to defeat Gorr because they are bound and illocutionary is that they want to know where the children are and want to destroy Gorr. Therefore, Thor is threatening Gorr.

This research was consistent with Tasyarasita&Wibowo's (2022) findings that reasons for flouting maxims, they found competitive reason was the most prevalent reason for flouting maxims, but there is no convivial reason detected in the utterances in the movie. Yet, throughout the research, collaborative reason became the most frequently mentioned reason, and all types of reasons for character flouting the maxim were discovered. It discovered that the functions are the purposes of saying anything with planned significance in order to appear attentive in front of others. It happened because collaborative reason is employed to represent the speaker's concealed goal.

The novelty of this research is that in addition to finding all types and reasons characters for flouting maxim, so flouting maxim not only occurs in everyday life, talk shows, novels but also occurs in movies. In the movie Thor and Thunder movie produced by Marvel Studio, it turns out that in the transcript of the Superhero-themed movie there is a flouting maxim that appears in a conversation, where in conducting research it is deeply linked between events or situational contexts that are depicted so that it can be described in depth about the reasons for character for flouting maxim because there are certain utterances that contain implicit meaning and in the presentation of data. In this regard, the flouting maxim performed by the characters creates a sense of curiosity about what is meant to be said so that it follows the storyline from the beginning to the end of the story in the movie.

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSIONS AND SUGGESTIONS

A. CONCLUSIONS

Based on the data finding and discussion, the researchers found all types flouted by the characters in Thor love and Thunder movie with a total of 56 data categorized into four types of flouting maxims there are, 13 utterances for flouting maxim of quality, 17 utterances for flouting maxim of quantity, 12 utterances for flouting maxim of relation and 14 utterances for flouting maxim of manner. Thus, the flouting maxim of quantity becomes the most type of flouting maxims performed by characters in which they intend to make the interlocutor understand clearly by giving more or less information.

The researchers found all the reasons for flouting the first maxim, there are 17 utterances for competitive reason, 10 utterances for convivial reason, 20 utterances for collaborative reason and 9 utterances for conflictive reason. Based on this, collaborative reason becomes the most widely used because the illocutionary goal is similar to the social goal and the rarely used reason is conflictive reason where the illocutionary goal conflicts with the social goal as described in chapter IV.

B. SUGGESTIONS

Based on the conclusion of the result of the research, the researcher proposes some suggestions for readers, students and further researchers.

1. The readers

Readers are more aware of the conversations around that occur as a form of social life phenomenon related to flouting maxims can be found, with the existence of this study can add or be sensitive to the conversations encountered and know the implied meaning uttered in conducting a conversation both daily conversation and in a literary work.

2. Students and further researchers

Students of English and Literature Department or researchers who focus on researching about linguistic, researchers suggest to study or research more deeply about flouting maxims because this phenomenon is carried out in everyday life. Further researchers can conduct research with different objects and different objectives in addition to examining reasons can also examine functions and strategies.
