ABSTRACT

Muh. Sabir. (thesis) An Analysis of Idiomatic Expressions in Sidney Sheldon's "Are You Afraid of the Dark Novel. (Under guided by Mardan and Abd. Muin)

This thesis is a research about the analysis of idiomatic expressions in the novel Are You Afraid of the Dark by Sidney Sheldon. The objectives of this research are (1) to find out the number of idiomatic expressions used by the author, (2) to find out the meaning of idiomatic expression that are used by the author in the novel Are You Afraid of the Dark. The method used in this research is descriptive method. In collecting data, the writer used note taking as his instrument, then the writer classified the data using David Peaty's theory and explain the meaning based on the context.

In this research, the writer found that there are 7 types of idiomatic expression used in the novel Are You Afraid of the Dark, they are: phrasal verb, phrasal prepositional phrase, prepositional phrase, idiom with verb as keyword, idiom with noun as keyword, idiom with adjective as keyword and idiomatic pair. In addition, in interpreting the meaning of idiom, we have to refer to the context.

This implication of this research is to give more description to the readers, especially the student of English Literature Department about idiomatic expressions in their meaning in novel, especially in the novel Are You Afraid of the Dark by Sidney Sheldon.

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

A. Background

It is known that English is an international means of communication. It is used to communicate with each other by people from different countries all over the world. English is used as a formal communication tool in all international meeting. The most speakers in doing their business use English, for example international trade, computer, book of science, technology and so on.

In learning English, learners learn how to know the meaning of every single word. They usually look up the dictionary to find the meaning of the words. In English, there are words that cannot be found in the dictionary. There are phrases or sentences that cannot be explained by grammar theories. This special feature of English language is called Idiom.

To master English, The learners have to know the element that build it up, such as grammar, vocabulary, and also the culture of people who speak English. By mastering English, people easily express their ideas and thought in written or oral ways in that language.

The idiom in language regarded as a connotative manner to explain the general thing. The usage of idiom in speech may increase the sense or strength of words than the ordinary formal words. In linguistics, the idiom is often considered as a language style which sometimes contradicts with the principles of grammar, and this contradiction makes idiom unique.

Keraf (1986:109) explains that to find out the meaning of idiom, it must be learned as the native speaker manner. It means the cultural aspect of idioms have to be learned first. It will be impossible to look the meaning by the words contained in idiom.

Kamuda (2008:1) states that the difficulties in translating idioms arise from two different characteristics of language. The first is that language is constantly evolving, and that new terms and phrases are frequently incorporated into language to describe new ideas. This is especially true for technical fields, where advancements in technology necessitate new terminology and language. Secondly, the meaning of many idioms often does not correspond to that idiom's individual components. For example, the idiomatic meaning of "can of worms" bears little resemblance to a literal can of worms. This presents unique problems for translation software that may operate on a word-to-word basis, as literal translations of the component words often produce inaccurate or unintelligible target-language text.

In some senses, idioms are the reflection of the environment, life, and historical culture of the native speakers and are closely associated with their inner most spirit and feelings. They are commonly used in all types of language, informal and formal, spoken and written.

From the background above, the researcher would like to observe idiomatic expressions that occur in novel Are You Afraid of the Dark by Sidney Sheldon. Moreover, idioms are accepted as part of daily speech, we can find it in writing, reading, listening, and speaking. By knowing the idioms we can freely express our thought, idea, and feeling in English.

B. Problem Statement

Based on the background above, the writer proposed the following research questions:

1. What kinds of idiomatic expressions does the author use in the novel?
2. What is the meaning of idiomatic expressions used by the author in the novel Are You Afraid of the Dark?

C. Objective of Research

The objectives of the research are:

1. To find out the kinds of idiomatic expressions are used by the author.
2. To find out the meaning of idioms that are used in Are You Afraid of the Dark's novel.

D. Significant of Research

This research is expected to inform the students, especially foreign language students that learning English can be done by read a novel or other fun activities. This research is also expected to give advantages for English novel's reader to understand the idioms that may occur in a novel, not only in novel Are You Afraid of the Dark.

Besides, this research can also be used in English class, especially in relation to the teaching of idioms.

For other writers that who are interested in analyzing idioms, this research can be a reference.

E. Scope of Research

The analysis of this research is limited on the idioms which are in form of phrases in the novel Are You Afraid of the Dark by Sidney Sheldon.

CHAPTER II

REVIEW OF RELATED LITERATURE

A. Previous Finding

Sentong (2007) in his thesis “English Idiomatic Expressions in Their Indonesian Translation in Novel Kidnapped by Robert Stevenson”. He analyzed the kinds of idioms in Kidnapped and found that idiom as expression which has meaning different from individual of its part or component. These can be solved by finding an equivalent idiomatic in Indonesian translation. And kinds of idiom that used very much in the novel Kidnapped were phrasal verb without object (run away, look up, wake up, call up, pull over, put away, run down, watch out, light up, pick up, come up), separable phrasal verb (take off, turn out, carry over, look out), inseparable phrasal verb ( set off, look after, took turn, turn round, come forward, come from, sit down, look for).

Fadhilah (2006) in his thesis “A Study on Idioms with Magical Terminology in Harry Potter and Goblet of Fire”. His study focused to analyze the comparison between real idioms and idioms with magical terminology in the novel Harry potter and The Goblet of Fire. He described the function of the idioms with magical terminology was building the story. He found that the idioms with magical terminology have functions to bring the reader to believe that the world of magic does exist as they even has own language and culture.

The similarity of this research with the previous finding is our research talking about idiom. But different from Sentong who analyzed idiom in their Indonesian translation and Fadhilah who compared real idiom with idiom with magical terminology, this research will explain kinds of idiom and explain the meaning according to the context and story in the novel Are You Afraid of the Dark.

B. Semantic

Semantics is the study of word meaning and sentence meaning, abstracted away from context of use, is a descriptive object. It is an attempt to describe and understand the nature of knowledge about meaning in their language that people have from knowing the language (Griffiths, 2006:15).

According to Hurford and Hasley (1983:1), semantics is the study of meaning in language. Language is a means of communication, and people use the language to communicate with others by making conversations, giving information, and other things to make social relationship. Kambartel (2001:7) states that semantic is assumptions that consist of language structure by showing the meaning if connected with object in human experience.

Jackson (1988:49) states that human being have been given the capacity to talk, to communicate with each others, to make meaningful utterances, so that they are understood by other human beings.

Verhaar (2007:7) explains that semantics is the study theory of meaning. Actually as empirical before someone speaks or hears the other, mental process occur both of them. Mental process like arrange semantic code to listener, grammatical code, and phonologies code to the speaker, and searching process phonology code, grammatical and semantic code to the listener.

Actually it is difficult to give limitation about the meaning. Every linguist gives limitation that appropriate with science sector that is skill. It is not surprising because that have meaning belong to language user because it is dynamic characteristic that sometimes widen a word meaning when communicating so word meaning can exchange (Stevenson, 2001:83).

Based on the explanation above, the writer can conclude that semantic is study about meaning. So in this research, the writer will analyze about meaning of idiomatic expression in the novel Are You Afraid of the Dark.

C. Phrase

1. Definition of Phrase

Phrases tend to be larger than individual words and are usually considered as expansion of individual words. Phrases are smaller than clauses or sentences as they do not have subjects and predicates or subjects and verbs (Bosworth: 2000).

According to Andrew (1988: 85), phrases is a sequence of two or more words, phrases is used to mean simply “a set of element which form of constituent”, with no restriction on the number of elements that the set may or must contain.

Podis (1988: 560) claims that phrase is a group of words mean referring to more than a single word, and even unlimited. Unlimited number of word here is refer to the complex phrase or the consisting of many words inside.

A phrase is to be understood as a type of construction a head element optionally accompanied by one or more dependents. Because the dependents are very often optional, the head may stand alone. The head based concept of phrase, unlike the traditional one, thus allows for a phrase to consist of a single word. (Huddleston, 1988:26).

Jackson (1985:26) states that the very intervening unit between words and sentences are usually called phrase and clause. Phrase is equivalent to the “word groupings” and clauses to the “larger units”. So, words pattern into the phrases, phrases into clauses, and clauses into sentences. Or from the alternative perspective, a sentence is composed of one or more clauses, a clause is composed of one or more phrases, and a phrase is composed of one or more words.

Based on the definition above, the writer can conclude that phrase is a group of word that has no subject and predicate but it has meaning.

2. Kinds of Phrase

Jackson (1985:66) lists five type of phrase in English such us: Verb phrase, Noun phrase, Adjective phrase, Adverb phrase, Prepositional phrase. Each has its own features.

a) Noun Phrase

According to Biber (2002:38), Noun phrase is a phrase with a noun as its head. The head can be preceded by determiners, such as the, a, her and can be accompanied by modifiers. The central part of the noun phrase “the head” is obligatory. It is the minimal requirement for the occurrence of a noun phrase. The other parts are optionally occurring. The head may be preceded by some pre modification and it may be followed by some post modification. For example in the noun phrase that old car in the drive. Car constitutes the head. It is the primary references of the phrase. That old is pre modification and in the drive is post modification.

b) Verb phrase

In a verb phrase, we can find head and modification as its constructions elements. Jackson (1985:72) claims that a verb phrase contain one lexical verb as head and may have up to four auxiliary verb, beside the negative words not as modifier. The lexical verb is always the last element in the verb phrase.

The simple phrase can speak consist merely of the head speak and one auxiliary can without any modifier. The lexical verb which is the head is placed as the last element in the phrase.

For the longer phrase, may not have been being caught. The head is realized the lexical verb caught, and four auxiliary verbs may, have, been, being. The modifiers do not exist in the phrase which functions to modify the lexical verb.

c) Adjective phrase

According to Rodney (1988:110), an adjective phrase consists of an adjective as head, alone or accompanied by one or more dependents. Like noun phrase and verb phrase, in adjective phrase head and its modification can be found as well. As the name suggest, an adjective phrase consists of adjective as the head and modification which is divided into pre and post modification. The example of adjective phrase is very terrible, dark brown.

d) Adverb phrase

The head in adverb phrase is realized by pre modification are realized by an adverb. In an adverb phrase and modification is only possible by the pre modification. The pre modification era realized by either adverbs or intensifiers; though, the very common one is intensifier.

Jackson (1985:79) lists horribly fast, incredibly gracefully, as the example of the adverb phrase. The head of the phrase are respectively fast and gracefully while horribly and incredibly are also adverbs acting as pre modification.

e) Prepositional phase

The prepositional phrase is different in that there is no head word. Jackson (1985: 66) states that a prepositional phrase is always composed of two elements, a preposition and a noun, or rather a noun phrase, example at night, in the jungle.

The prepositional phrase is unlike any of the others type of phrase; they do not have a head and thus also do not have a minimal form consisting of just one word.

Biber (2002:38) states that prepositional phrase mostly consist of a preposition followed by a noun phrase, known as the prepositional complement. The preposition can be thought of as a link relating to the noun phrase to preceding structures.

D. Definition of Idiom

Idiom, as one of the language components is defined as an expression having a certain meaning. It consists of at least two words. This combination of words called as an idiom cannot be understood based on the words in isolation. (Fromkin, 1974:235) for instance, an idiom give up means stop, although it consist of give and up, each of which has its own lexical meaning.

Langlotz (2006:5) states that an idiom is an institutionalized construction that is composed of two or more lexical items and has the composite structure of a phrase or semi-clause, which may features constructional idiosyncrasy. An idiom primarily has an ideational discourse function and features figuration, i.e., its semantic structure is derivationally non-compositional. Moreover, it is considerably fixed and collocation-ally restricted.

According to Langacker (1973:83), most idioms are easily recognized as frozen standardized metaphor, but some idioms result not from metaphor but from ellipses. Then he defines an idiom as a phrase whose meaning cannot be predicted from the individual meanings of the morphemes it comprises.

Furthermore, Manser (1987:2) states that an idiom is phrase which cannot be understood by putting together the meaning of the words in it.

Cyssco (2000: i) defines idiom is an expression, consist of words, but the meaning cannot be defined from the words that perform it. Idiom can also be defined as an expression whose meaning cannot be inferred from the meanings of the words those make it up.

Swan (1995:243) proposes an expression like turn up (meaning 'arrive'), break even (meaning 'make neither a profit nor a loss'), or a can of worms (meaning 'a complicated problems') can be difficult to understand, because its meaning is different from the meaning of the separate words in expression. Expression like this called idiom. Idioms are usually special to one language and cannot be translate word for word.

According to Michael (1987:518), an idiom is fixed group of words with a special meaning which is different from the meaning of individual words. Then Langacker (1973:83) states that most idioms are easily recognized as frozen or standardized metaphor, but some idioms result not from metaphor but from ellipsis. Then he defines an idiom as a phrase whose meaning cannot be predicted from the individual meaning of the morpheme it comprises.

Biber, et al (2002:18) state that an idiom is like many compounds, is a multi-word unit with a meaning that cannot be predicted from the meaning of its constituent words. A typical example is a verb expression like fall in love or make up (one's) mind. However, the boundary between idioms and freely chosen combination is not always clear.

Based on the definitions above, the writer concludes that Idiom is a language expression, it is formed by word and the meaning cannot be interpreted by word per word

E. Kinds of idiom

In this writing, the writer limits the discussion on idiom as a phrase, so the writer tries to find some theories of idiom as a phrase.

Biber, Conrad and Leech (2002:18) define that the boundary between idiom and freely chosen combination is not always clear. Then leech (2001:205) states that phrasal verb and phrasal prepositional verb are the important classes of idiom.

1. Phrasal Verb

Cowie and Mackin (1978:9) state phrasal verb idiom means the idiom which contain a verb with a preposition or a participle. Leech (2001: 392) mentioned “a phrasal verb consist of VERB + ADVERB, The two words of an idiom. It is called a phrasal verb only if the adverb changes the meaning of the verb”. The examples of phrasal verb as idiom are:

- a. Broke down means stopped working
- b. Grow up means becoming adult

- c. Look out means a warning

Most of the adverbs of phrasal verbs are related to prepositions, so they are known as Prepositional Adverb. The example of prepositional adverb which from phrasal verbs are: about, around, on, up, in, over and others.

2. Phrasal Prepositional Verb

The next class of idiom is Phrasal Prepositional Verb. Phrasal Prepositional verb is partly of Phrasal Verbs and Prepositional Verbs. Like Phrasal Verbs, they have a preposition following the verb. The form of Phrasal Prepositional Verb is VERB + ADVERB + PREPOSITION. Example:

- a. Looking up to means respect
- b. Looking forward to means waiting in an excitement

Leech (2001:391) states that the purpose of the adverb is to change the meaning of the verb and the purpose of the preposition is to link the noun phrase to the verb

3. Prepositional Phrase

Leech (2001:413) states prepositional phrase is a group of words composed of a preposition and the word(s), which follow(s) it (normally a noun phrase). Forms of the preposition phrase are:

- a. Preposition + Noun Phrase
- b. Preposition + Pronoun

- c. Preposition + -Ing Clause
- d. Preposition + Wh Clause
- e. Preposition + Adverb

The examples of prepositional phrase are:

- 1) In a nutshell Means In a few words
- 2) With a view to means with the intention of doing something

Peaty (1983:15) states Preposition noun combinations is the idiom where only the preposition is used idiomatically. The meaning of this idiom is clear of the context and most important thing is to remember the correct proposition. For example:

- a) On time means punctually
- b) On board (ship, plane) means aboard, on the job
- c) By chance means unexpected

4. Idiom with verb as keyword

For example:

- a. Come in handy means prove to be useful
- b. Fight shy of means avoid
- c. Leave no stone unturned means use every possible means

Peaty (1983:15) states that the verb “take” and “make” are used idiomatically with many different objects. Verb “take” has possibility followed by a:

a bath, a seat, a bus, take a holiday, take a risk. Verb make has possibility followed by: an effort, an error, a loss, a mistake, a noise, a plan, a living, a promise.

5. Idiom with noun as keywords

Leech (2001:415) gives examples of idiom with nouns as keywords.

- a. Child's play means something easy to do
- b. A blessing disguise means something that turns out to be fortunate and advantageous after seeming to be the opposite first

According to Seidl (1987:41), there are several nouns which are idiomatically used describing a collection of certain things and it is called Collective noun. For example:

- a. A brood of chicken means think about the problem
- b. A bunch of flowers means a collection of things.

6. Idiom with adjective as keywords

Peaty (1983:15) states that the important point about the idiom is not the grammatical function of the individual words that make up each idiom but the grammatical function of complete idioms for making clear. For examples:

- a. Right now means at present
- b. Tale story means unbelievable
- c. Blind date means can arrange meeting between two people who had never met before

d. Sweeping statement means a wide generalization

7. Idiomatic pair

Peaty (1983:15) states that there also idiom that are called pair idiom. The word are completed each other for making new meaning. For example:

- a. Sooner and later means eventually
- b. More and less means approximately
- c. From time to time means occasionally
- d. Here and there means various places.

Seild (1978:41) divides idiomatic pair into two types, they are:

a. Pair of adjective

This idiom contain two adjectives joined together by the world “and”, “but”, “or”. Example:

- 1) Black and blue
- 2) Good, bad or indifferent
- 3) Slow but sure

b. Pair of noun

- 1) Alfa and omega
- 2) Flesh and blood

F. Definition of Novel

Novel is in its broadest sense to designate any extended fictional narrative almost always in prose. In practice, however, its usage is customarily restricted to narrative in which the representation of character occurs either in a static condition or in the process of development as the result of even or action. (Harmond and Hugh, 1996:52)

In the other words, novel is a fictional prose narrative considerable length typically having a plot what unfolded by action, speech and thought of the characters. Novel is long work of a fiction with continuous story and many characters and incidents (Suzanne, 1990:309).

According to Rene (1956:216), the word novel is derived from latin “novellas” or something new. Novel is a fictions prose narrative of considerable length, portraying, character, actions and scene representative of real life in a plot or more less intricacy. Novel is a picture of real life and manner.

Grill (1985:77) states that novel is a word specially made in words by author. The novel exists in the way it does because the author has chosen to put in that particular way.

According to Dale (1986:58), a novel is long piece of prose which tells a story; introduce the character which involved in some events/conflicts with systematically scene.

Novel is a form of literary work, which tells about life, especially human life. Clara Reeve as quoted by Rene Wellek and Austen Warren defines: the novel is a picture of real life and manners, and of the time in which it is written. The romance, in lofty and elevated language described what never happened nor is likely to happen (Rene and Austen, 1987:282).

According to Charles (2000: 56), novel is a form of social creation, it is a work of art which represents life, and the life is in the large measure a social reality. The natural world and the inner or subjective world of the individual have also been the objects of literature imitation. Therefore, it contains illustration about human life; it narrates a story human life experiences as that we may see in real world; it reproduces and recreates life through words as the medium and uses human experience as the materials. Thus, if we try to evaluate the interpretation of literature, we must find out that the subject matter of literature is the manifold experience of living people.

Based on the explanation above the writer can conclude that novel is a book of long narrative in literary prose.

G. Synopsis of Novel

In Berlin, a woman vanishes from the city streets. In Paris, a man plunges from the Eiffel Tower. In Denver, a small plane crashes into the mountains. In Manhattan, a body washes ashore along the East River. There is no clue about their murder expect one small thing, all of them work at same company namely KIG (Kingsley International Group), the largest think tank in the world. KIG is led by two brothers, they are Andrew and Tanner, and their characters are very different. Andrew is an older brother who possessed a good heart and helpful, while Tanner is a younger brother who is obsessed with wealth, there are only money in his head.

H. Autobiography of Sidney Sheldon

Sidney Sheldon was born on 11th February 1917, in Chicago, USA. After spending six months at Northwestern University during the Depression era, Sheldon dropped out to support his family, making money as a radio joke-writer and a movie house usher, before moving to Hollywood to become a writer, eventually landing a $17 a week job as a script editor, in 1937.

Having spent a year on active service in the US Airforce (1941), Sheldon began writing 'B' movies with collaborator, Ben Roberts. His first screen-writing credit came in 1941, with the film 'Mr. District Attorney' and the 'Carter Case', although it was in scripting musicals that he found his first measure of success.

In 1948, Sheldon won an Academy Award for his script to the Cary Grant vehicle, 'The Bachelor and Bobby Soxer', as well as a Screen Writers' Guild Award for Best Musical, for 'Easter Parade', starring Fred Astaire and Judy Garland. In 1953, he made his directorial debut with 'Dream Wife'. However, his efforts as a director and producer rarely matched his accomplishments as a scriptwriter, and later as a novelist.

In 1959, he won a Tony Award for the Best Musical with 'Redhead', as well as becoming an extraordinarily prolific scriptwriter for such shows as 'I Dream of Jeannie' and 'Patty Duke'. Sheldon's first novel, 'The Naked Face', was described by the New York Times as "the best first mystery of the year", and was the first in a seemingly endless production of bestsellers, including 'The Other Side of Midnight' (1974) and 'The Best Laid Plans'(1997).

Sheldon died from complications relating to pneumonia in 2007, leaving a wife, Alexandra Kostoff, and a daughter, Mary. His publishers, William Morris, estimate that there are some 275 million copies of his books in circulation across the globe.

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

A. CONCLUSIONS

After analyzing the data taken from the novel “Are You Afraid of the Dark”, the writer made some conclusion as follows:

1. The writer found 7 types of idiom in the novel Are You Afraid of the Dark and the idioms that are mostly occurred is phrasal verb which 250 idioms, phrasal prepositional verb which 19 idioms, prepositional verb which 12 idioms, idiom with verb as keyword which 9 idioms, idiom with noun as keyword which 3 idioms, idiom with adjective which 8 idioms and idiomatic pair which 5 idioms.
2. Idioms which were found have no exact grammatical structure. Especially for the forth until six form of idioms: idiom with verbs as keyword, idiom with noun as keyword and idiom as adjective as keyword. The keyword and words which form the idiom have differences in grammatical structure for each idiom. The writer determined the keyword based on which word that mostly influences the whole phrase and the meaning of its.
3. On the dictionary, idioms have many meaning. But each idiom has meaning depends on its context and story. Although there are some idioms which have the same form, but they have different meaning according to the context. For example idiom “take off” in this novel. At page 134 take off means to remove or discard, but the idiom take off at page 305 means to leave the ground and fly.

B. SUGGESTIONS

1. The writer realizes that this writing is far from perfection. Therefore, the writer hopes it can be useful to reader especially to know about idiom.
2. In learning idioms, the learners should notice to use feeling and pay attention on the context where the idiom is occurred because one idiom could have many meaning in the dictionary.
3. For the next researchers, the writer suggests to analyze and classify the idiom in form of clauses and sentences in order to know more about idiomatic expressions.
